W. W. ASTOR GIVES UP STRUGGLE FOR TITLE

Transferred His Ambitions to Son and Now They Are Reported to be Estranged.

GIBED BY DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Proposed Sale of Observer and Pall Mall Gazette Result of Family Quarrel.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—Behind the announcement cabled to THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning of William Waldorf Astor's intention to sell The Observer and The Pall Mall Gazette lies an extraordinary story of a family quarrel, which may affect the eventual disposition of his immense fortune—in other words, may bring about the disinheritance of Waldorf, the eldest son, by his father, William Waldorf Astor.

The trouble originated in a chance remark by Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who was Mrs. Nanny Langhorne Shaw before her second marriage in 1906. Young Mrs. Astor is celebrated for her wit, which often carries a barbed shaft. One of these shafts is rankling in the breast of her father-in-law.

Exactly what it was that Mrs. Astor said THE TIMES correspondent is unable to ascertain, but on excellent authority it is stated that it referred to her father-in-law's control of his "money bags." It so happened that William Waldorf overheard the stinging phrase, and the outcome is a complete breach between father and son, the latter taking his wife's side in the domestic quarrel that followed.

The proposed sale of The Observer and The Pall Mall was the first move in the open war which is now declared between father and son. The original purchase of these two papers was designed in one case to advance the son's political ambitions and in the other to realize the father's dream of founding a family which should rank among the titled nobility. Both objects have been sought in recent years.

Had Heart Set on Dukedom.

Ever since William Waldorf used The Pall Mall Magazine, which he bought for the purpose to give publicity to his belief that the first Astor millionaire was a direct descendant of a Spanish grandee who migrated to Holland, his greatest desire in life had been to see the name of Astor emblazoned in the Almanach de Gotha. The acquisition of a title became almost a monomania.

Some titles can be obtained cheaply. William Waldorf could buy half a dozen Continental titles with an expenditure of money that would hardly be missed from his annual income. It was, however, an English title on which he had set his mind.

In those days, as Cecil Chesterton said the other day, the traffic in "honors" was a regular business, and one had only to pay to the political party in power an amount graduated according to fixed scale in order to obtain a barony, a baronetcy, or a knighthood.

It might have seemed easy for Mr. Astor to realize his ambition, but he looked higher than a barony or even an earldom. He wanted a dukedom. He relinquished his American citizenship and became a British subject as the first step. Unfortunately, he had not the gift of making friends, and even had the habit of making enemies.

The incident in which he refused to admit Sir Berkeley Sheffield to his house is a matter of history. Sir Berkeley was a friend of King Edward, and the monarch, who was naturally in a position to know how Mr. Astor was "pulling wires" to obtain a title, said emphatically that he would be dashed before he would sign any honor list, no matter what Ministry presented it, on which the name of Mr. Astor appeared.

This completely ended William Waldorf's ambitions for a title during King Edward's reign. He was considerably out of pocket also owing to his contributions to the Unionist Party chest.

Ambitious Turned to Son.

There came a time when Mr. Astor concluded that his desire to see himself enrolled among the Dukes must be abandoned. His ambitions then centred on his son Waldorf. The latter's marriage to an American had been a severe blow to his father, who would have preferred an English woman of title as his daughter-in-law. But Waldorf elected to follow a political career, and as young politicians with money are welcome in either of the English parties, Waldorf was soon provided with a seat in Parliament.

In 1911, he was returned for Plymouth after a sedulous canvass of the constituency in which his father spent money like water. A seat in the House of Commons among the Unionist minority is, of course, only a stepping stone to a seat in the House of Lords, which young Waldorf was certain to obtain once the Tories returned to power, particularly if during the period of opposition the young member's services to the party and his personal prestige provided any justification for the bestowal of such an honor.

To further his son's chances in this direction William Waldorf bought

PRESIDENT'S ADVICE WINS.

Chicagoan to Increase His Force After Visit to the White House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The White House today gave out a letter received by the President from one of the delegation of the Chicago Association of Commerce which discussed the pending trust legislation with the President last week. The writer, whose name was withheld, said the conference with the President had made him hopeful of a betterment of business conditions—so hopeful, in fact, that he had given instructions to increase operations at his plants. The letter follows:

July 10, 1914.

My Dear Mr. President:

As a manufacturer I have watched with increasing anxiety reductions in our working force and dreaded the results I feared would follow passage of the anti-trust bills as they came from the House.

I cannot express to you my relief after and gratification over our meeting with you Wednesday. I am sincerely thankful to have been chosen as one of the members of the committee, and personally thank you for your kindly, considerate hearing. I have returned much more hopeful of an early return to better business conditions, and my first duty has been to give instructions to immediately increase operation at one of our plants from 75 to fully 100 per cent. capacity, and to prepare the other works for maximum operation just as quickly as improved conditions permit.

Monday next the men commence to benefit from these instructions, and you may be assured of heartiest cooperation in every way that will hasten the return of prosperity to all our people.

With renewed expressions of appreciation of your kind reception, and my regard, believe me, Faithfully yours,

The Honorable, the President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

President Wilson is convinced that his talks with business men have gone far toward showing the country that he is the friend of honest business, and he has arranged for further conferences. He has invited S. R. Berton, head of a New York banking house, to call at the White House on Wednesday. He may discuss the nomination of Paul M. Warburg for the Reserve Board with Mr. Burton.

SUMMER DIET OF KAISER.

He Lives on Sea Fish, Strawberries and Cherries, He Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 13.—The Kaiser's recipe for a sensible Summer diet is published by the Hamburg Fisch-Zeitung.

During a recent visit to Hamburg the Kaiser inspected the fish restaurant in connection with a gardening exhibition. To the Chief Burgomaster, Herr Schnackenburg, he said:

"I wish the people of Germany were not so opposed to the eating of sea fish. At this time of the year I live almost entirely on sea fish, strawberries, and cherries."

MADE HIS OWN LINER.

Elderly Cripple Sailed Alone Last Friday—Has Property Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—Nothing has been heard of a West Bay, Bridport, cripple named Holborrow since he began last Friday an attempt to cross the Atlantic in a small sailing boat, which he himself made.

Holborrow, an elderly man, is alone in the adventure. His provisions include forty gallons of water, half a hundredweight of biscuits, jam, &c.

His boat is a crude craft made from old pieces of wood. The only tools used in its construction were a hammer, a saw, and a chisel.

Holborow's desire to reach America is attributed to the fact that he has a good deal of property there.

WILLIAMS GOES TO EPIRUS.

Invited There by Albanian Leader—Another Rebel Victory.

VIENNA, July 13.—A dispatch from Athens to the Neue Freie Presse says that George Fred Williams of Massachusetts, until recently American Minister to Greece and Montenegro, started for Epirus, Albania, today.

His journey was undertaken on the invitation of M. Zografos, the President of the provisional Government of Northern Epirus, established by the Mussulman insurgents, who object to the rulership of Prince William of Wied.

DURAZZO, July 13.—The important Albanian town of Berat, thirty miles northeast of the port of Avlona, was captured today by the Albanian Mussulman insurgents who recently took Koritsa.

E. H. FURMAN ASKS DIVORCE.

Says His Wife Deserted Him Three Years Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 13.—Mrs. Ruth Talbot Furman, daughter of George M. Talbot of Brookline, a wealthy clothier, is being sued for divorce by her husband, Erwin H. Furman, who charges desertion and asks the custody of their child.

Mrs. Furman is said to have left her husband in 1911 and to be living with her parents. She is now with them on Cape Cod.

Furman lives in Brookline in the Winter, but is now at his Summer place at Hingham. He also is reputed wealthy, being a son of G. M. Furman of New York.

The couple were married in Brookline Feb. 26, 1908, before a notable society gathering. They are about 25 years old.

PETITIONS OUT FOR ROOT.

Sullivan County Republicans Want Senator to Serve Again.

A movement has been started among Republicans up-State to have Elihu Root nominated for United States Senator by petition, it became known yesterday. The petition is being circulated in the village of Monticello and throughout Sullivan County and the movement will be extended to several other counties. A large number of enrolling voters, including most of the prominent men in the Republican Party in Sullivan County have signed the petition.

Senator Root has said that he will not be a candidate this year, but those responsible for the movement believe he will change his mind if he can be convinced that there is a State-wide demand for his nomination.

GUNDA BREAKS TUSK IN FIGHT TO BE FREE

Keeper Snared His Unchained Leg with a Rope, Which He Tried to Break.

USED HIS TRUNK AS A CLUB

Rained Blows That Would Have Killed Richards Had They Landed —Now He's "Stretched."

Any one who thinks Gunda enraged is not a dangerous elephant should have been up at the Bronx Zoo yesterday morning to witness the battl ebetween the big tusker and his keepers. In the fight to get him back in chains and under control, so the keepers could enter his cage, he almost succeeded in smashing a keeper's skull with blows of his trunk and tried to run him through with his tusks. No one knew better than he that he was about to be chained again, and thus lose the liberty which he had gained when the bolt slipped out of the chain on his right foreleg last Thursday.

Finally Keeper Richards succeeded in snaring his foreleg with a heavy rope. For a minute Gunda seemed resigned to his fate. Then, in rebellion, he ran his right tusk under the rope and tried to snap it. With a heave of his massive shoulders he lifted on it. The rope strained. As it seemed about to break there was a crack and two feet of his fine ivory tusk splintered off and fell to the floor.

"Of course it's a shame to have his tusks mutilated," said Richards, "regarding the animal as a valuable exhibit. But it makes our work in handling him 50 per cent. safer."

For his bravery and resourcefulness in getting the elephant chained up again Dr. Hornaday, Director of the Zoo, gave the fragment of tusk to Richards as a souvenir. It is solid and weighs fifteen pounds. Thuman, the other keeper, has a corresponding piece of Gunda's other tusk, which he broke off two years ago to the day, when he ran it through the keeper's leg and almost killed him.

Hornaday Cautions Keepers.

For three days Gunda had the run of his cage. One chain on his left hind leg, with plenty of slack, was all that held him. By command of Dr. Hornaday the keepers were forbidden to enter his cage to clean it out. It was apparent to the thousands who visited the Zoo on Sunday that Gunda was in a highly excited condition. Freed of the chain in front, which had kept him from turning around, he had got the links of the back chain badly twisted. By exerting his titanic strength he might have broken this chain at any minute.

The Zoo authorities decided that it was necessary to get two chains on him again with the least possible delay. During the mating season, when elephants such as Gunda are scarcely responsible for their actions, it is not safe for the keepers to go near their charges unless they are rendered practically harmless.

In response to the public demand, which found expression in THE TIMES, the Directors of the Zoo have determined to equip one of the cages with a mechanical door, so that Gunda could pass in and out of the yard reserved for him without the keepers being compelled to enter his cage. But for the present he must be securely chained.

His keepers, William Thuman and Dick Richards, were cautioned by Dr. Hornaday to take every precaution in trying to replace the chain which had fallen off. They mapped out a plan of campaign and prepared to put it into action the first thing yesterday morning, at a time when they could have the elephant house of the Zoo practically to themselves. So at 7 o'clock they were laying out their chains and ropes and had Dick Spicer and Ernest Banks, two other keepers, and Charley Snyder, head keeper of the park, to help them.

Tried to Impale Richards.

They began by teasing Gunda to bring him to the front of the cage. When an elephant goes wild, Richards explained, you know when to keep away from him, because he won't touch the food you offer him. Dainties that lure him at other times pass unnoticed. He is not responsible for his actions, because he kills only out of a blind instinct for destruction.

But Gunda is not quite in that state. He has all his wits about him, and times without number in the past month has reached out his trunk for a chunk of bread and ended by making a vicious swing at the man who was feeding him. Knowing, therefore, that such tactics would not work with Gunda, the keepers began by working him into a rage.

It was not difficult to do. In a few minutes he was charging at them, trying to reach through the bars and impale one of the men with his tusks. After each charge he would toss up his head, missing the alert keepers by inches. When he became blind with rage the men prepared to jump in close to the bars while his head was tossed in the air and slip a hook through the bracelet, the piece of chain that remained around his left foreleg when the main section dropped off last Thursday.

It was ticklish work. Richards handled this first hook attached to a heavy rope. The other men had taken a turn in the rope around three of the heavy three-inch bars of the cage and stood ready to pay out rope or take up slack, as Thuman commanded, when Richards succeeded in planting the hook in Gunda's bracelet.

Four times Richards risked his life darting in under Gunda's tusks after he had made his furious lunge and sweep upward, hoping to toss over the bars into his cage the man who tormented him. At last Gunda in his eagerness planted his right foot close to the curbing of the cage and stood for the fraction of a second jammed against the bars. In that instant Richards jammed the hook against his leg and jerked it down through the chain.

At Thuman's shout the other men pulled the ropes taut. Gunda tried to draw back. But his hind leg was stretched out to give him the full play of the chain's slack. He could not get enough grip on the ground to pull back and break the rope as he had done Saturday morning when the keepers first tried to tether him again.

In his surprise at his predicament, he stood harmless for a moment. Richards was quick to take advantage of his discomfiture and snapped another hook on the bracelet. To this hook was attached another chain, which was passed around two of the bars and fastened securely. Then Gunda made his last desperate effort to release himself.

FAVORITE OF CZAR STABBED BY WOMAN

THE RICHELIEU OF RUSSIA

Prevented War and Caused Changes in Cabinet—Had Extraordinary Influence in Court Circles.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 13.—The notorious monk, Gregory Rasputin, known as the "Richelieu of Russia," has been the victim of a murderous attack in his native Siberian village of Pekrovsky, Province of Tobolsk, where he was paying a short visit to his wife and family.

While Rasputin was talking in the street to a number of persons, a woman rushed forward and struck him with a dagger, inflicting a severe wound in the abdomen, which will probably prove mortal.

The monk was immediately taken to a hospital, where he lies, according to the latest reports, in an unconscious condition and at the point of death.

The woman, who belongs to the peasant class, was arrested. She refused to give her name, but at the police station said:

"I wish to remove from this world that false, infamous prophet who has led so many people astray, and who has falsely instructed the Czar on countless questions."

It is certain that the attack was the result of something more than a woman's hatred. It is significant that Rasputin's birthplace is also the centre of the district where the famous monk, Iliodor, enjoyed the greatest popularity. Iliodor was a colleague of Bishop Theofan, who was the first patron of Rasputin, and introduced the latter into high society in St. Petersburg. When Theofan was exiled from the capital on account of his protests against Rasputin's actions and mode of living, official censure was also visited on Iliodor, and he shared the Bishop's banishment. It is believed, therefore, that the attack is the outcome of a plot hatched by Iliodor's numerous friends in the district, who incited the woman to the deed.

A tremendous sensation was caused in the village and the neighborhood. A large crowd remains before the hospital, and a shrine near by is crowded by praying peasants.

Immediately after the assault the Governor of the village withdrew all passports, so that no one is able to leave the place.

Has a Fine Villa in the Crimea.

Rasputin is the son of a fairly wealthy peasant. As a boy he received little or no education. Until 30 he led an uneventful life. Then he began to exhibit signs of religious fervor and went on a pilgrimage from convent to convent, becoming one of the best-known lay monks in Russia. When Theofan introduced him at St. Petersburg in 1900 Rasputin soon had his own apartments in a religious academy. He seemed to have some hypnotic power, and, though he was imperfectly educated, his gift for repartee in salon conversations enabled him to keep a circle of admirers in the very highest families.

Latterly he had abandoned his simple life for luxury. He dressed elegantly and lived in a large house in the Mayfair of the capital, where his waiting rooms were crowded with all sorts and conditions of persons, from beggar women to society dames, and from Generals to mujiks.

Though Rasputin's mode of life and assumption of authority became a positive scandal, he was held in high favor at Court and had enormous influence over the Empress, and even with the Czar himself. Ministers did his bidding, and even Duma interpellations had no effect.

There was once a great revulsion against Rasputin's dominance in the highest circles, and he was sent away from St. Petersburg. Before going he warned the Empress that something untoward would happen, and when the Czar's heir fell seriously ill the Czarina in dismay recalled this modern Richelieu.

It is asserted that no question of importance is decided by the Czar or his Ministers without Rasputin's counsel. A prominent ex-Minister has said that he alone prevented an Austro-Russian war last year, that he brought about the Ministerial change last March, and that he did it twelve hours after the Emperor had assured the Ministers that he had no intention of changing his advisers.

Son of Well-To-Do Peasants.

DISORDER THERE CONTINUES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Disturbed over the continuance of revolutionary troubles in San Domingo and Haiti, the Administration has decided to send nearly 700 marines to Guantanamo, Cuba, to be ready for any emergency that may make it necessary to send them to either republic.

The Administration has made great efforts to settle San Domingo's internal squabbles, but the fires of revolution have broken out again. The United States is particularly interested in the affairs of the Dominican Republic because of its present capacity as receiver and disburser of Dominican customs and revenue. Haiti also has been a constant source of trouble.

After a conference with Secretary Bryan this afternoon Acting Secretary Roosevelt of the Navy Department issued this statement:

Numerous appeals from time to time having been made for the protection of American lives and property on the island of Haiti, which have been jeopardized by various bands of revolutionists operating both in Haiti and San Domingo, and dispatches from there indicating that this condition will probably continue for some time, it has been decided to place a small force of marines where they will be available in case any emergency should arise which would make it advisable for them to be on hand for the protection of life and property.

The Acting Secretary of the Navy, at the request of the State Department, has accordingly directed that the Hancock, now at Vera Cruz, take on board about 110 officers and men of the Marine Corps, now at Vera Cruz, and about 185 marines, now with the special service squadron in Mexican waters, and proceed with them to Guantanamo; that she land these men and proceed to Hampton Roads, there take on about 400 marines and return with them to Guantanamo. Further, orders have been issued to the Sacramento, now in Mexican waters, to proceed to Port au Prince, Haiti.

This action is taken merely as a precaution, and it is hoped that no conditions will arise that will require the services of this force.

At Guantanamo the force will be only a day's sail from the north coast of Haiti and San Domingo, and their proximity is likely to impress upon the revolutionary leaders the determination of the American Government to terminate their activities unless they listen to the warnings already given.

The navy already has the battleships Connecticut and South Carolina and the cruisers Marietta, Castine, and Machias in the waters about the island containing the two republics.

NAMES KEITH, MURPHY FOE.

President Appoints Anti-Tammany Man Long Island Collector.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Henry F. Keith of Hempstead, L. I., one of the bitterest enemies of Charles F. Murphy within the Democratic Party, was nominated by President Wilson today for the office of Collector of Customs of the First District of New York. This district, with headquarters in Brooklyn, embraces all of Long Island and Staten Island.

Mr. Keith is a member of the New York State Democratic Committee. At nearly every meeting of the committee held in the last three years Mr. Keith has assailed Mr. Murphy. He began the fight in the Democratic ranks against the influence of Tammany Hall and is recognized as one of the leaders of the reform movement in the Democratic ranks. At the convention which nominated William Sulzer for Governor, Mr. Keith denounced Mr. Murphy openly.

The selection of Mr. Keith is attributed mainly to the influence of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the present Assistant Secretary of the Navy. No fight against the confirmation of Mr. Keith's nomination is expected from Senator O'Gorman.

LEAVES GIBBONS $282,055.

Cardinal Will Employ Mrs. Andrews's Bequest in Charities.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, July 13.—Cardinal Gibbons, as Archbishop of Baltimore, will receive $282,055 under the will of Eliza Andrews, a Baltimore woman noted for her philanthropy. The administration account has just been paid by the Orphans' Court.

The value of the entire estate is $721,544.29. Of the amount which will go to the Archbishop of Baltimore, $279,396 is in various securities and $2,659 in cash. Mrs. Andrews made many bequests to Catholic charities and educational institutions.

Among the bequests are: St. Mary's Female Orphan Asylum, $3,000; St. Joseph's Hospital, $3,000; Loyola Jesuit College, $5,000; St. Vincent's Infant Asylum, $3,000; Little Sisters of the Poor of Baltimore, $3,000; St. Elizabeth Home, $1,000; House of Good Shepherd, $1,000; Bishop Denis O'Donnell of Richmond, Va., $1,000. The large bequest to Cardinal Gibbons will be devoted by him to charities of the archdiocese.

PROSECUTION OF NEW HAVEN DIRECTORS IS CALLED FOR BY INTERSTATE BOARD

Condemned Acts of New Haven Board For Which Prosecution Is Urged

The Interstate Commerce Commission in its report of its investigation of the financial transactions of the New Haven Railroad finds:

That the conduct of the road's financial operations presents "one of the most glaring instances of maladministration in all the history of American railroading."

That this maladministration resulted in an absolute loss of $65,871,299.

That the road's Directors were guilty of gross dereliction of duty and of a breach of trust that was "morally wrong and criminal in its fruits."

That the downward movement of Boston & Maine stock did not begin until the Mellen-Morgan-Rockefeller management was forced upon it.

That the alleged purchase by John L. Billard of 109,948 shares of Boston & Maine stock and its resale to the New Haven was a fraudulent transaction; that Billard never bought a share of Boston & Maine stock except with money furnished by the New Haven and never sold a share except as the New Haven dictated; that the Billard Company was used by the New Haven to take over some of its own questionable assets and assets which it was desirous of concealing, and that Billard burned the company's books for the purpose of getting them out of the way.

That the New England Investment and Security Company was a device conceived to carry out the policy of the New Haven to acquire the trolleys of Massachusetts, and that it operated in violation of the Massachusetts laws and in flagrant violation of an injunction issued by the highest court of that State.

That the New England Navigation Company, after sale of its steamship properties, was utilized as a holding company for the accomplishment of irregular transactions, indefensible under any test of sound business management.

That the practice was general of transferring funds from the New Haven back and forth to its 336 subsidiaries for the purpose of declaring dividends.

That the acquisition of the Westchester Road was a profligate waste of corporate funds and that the road was not necessary as a part of the New Haven system.

That the frequency with which dummy corporations and dummy directors appear in the New Haven's records leads to the conclusion that some one high in the councils of the road "had an obsession upon the subject of the utility of such sham methods."

The Commission recommends:

Civil and criminal prosecution of the responsible Directors of the New Haven.

The prosecution of John L. Billard and of all persons who were concerned with him in the purchase of the Boston & Maine stock.

That suit be brought against Marsden J. Perry and Oakleigh Thorne to recover for improper or double commissions paid in connection with the Westchester deal; also for $1,524,072 expended by Charles S. Mellen in obtaining the Westchester franchises and for the $2,748,700 paid to John L. Billard as a result of the Boston & Maine stock transaction.

On the question of immunity the commission defends its action in compelling Charles S. Mellen and other Directors of the New Haven to testify on the ground that it was better to expose wrongdoing even at the expense of giving immunity to a few witnesses than to leave the facts under cover and thereby give immunity to all, not only as to prosecution, but as to the stigma of exposure as well.

'POLITICS,' MELLEN'S COMMENT ON REPORT

Issued for Political Purposes, He Says, and He Is Ready to Defend His Conduct Anywhere.

J. P. MORGAN IS SILENT

Officials and Directors of the New Haven Refuse to Talk—Special Meeting Probable This Week.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., July 13.—Charles S. Mellen, former President of the New Haven Railroad and director of its activities during its era of monopoly seeking expansion, said tonight that the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission made public today was the "report of a political tribunal issued for political purposes."

Mr. Mellen said that every act of the New Haven during the period of the commission's investigation was done with his approval, with two exceptions, and he asserted that he was ready to defend his conduct before any tribunal in the land, including the tribunal of all the people—public opinion.

When a reporter talked with Mr. Mellen over the telephone at his home in Stockbridge the former head of the New Haven had not seen the commission's report. Neither had he received the letter sent by the law firm of Whipple, Sears & Ogden to all the men who were Directors of the New Haven during the Mellen régime, threatening suit against them to compel the restitution of not less than $94,000,000 to the treasury of the corporation for alleged misexpenditures in the acquisition of the Boston & Maine stock, trolley lines, steamship companies, and in the Westchester deal.

A few of the more striking paragraphs in the commission's report were read to Mr. Mellen over the telephone and they provoked a quick response from him. They aroused the former dictator of transportation in New England to his old-time fighting pitch and he sent back acrid epigrams over the wire, mixing flashes of humor with his remarks.

Willing to Answer.

As to the commission's statement that the Directors of the New Haven had been "criminally negligent," Mr. Mellen said the members of the board were a group of highly honorable business men, and that while he would like to know in what connection the commission made its charge and what basis in fact it claimed for the charge, he was willing to make a blanket answer that neither he nor any member of the board was ever guilty of conscious negligence in any matter affecting the New Haven or the public. He said:

"I can only explain this apparently drastic report with its multitude of extreme statements by saying that it is the report of a political tribunal made for political purposes."

The conversation switched to the Whipple suit as the reporter angled to keep Mr. Mellen on the line. Asked if he expected to be sued by Mr. Whipple for alleged waste of the New Haven's funds, he shifted to a different mental attitude. He answered:

"Blessed are those who expect nothing, for that is what they will get."

"Don't you expect to get anything, Mr. Mellen?"

"No, I don't expect to get anything," he answered.

"Well, do you expect to give up anything?" he was asked.

"Oh, I haven't much to give up. I'm not a lawyer, and I don't know what the legal merits of Mr. Whipple's suit are. I know that you can get a good, bright lawyer, or a bright, good lawyer—I don't know that there is any difference—to take any side on any question if his client is financially solvent. I've always been able to get every kind of advice on any subject so long as I was willing to pay for it."

A Shaft for Brandeis.

The reporter suggested that Mr. Whipple was undertaking the suit as a public service.

"Ah," answered Mr. Mellen, the satirical note strong in his voice, "why, where is Mr. Brandeis?"

The reporter told him that Mr. Brandeis was in Washington acting as special counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Well, that makes two of them," he answered, emphasizing the word "two," with a chuckle. "With Mr. Brandeis in Washington and Mr. Whipple in Boston, the public garrison is well defended by legal advisers."

The tone of Mr. Mellen's voice changed perceptibly as he spoke a few earnest sentences in defense of his administration.

"I don't want anybody to get the impression that I am trying to escape responsibility for the acts of the New Haven by shifting it on to the shoulders of Mr. Morgan now that he is in his grave," he said. "Every act of the New Haven of any importance at all, during the period of my control which, I believe, is the period covered by the investigation, was done with my complete knowledge and sanction, with two exceptions. I am prepared to defend every one of these acts before any tribunal in the country. I told the commission that I favored the sale of the steamships, and that I did not sanction the Westchester deal. I am prepared to go before the bar of public opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States on my record. I acted conscientiously from the standpoint of my stockholders and the public throughout."

Not having seen the report itself nor Mr. Whipple's letter, Mr. Mellen was disinclined to go into a discussion of them from the excerpts that were read to him over the telephone. He said he would consult his counsel, John W. H. Crim of New York, and Charles F. Choate of Boston, and then possibly would issue a full statement dealing with the merits of the case.

"My lawyers always rebuke me for talking too much," said Mr. Mellen, "but it has been lawyers' advice that I have followed to this unhappy state of affairs, so I suppose they are no more infallable than I."

Picked as a Target.

The reports read to Mr. Mellen that part of the report which said that the entire directorate of the New Haven had been wholly dominated by Mr. Morgan and Mr. Mellen.

"Well, the Commission had to knock some one," said he, "and as I was the only live man that tney could get, they picked me as the target. Don't they say how much I had to do with dominating the directors? I'd like to know how much credit they give me and how much they give Mr. Morgan. Did I control them one per cent. and he ninety-nine per cent., or did he control them one per cent. and I ninety-nine per cent.? I think the Commission, being nominally, at least, a judicial body, should show a better sense of equity in dispensing its praise and blame.

"I think," he said, again becoming serious, "that it is a great honor to have been associated with the late J. Pierpont Morgan. If I had to choose my associates there is no man in the world whom I should prefer to be associated with.

"If I only had Mr. Morgan's bank account," he continued, shifting to the satirical, "or, rather the bank account that his estate now has. I should be Better That a Few Should Get Immunity Than That All Should Escape, the Commission's Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The story of the "reckless and profligate" financial operations of the New Haven Railroad, one of the most remarkable chapters in the history of American railroads and American finance, was revealed in part today by the Interstate Commerce Commission in a report to the Senate of its investigation of that road.

It told of millions used like stage money, of corporations as pawns in a monster game with all New England's transportation as a prize, which led the New Haven in the ten years just passed from the height of prosperity to the point where a dividend has been passed, where a dissolution suit is threatening, and where criminal indictments of many of the Directors who figured in its deals are at least a possibility.

Hampered by unwilling witnesses, by burned books, and by all the mazes which lawyers invented to cover the trail, the commission estimated that in the progress toward a monopolization of New England transportation the New Haven stockholders have lost between $65,000,000 and $90,000,000, but little of which they may recover.

In return, the report says, they have on their hands properties which pay no dividends, which eat into the earnings of the parent road, and which will be a burden on its capacity for many years to come.

The report deals with the management of the New Haven under former President Charles S. Mellen, and of the present directing head, Chairman Howard Elliott, and Walker D. Hines, special counsel, says "they have co-operated with the commission and rendered it substantial assistance throughout this investigation."

The combination reared by the hands of Mr. Mellen and approved by the late J. Pierpont Morgan and William Rockefeller, the commission finds to be clearly in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust act, and a monopoly in practical control of the transportation of five States.

Knew Their Acts Were Illegal.

The commission's report is unusual in the manner in which the Directors of the New Haven are scored for their deeds. It speaks of criminal maladministration and negligence, asserts with positiveness that the Directors knew they were perfecting an illegal combination, and says that the dream of a transportation monopoly was unsound and mischievous.

The New Haven, the commission says, employed dummy Directors, manipulated accounts, used questionable methods of increasing its own stock, paid the dividends of subsidiaries to make a showing and used many other devices to deceive the stockholders and the public. It dipped into politics, was a factor in "invisible government," made large contributions to the two dominant political parties, bought officials and tried to distort public opinion. All this it did, the commission says, "to carry out a scheme of private transportation monopoly imperial in its scope."

"If these Directors who were faithless to their stewardship were held responsible in the courts and at the bar of public opinion for their failure to do those things they should have done, the lesson to Directors who do not direct would be very salutary," says the report. "Most of the Directors of the New Haven accepted their responsibility lightly. They failed to realize that their names gave confidence to the public and that their connection with the corporation led the public to invest. When these Directors were negligent and serious losses resulted therefrom, they were guilty of a grave dereliction and a breach of trust that was morally wrong and criminal in its fruits.

"Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharge their trust. A corporation can be no better or worse than those who operate it. It should be just as grave a crime to plunder stockholders or the public through a railroad corporation as it is personally to rob an individual."

Little Can be Recovered.

Of all the millions lost to New Haven stockholders, the commission estimates that possibly $5,000,000 may be recovered by proper action. Evidence in its possession tending to show violations of the laws of New York, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island has been turned over to the proper authorities in those States. The Department of Justice has been furnished with a complete record of the testimony secured by the commission, but there is no Federal statute under which the Government can aid the stockholders in recovering any of their losses. A suggestion is made that any expenditures in violation of the Anti-Trust act were beyond the powers of the Directors, and raises the question of whether the Directors may not be held personally responsible to satisfy any losses which resulted.

"Directors," the commission declares, "cannot without accountability deplete a corporate treasury in ventures which are in violation of the laws of the land."

In its investigation the commission found that the New Haven had 336 subsidiary corporations, many of which served no purpose except "an evil one." The report, pointing out that on the New Haven board were representatives of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the New York Central, the United States Steel Corporation, the Standard Oil Company, the Pullman Company, and many other interests, says that interlocking Directorates of this sort cannot be "too strongly condemned." This, it was suggested at the Capitol during the day, probably will have its effect upon the trust legislation now before the Senate, and may end the talk about leaving the provisions aimed at interlocking out of all the Senate anti-trust legislation.

The Question of Immunity.

The commission discusses the question of immunity which may have been given to witnesses against criminal prosecution by the Government, which led the Department of Justice to urge caution in the conduct of the inquiry. It declares that only such witnesses as seemed necessary were summoned, and says that evidence of "wrongdoing such as was disclosed is difficult to obtain; that such transactions are conducted in secret and in the dark," and finds full justification for its action in the resulting discoveries.

"The insuring of honesty through the management of the great railroads of the country is a most important question before the people today," says the report in conclusion, "and only when through exposure of wrong-doing and an awakened public conscience, coupled with effective laws, that result is produced, may railroading be placed on the high level that it should occupy. The revelations in this record make it essential for the welfare of the nation that the reckless and profligate financiering which has blighted this railroad system be ended, and until this is fully done there will be no assurance that the story of the New Haven will not be told again with the stockholders of some other railroad system the victims."

Not Aided in Inquiry.

Evidence that agents of the commission did not have an easy time securing information it desired was contained in an appendix filed with the report. On July 9, D. B. Brown, accountant of the commission, wrote to Commissioner McChord, who directed the investigation, that his efforts to get at facts about the New Haven had not been met in a friendly spirit by J. P. Morgan & Co. Brown wrote that full access to the Morgan records had not been granted him, as had been promised; said he was unable to say whether he had been allowed to inspect all New Haven transactions on their books, and saw only such correspondence as the firm submitted.

"J. P. Morgan & Co.," wrote Brown, "do not consider this proceeding before a proper tribunal, and it is only before such a body or court that a proper submission of data will be effected."

"This investigation," Brown added, "cannot be dignified with the title of 'investigation.' No successful investigation can be conducted wherein the parties under investigation specify the evidence and limitations under which it must be accepted. All that I could consistently state is that I have seen certain accounts and correspondence pertaining to such transactions substantially confirming the profits and losses published in their statement of March 4, 1914.

"Whether such records as I have seen reveal the full story of their relations with the New Haven and its related companies, I have no evidence beyond the statement of the firm's representatives that such is the case."

In answer to an inquiry from Commissioner McChord, Mr. Brown telegraphed on July 10 that the Morgan representative was Dwight W. Morrow, who became a member of the firm July 1. On July 11 Commissioner McChord telegraphed Brown that it "is useless for you to continue the investigation." The commission's report was practically complete several days before Mr. Brown was called in.

WHAT THE REPORT SHOWS.

Drastic Indictment of the New Haven's Financial Operations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission's report on the New Haven system, issued today, was made in obedience to a resolution of the United States Senate of Feb. 7, 1914. An enormous amount of testimony was taken, and this is summarized in the report, which comprises thirty-nine printed pages, with sixty additional printed pages of appendices, the whole making a document of more than 60,000 words.

No such drastic indictment of a common carrier has ever been made by the commission. It asserts that the conduct of the New Haven's financial operations presents "one of the most glaring instances of maladministration in all the history of American railroading."

The assertion is made also that "a reasonable estimate of the loss to the New Haven by reason of waste and mismanagement" will amount to between $60,000,000 and $90,000,000, and the commission declares that "Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharged their trusts."

The capitalization of the New Haven was increased from $93,000,000 in 1903 to $417,000,000 ten years later, an increase of $324,000,000, of which $120,000,000 was devoted to railroad uses for betterment and equipment, while $204,000,000 was applied to operations outside of its railroad sphere and for the achievement of a monopoly of the transportation of the five States of New England in violation of law.

Alleges Dishonesty and Corruption

The report teems with charges of dishonesty and corruption, alleges deception in the manipulation of accounts, the burning of papers and accounts to thwart the Interstate Commission's investigation, the secret use of money for corrupt purposes in bribing political managers, newspapers, public officials and even a professor of Harvard University, and the use of dummy companies to conceal illegal transactions.

The commission defends its action in compelling Charles S. Mellen and other New Haven Directors to give testimony. The commission, it is set forth, proceeded upon the idea that it was better to expose wrongdoing even at the expense of giving immunity to a few witnesses than to leave facts uncovered and thereby give immunity to all, "not only as to prosecution but to the stigma of exposure as well." The commission cites these specific incidents of alleged waste of New Haven money:

Overpaid to Perry and Thorne in commissions, $303,750.

Illegally spent in obtaining Westchester franchise charges, $1,524,072.77.

In the Billard transaction, $2,748,700.

At the outset of its report the commission explains that in its former investigation into New Haven affairs it had access only to the books of the New Haven, the Consolidated Railway Company, the Connecticut Company, and the Rhode Island Company. None of the books, &c., of these companies were obtained in their entirety. In the investigation completed, however, the commission inquired into the financial affairs of the entire New Haven system. Summarizing the result of its investigation, the commission says:

Witnesses Mostly Hostile.

Public hearings were held extending over a period of sixty days of almost continuous session. Witnesses in a position to have knowledge of the transactions under scrutiny were examined. In the search for truth the commission had to overcome many obstacles, such as the burning of books, letters, and documents, and the obstinacy of witnesses who declined to testify until criminal proceedings were begun for their refusal to answer questions.

The New Haven system has more than 300 subsidiary corporations, in a web of entangling alliances with each other, many of which were seemingly planned, created, and manipulated by lawyers expressly retained for the purpose of concealment or deception. Ordinarily, in investigations of this character evidence is easily adduced by placing the witnesses upon the stand, but in this investigation the witnesses other than the accountants for the commission were in the main hostile, and with few exceptions their testimony was unwillingly given.

The result of our research into the financial workings of the former management of the New Haven system has been to disclose one of the most glaring instances of maladministration revealed in all the history of American railroading. In the course of the investigation many instances were uncovered of violation of the laws of different States. As these were not understood to be pertinent to our inquiry under the Senate resolution, we did not follow them into their details. As pointing to violations of State laws, we have turned over the evidence concerning local occurrences in New York City to the District Attorney for the proper district, and the testimony relating to irregularities in Massachusetts and Rhode Island have been paid before the proper authorities of those States. The commission has also furnished the Department of Justice with a complete record of the testimony.

Troubles Wholly Internal.

The difficulties under which this railroad system has labored in the past are internal and wholly due to its own mismanagement. Its troubles have not arisen because of regulation by Governmental authority. Its greatest losses and most costly blunders were made in attempting to circumvent Governmental regulation and to extend its domination beyond the limits fixed by law.

The subject matter of this inquiry relates to the financial operation of a railroad system which, on June 30, 1903, had a total capitalization of approximately $93,000,000, of which $79,000,000 was stock and $14,000,00 bonds. In the ten years from June 30, 1903, this capitalization was increased from $93,000,000 to $417,000,000, exclusive of stock premiums, or an increase of $324,000,000. Of this increase approximately $120,000,000 was devoted to its railroad property and was expended for betterments and equipment. This leaves the sum of $204,000,000, which was expended for operations outside of its railroad sphere.

Through the expenditure of this sum this railroad system has practically monopolized the freight and passenger business in five of the States of the Union. It has acquired a monopoly of competing steamship lines and trolley systems in the section which it serves. The financial operations necessary for these acquisitions, and the losses which they have entailed, have been skillfully concealed by the juggling of money and securities from one subsidiary corporation to another.

Financial Management Arraigned.

A general indictment of the New Haven financial management is also made by the commission before it begins to review the testimony obtained as to the various transactions inquired into. It specifies the following as "marked features and significant incidents in the loose, extravagant administration of the finances of the New Haven as shown in the investigation:"

The iniquity of the Westchester acquisition.

The double price paid for the Rhode Island trolleys.

The recklessness in the purchase of Connecticut and Massachusetts trolleys at prices exorbitantly in excess of their market value.

The unwarranted expenditure of large amounts in "educating public opinion."

The disposition, without knowledge of the Directors, of hundreds of thousands of dollars for influencing public sentiment.

The habitual payment of unitemized vouchers without any clear specification of details.

The confusing inter-relation of the principal company and its subsidiaries and consequent complication of accounts.

The practice of financial legerdemain in issuing large blocks of New Haven stock for notes of the New England Navigation Company, and manipulating these securities back and forth.

Fictitious sales of New Haven stock to friendly parties with the design of boosting the stock and unloading on the public at the higher "market price."

The unlawful diversion of corporate funds to political organizations; the scattering of retainers to attorneys of five States, who rendered no itemized bills for services and who conducted no litigation to which the railroad was a party.

A Paid Blind Lobby.

Extensive use of a paid lobby in matters as to which the Directors claim to have no information.

The attempt to control utterances of the press by subsidizing reporters.

Payment of money and the profligate issue of free passes to legislators and their friends.

The investment of $400,000 in securities of a New England newspaper.

The regular employment of political bosses in Rhode Island and other States, not for the purpose of having them perform any service but to prevent them, as Mr. Mullen expressed it, from "becoming active on the other side."

The retention by John L. Billard of more than $2,700,000 in a transaction in which he represented the New Haven and into which he invested not a dollar.

The inability of Oakleigh Thorne to account for $1,032,000 of the funds of the New Haven intrusted to him in carrying out the Westchester proposition.

The story of Mr. Mellen as to the distribution of $1,200,000 for corrupt purposes in bringing about amendments of the Westchester and Port Chester franchises.

The domination of all the affairs of this railroad by Mr. Morgan and Mr. Mellen and the absolute subordination of other members of the Board of Directors to the will of these two.

The unwarranted increase of the New Haven liabilities from $93,000,000 in 1903 to $417,000,000 in 1913.

The increase in floating notes from nothing in 1903 to approximately $40,000,000 in 1913.

The indefensible standard of business ethics and the absence of financial acumen displayed by eminent financiers in directing the destinies of this railroad in its attempt to establish a monopoly of the transportation of New England.

A combination of all these has resulted in the present deplorable situation in which the affairs of this railroad are involved.

Westchester a Waste of Funds.

With the declarations that "the Westchester is a story of the profligate waste of corporate funds" and "the road was not necessary as a part of the New Haven system," the commission proceeds to review the transaction involving the acquisition of the unfinished New York, Westchester & Boston Railway Company by the New Haven. It cites as evidence that this road, which paralleled other New Haven lines, was recognized as unnecessary, that the New Haven sought to restrain the construction of the road because it did not answer any public necessity and paralleled existing lines.

"The enormous sum of $36,434,173.25," says the commission, "was expended for a road only 18.03 miles in existence, which is being operated at an annual loss of approximately $1,250,000 and which will have to increase its earnings four and one-half fold before it can pay its operating expenses and fixed charges. It is inconceivable that this enterprise could have been entered into by the New Haven as a result of the mandates of good judgment and proper railroading."

Continuing, the commission says:

The Westchester acquisition was planned and executed by a special committee of the board, consisting of Directors Morgan, Rockefeller, and Miller, with President Mellen as Chairman. The vote appointing this committee "on proposed competition between the Connecticut State line and Harlem River with power," does not disclose an intention to authorize the buying of charters and promotion securities and the building of a new railroad, much less one at a cost of $36,000,000. It is ambiguous and was evidently intended to conceal a secret purpose. The full board was not taken into the confidence of those Directors who wanted these securities purchased, and no report was ever made by this committee placing the situation as they found it before the board.

Board Told When It Was Done.

The commission goes into "the extravagant acquisitions of Westchester and Port Chester securities." In November, 1907, it says, the New Haven Board learned for the first time that $11,155,000 had been expended in obtaining control of "these two insolvent promotion schemes," and that an objection to construct two railroads "under franchise of doubtful validity," had been incurred. Minutes of the committee, it is asserted, show little beyond authorizations to deposit large amounts with J. P. Morgan & Co. The committee contracted with Oakleigh Thorne and Marsden J. Perry, "both Presidents of banks which were creditors of the companies whose securities were to be acquired," to purchase 66 per cent. of the stock of the several companies, and when this was done they were to construct the railroad. They were to receive 7½ per cent. commission for the amount expended.

The contract is remarkable, says the commission, "in that no limit is placed on the amount that might be paid for the securities or expended in building the road." No record showed that the New Haven committee ever required Thorne and Perry to make an itemized statement of the disbursements they made of funds advanced by J. P. Morgan & Co. The books of J. P. Morgan & Co. show that lump sums received from the New Haven were disbursed to Thorne and the Millbrook Company on notes.

"It appeared during the progress of this investigation," said the commission, "that the personal records of Thorne, which might have shown the details of these disbursements, had been burned by him in January, 1912."

Although Francis Lynde Stetson wrote to Mr. Mellen that if payments to Mr. Thorne were made before the validity of the two principal charters was ascertained, "it might be that the money spent would be money lost," the report of the committee was unanimously approved in November, 1907. The commission says these Directors were present: Mellen, Rockefeller, Morgan, Milner, Thayer, Brooker, Brush, Warner, Cheney, Miller, Skinner, Barney, Taft, Wittemore, Elton, Hemingway, Robertson, Robbins, and Parker.

Mellen's Snub by Morgan.

Continuing, the commission says:

After this meeting of the board, at which this undetailed report was ratified, Mr. Mellen went to see Mr. Morgan and requested more information as to the expenditure of the amounts. According to Mr. Mellen's evidence, Mr. Morgan asked him if he knew who wrote the report, and upon Mr. Mellen's reply, "Yes; Mr. Stetson wrote it," Mr. Morgan asked him, "Do you think you know more than Stetson?" Mr. Mellen admitted he did not, and apparently acquiesced, but took the precaution to write upon the back of his report, while still smarting under the humiliation of the interview with Mr. Morgan, the following words:

"The trouble with this is there is nothing to show who got the money for the truck turned over. I dont like the looks of it, and I don't see why the matter should not be made plain. If I had the stock and sold it, I should expect others would state they had bought it of me, but that don't seem to have been the disposition here. I never have known the first thing about who originally held the securities, what they were sold for, and no one has thought I was entitled to know. Perhaps I am not. I would feel better if there were at least a disposition to let me know something more than appears in the record."

Efforts to consolidate the Westchester and the Port Chester roads produced litigation, and matters were brought to a standstill. After the large expenditures of the committee in acquiring stock of these companies there was still outstanding 34,053½ shares of Westchester stock. These, says the commission, "proved to be the instrument of delivery." It mentions that "according to the testimony of Mr. Mellen, the deliverer appeared in the person of Thomas J. Byrnes, at one time an Inspector of police in New York City."

The commission then goes into the transactions which were brought out in the testimony taken here in May. "The solution of the difficulties," it says, "was the further expenditure of $1,524,072.77." Stock was transferred by the New Haven to its subsidiary, the New England Navigation Company, which transferred it then to Mr. Mellen, to whom certain sums of money were also advanced from time to time. It is significant, says the commission, that all amendments to the franchises were obtained, "and the sequence was that the New Haven, in addition to these things, received 30,431 of the 34,053½ outstanding shares of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad Company stock, which Mr. Mellen testified was not worth 10 cents a pound."

"The testimony is somewhat occult, but that character of the transaction is no less certain," comments the commission. "This money was used for corrupt purposes and the improper expenditures covered up by the transfer to the New Haven of these worthless securities."

Mr. Mellen's Due Bills.

The commission goes on to summarize Mr. Mellen's story of how one share of New Haven stock should be exchanged for three shares of Westchester. When a messenger would bring Westchester stock and the New Haven stock was not immediately at hand, Mr. Mellen would give a due bill which was an order on himself to pay on demand to bearer the specified number of shares of New Haven or its equivalent in cash at $150 per share with accrued dividends. Many of these due bills were presented, but five of them, aggregating $50,000, are still outstanding.

The commission tells, summarizing Mr. Mellen's testimony, how messengers would come with due bills and would be paid by Mr. Mellen with personal checks "so drawn that the identity of the persons cashing them could not be ascertained." The quotation is the commission's language. "It seems very strange," says the commission, "that Mr. Mellen was not able to identify with any particularity any one with whom he had these transactions except the late Thomas J. Byrnes. No comment is necessary to make clear to the mind the corrupt and unlawful nature of the transaction, and it would seem that the amount illegally expended could be recovered from Mr. Mellen and the Directors who authorized it."

"Almost coincident with the above transaction" there was a further expenditure of $1,135,335 to settle a suit brought by Gotshall, a contractor, against Thorne and Perry, "which the New Haven paid under the contract which this special committee had made with the parties. This further amount must also be charged against the Westchester acquisition."

The Thorne and Perry contract was rescinded and they claimed $500,000 as damages. Under the terms of the contract J. P. Morgan & Co. was to arbitrate any such claim. Thorne and Perry received $275,000. This, says the commission, made a total of $1,060,000 which Perry and Thorne personally received. The commission says that from the books of the companies concerned in the Westchester transaction it appears that of the money disbursed by Perry and Thorne $1,032,000 remains to be accounted for by them. The commission expresses the opinion that $303,750 in commissions collected by Perry and Thorne should have been taken into consideration in the damage settlement, and that it should be recovered from Perry and Thorne or the Directors who permitted it.

"The total sum expended as the result of action of this committee," the commission declares, "aggregate $14,090,008.18."

Contests Terminal Argument.

The commission takes issue with the contention that by reason of the heavy terminal charge exacted from the New Haven on passengers delivered at the Grand Central Station it was very desirable that the New Haven should have another entrance into New York, and that the Westchester franchise provided such an entry. It could have obtained entrance via subway connections, the commission says.

In January, 1910, the Port Chester and Westchester were consolidated into one company, designated as the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway Company. The combination cost of this, as reported June 30, 1913, was $22,344,165. For the most part it is an elevated structure of four main tracks. Its main line aggregates 18.03 miles from East 174th Street to Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, and White Plains. To the figure given, however, says the commission, must be added the $14,090,008 expended before construction began, making a total of $36,434,173, "which yields the remarkable per mile cost of $2,020,752.81."

But the commission adds more to its totals of alleged wastefulness. It says that in providing money for this construction bonds to the extent of $17,000,000, sold at a discount of $1,200,000, were issued on the property bearing the guarantee of the New Haven. "This guarantee," it is asserted, "meant a drain on the New Haven resources of $1,250,000 per annum, since the earnings of the Westchester fall that far short of paying the fixed charges on the property."

"The blame for the Westchester," the commission says, "rests squarely upon the shoulders of the Directors of the New Haven Road. Some are guilty for acts committed; others, the greater number, for their failure to act. They are alike culpable and responsible to the stockholders."

Millions Wasted on Trolleys.

Taking up the matter of the purchase of the Rhode Island trolleys the commission alleges that this "was another instance of millions wasted in acquiring properties that bring an annual deficit instead of a surplus, and constitute a liability instead of an asset in the New Haven system."

To acquire control of this company, the New Haven, it is said by the commission, expended $24,352,336 in money and securities. The Rhode Island company represents a cash investment of only $9,685,500, which was expended for improvements and extensions, being the par value of 96,855 shares of capital stock at $100. All of this stock is owned by the New Haven.

After reviewing various exchanges of stock the commission says that the Rhode Island trolleys have cost the New Haven system an average annual loss of approximately $648,680. "The evidence shows," it adds, "that the Rhode Island trolley transactions were deliberately entered into with a full knowledge of the large deficit that they would bring and with the determination to acquire trolley control in Providence regardless of expense."

The commission asserts that, after a committee of New Haven Directors had reported against purchasing the Rhode Island trolleys, Mr. Mellen reviewed the matter. "This," says the commission, "was done after a conference between Mr. Mellen and former Senator Aldrich, who was largely interested in the United Traction and Electric Company, the largest lessor company."

The United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia controlled this property under lease. It had "capitalized the future hopes of the proposition into a holding company known as the Rhode Island Securities Company, and had issued $19,899,000 of debentures, which represented an investment of approximately $6,000,000." The commission adds: "The difference in these amounts was, as Mr. Mellen testified, merely capitalized water."

An exchange of debentures between the Providence Securities Company and the Rhode Island Securities Company, with the guarantee of the New Haven added, both as to principal and interest, enabled the United Gas Improvement Company, says the commission, "to realize par value on these securities, based merely upon lively expectation of future possibilities, and thereby immediately place the burden of the watered stock upon the backs of the New Haven stockholders."

Tell-Tale Books Burned.

After noting that Mr. Mellen testified that the Conecticut trolley lines, also owned by the Philadelphia Gas Company and which were purchased, represented a payment of about $10,000,000 more than their value, the commission says:

This transaction seems such an extravagant purchase as makes it a matter of interest just who owned the securities of the Rhode Island Securities Company. This information could be furnished from the stock books of that company, but during the progress of this investigation it was learned that these books had also been burned. A detailed report on the Rhode Island trolleys is to be found in the appendix made a part hereof.

The Rhode Island and Connecticut trolley ventures are further evidences of the prodigality in the expenditure of money of the New Haven stockholders in carrying out an unlawful policy of transportation monopoly.

In reviewing the transactions by which the New Haven acquired control of various competing steamship lines which were purchased because President Mellen "was restless of any limitation of his powers," the commission says:

The Hartford & New York Transportation Company cost the New Haven $2,538,916.78, the Eastern Steamship Corporation cost $4,200,000, the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company cost $5,774,500, the New Bedford, Martha's Vineyard and Pawtucket Steamboat Company cost $141,700, the New England Steamship Company cost $12,100,000, the Maine Steamship Company cost $17,300, or a total of $24,772,416.78.

The testimony shows that the physical valuation of the properties acquired as a result of these outlays approximates something like $10,000,000. The New Haven advises that it has recently disposed of its holdings in the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company at a loss of $3,594,500.

It is charged by the commission that these steamship lines were acquired by the New Haven covertly and by devious methods. "Dummy companies and dummy officers and Directors were used in financial manoeuvring that resulted in the New Haven controlling these steamships."

Allegations that improper payments for pier leases were made are contained in the report. "These pier leases in the City of New York," it is said, "are controlled by public officials, as the municipality owns the piers and arrangements for the leases had to be made through these officials." Because of methods employed "to conceal these expenditures by increases of capital stock and otherwise, it has been impossible," says the commission, "to give any actual amount of these payments."

Considerable space is devoted to the transactions by which the steamers Yale and Harvard were "eliminated from competition" by the New Haven. The story, says the commission, "is indeed a remarkable exhibition of corporate legerdemain." The Metropolitan Steamship Company and other companies were formed to accomplish the withdrawal of the Yale and the Harvard from the Eastern coast and the control by the New Haven of the freight steamers and wharf property. E. D. Robbins, General Counsel of the New Haven, is charged with having manipulated the deal. The purpose, the commission thinks, was to "conceal the hand of the New Haven." The use of dummy Directors, it says, "also seem to point to the New Haven."

Reviewing the acquisition of control over the Boston & Maine by the New Haven, the commission says that "the downward movement of Boston & Maine stock did not begin until the Mellen-Morgan-Rockefeller management was forced upon it. Their great names proved to be of no reliance to investors. The management of the Boston & Maine was unwise. It began in illegality and in lust for extended monopoly and has resulted in great depreciation and serious impairment of credit."

Urges Suit Against Billard.

The report declares that a suit should be maintainable by the New Haven against John L. Billard and all who participated in the fraud involved in the alleged purchase by Billard of 109,948 shares of Boston & Maine stock and its resale from Billard to the New Haven out of which Billard secured a profit of $2,748,700, together with a difference of $164,948 in dividends over and above his interest charge on funds loaned him without security by the New England Navigation Company and money borrowed from the National City Bank of New York for the express purpose of buying the stock from New Haven, as Billard himself did not have the capital to make the purchase, being at the time a coal merchant at Meriden, Conn., supposed to be worth about $30,000.

The report recites the details of the Billard transactions and gives the following conclusions from all the evidence:

1. He never paid a dollar of his own for the stock or in any of these transactions.

2. He never bought a share of Boston & Maine stock where the New Haven did not furnish him the money.

3. He never sold a share of the Boston & Maine stock except as the New Haven dictated.

4. All securities nominally held by the Billard Company were kept in a subdivision of the vaults of the New Haven.

5. The Billard Company was organized by the general counsel of the New Haven.

6.—The Navigation company furnished the $2,000,000 for which the Billard Company was capitalized. Billard testified that he did not pay any of his own money for the stock.

7. The Billard Company bought other Boston & Maine stock in addition to the 109,948 shares.

8. There is no evidence that the Billard Company acted for or on behalf of any interest other than the New Haven.

9. The whole capital stock of the Billard Company was used as his own by Charles S. Mellen as collateral security for his own personal borrowing of $375,000.

10. The Billard Company paid out of its treasury $375,000 to enable John L. Billard to repossess himself of the $2,000,000 capital stock of that company after the same had been pledged by Mr. Mellen.

11. J. L. Billard purposely burned his books and papers so as to get them out of the way.

12. The Billard Company was used to take over some of the questionable assets of the New Haven and assets which it was desirable to conceal.

13. The minutes of the Board of Directors of the New Haven show that Billard was to receive no profit out of this transaction other than a reasonable compensation.

14. In two other transactions shown in this case Billard and his company were admittedly used to accomplish New Haven purposes, and in one of them, which resulted in a loss, the New Haven made up the deficit to the Billard Company.

Considerable has been said concerning the risk which Mr. Billard incurred in connection with this transaction. Nothing has been said of the risk which the Navigation Company took in accepting Mr. Billard's unsecured note for $2,743,500. It was testified to both by Mr. Billard and Mr. Mellen that the latter agreed, on behalf of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company that this company would help to finance the transaction, and the fact that Mr. Billard did not put up a dollar and was plainly acting for the New Haven indicates that if there had been a loss instead of a profit Mr. Billard would have been taken care of by the New Haven Road.

It is significant that while Mr. Billard was not a Director when this stock was transferred to him, he was elected a Director July 10, 1909, before the transfer back had been completed, although it is to be noted that he did not accept his election until Oct. 16, 1909, ten days after the transfer.

All the assets of the Billard Company belong to the stockholders of the New Haven Railroad. All the money sunk in its operations belonged to the New Haven Railroad.

A suit should be maintainable by the New Haven against Billard and all who have participated in this fraud upon the stockholders.

Investment Company a Blind.

The existence of the New England Investment and Security Company is described as a device conceived to carry out the policy of the New Haven to acquire the Massachusetts trolleys. It was not a corporation or a co-partnership, but a trust without visible assets, and its primary purpose is declared to have been to take from and hold for the New Haven the trolley interests of that company.

The Supreme Court of the State declared the company was not separable from the New Haven and that it was a mere device to continue to hold the stock in the trolleys in violation of the law. It is shown that Mr. Mellen controlled the stock of the company through "Diamond Jim" Brady, it is asserted, who was utilized wholly as a dummy. From time to time there were turned over to the Investment and Security Company $9,918,000 of securities bought and paid for by the New Haven.

"It has always been used as a mere instrumentality of the New Haven," says the report. "It has always been operated by men close to the New Haven, and who have figured in other transactions of that company. The inside facts as to its dealings show a continued operation in violation of Massachusetts laws and in flagrant violation of the injunction issued by the highest court of that State."

A suit should be maintainable by the New Haven, declares the report, to reduce to its own possession the assets controlled by the New England Investment and Security Company.

Increases in the capital stock of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, on the basis of transfer of assets from one company to another, are alleged to a gigantic extent. It is shown that the steamship properties were turned over to the Consolidated Railroad Company by the New England Navigation Company at a value of $20,000,000, their cost having been but $11,000,000. The Consolidated increased its stock by $20,000,000 on the basis of the purchase. The Consolidated was then merged with the New Haven, and the stock of the latter company swelled by an issue of $20,000,000 because of the merger. Of this amount $20,000,000 went to the New England Navigation Company, the New Haven at the same time putting the $20,000,000 of the Consolidated stock in its treasury as New Haven stock in consequence of the merger, the market value of this Consolidated-New Haven stock becoming $30,000,000.

"After the New England Navigation Company had divested itself of the steamship properties," the commission goes on, "one would naturally expect that the Navigation Company, having served its purpose, would have been closed up and its charter surrendered, but, having a charter which had powers sufficiently large to permit of general banking operations, the Navigation Company has been utilized from time to time as a holding company for the accomplishment of irregular transactions, indefensible under any test of sound business management."

"Manipulation of Accounts."

Under the head of "Manipulation of Accounts" the report states that no record can be found in the New Haven's minute books of the purchase for the sum of $2,364,977 of 23,520½ shares of the stock of the Rutland Railroad Company bought from the New York Central Railroad Company. In connection with this matter of manipulated accounts it is stated that "no entries can be found in the records of the New England Navigation Company disclosing the fact that, on Oct. 2, 1909, there was received a quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. paid to it by John L. Billard, the stockholder of record, and, while the amount was entered in the accounts, it was under the caption of "interest" and not as "dividend" upon this stock, the purpose evidently being to eliminate from the record all trace of any return upon these securities."

The report avers that the practice was general of transferring funds from the New Haven back and forth to its subsidiaries for the purpose of declaring dividends. In this way the New Haven advanced $2,000,000 to the New England Navigation Company, taking the Navigation Company's demand note and receiving the cash. The New England Navigation Company did the same thing with the Housatonic Power Company, loaning $100,000 to the power company and receiving two days later a dividend of $105,000 from the power company. The New England Navigation Company, in 1912, loaned the New Haven $100,000 and three days later received a dividend of $301,635.

The report declares this juggling of accounts was commonly practiced among the 336 subsidiaries of the New Haven, and that the history of the transactions is so complicated that there has been great difficulty in getting at them, and, furthermore, the commission has been baffled in making a complete job of this part of its work by the illness of H. M. Kochesperger, the financial Vice President of the New Haven, who went to Europe soon after having been subpoenaed to testify before the commission. Mr. Mellen in his testimony stated that Mr. Kochesperger was smitten with nervous prostration immediately after receiving this subpoena.

Speaking of the dummy companies the report says:

The Roles Played by Dummies.

The frequency with which dummy corporations and dummy Directors appear in this record leads to the conclusion that some one high in the councils of the New Haven had an obsession upon the subject of the utility of such sham methods.

The Directors of the Billard Company confessed that they were dummies and knew nothing of its operation.

In the organization of one of the steamship companies the young lady stenographer was made President, and a youth of 21 years of age by the name of Grover Cleveland Richards was selected as Treasurer of another company.

Clerks and irresponsible persons were drawn upon to supply the demand for dummies in the financial joy riding by the management of the New Haven. Mellen's stock in the New England Investment and Securities Company was held by James B. Brady, who testified that he was merely a dummy. Director Skinner's stock in this same company was held by a relative and a bookkeeper in his office. Thus, throughout the entire story of deception, the New Haven management vainly endeavored to hide the true facts behind these dummy individuals and dummy corporations.

As a matter of law, such devices are feeble and puerile, but if the master financiers behind these New Haven transactions could use these sham methods and thus give their indorsement to the availability of such crooked schemes to cover the true substance and fact of financial transactions, it indicates a low state of financial morality. No condemnation can be too severe to apply to the frequent use of these companies by the New Haven. While stock in the New Haven Road was listed on the New York Stock Exchange, a large portion of its funds were invested in "blue-sky" corporations, the officers of which knew nothing of the purposes or assets of the companies of which they were managers or officers.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the report is the part which appears under the caption "Waste—Impairment—Losses," and deals with the absolute losses suffered by the New Haven as a result of the policies which controlled its Directorate. The aggregate resulting from the digest made by the expert accountants of the Interstate Commerce Commission is $65,871,299. There is shown to have been a loss in the Boston & Maine of $23,233,725; New York, Westchester & Boston, $11,457,156; Hartford & Worcester Street Railway, $73,394; Springfield Railway Companies, $203,221; Worcester Consolidated Street Railway, $10,500; Worcester and South Bridge Street Railway, $15,580; Connecticut Company, $12,535,386, and the Rhode Island Company, $18,352,336.

Directors and Their Duties.

Discussing the presence on the New Haven Board of Directors of representatives of other great corporations, including Standard Oil, United States Steel, the Pennsylvania Railroad, the New York Central, and the Pullman Company, the report says:

In fact, every other interest seemed better represented on the New Haven board than the average stockholder's interest.

A Director should be an active, not a passive, force. He should understand the affairs of the corporation to which he gives the prestige of his name at least to the extent of knowing the integrity of its designs and the absence of law-breaking methods in its operation, and he should not accept positions which he cannot fill in this comprehensive way.

Through the control of voting strength resulting from stock ownership by other corporations, a few persons whose indivdual holdings were small in comparison with the volume of stock of the company were enabled to perpetuate their full control of the New Haven Company.

The handling of bank deposits and security sales of these corporations were massed in a few hands, carrying with them a power and domination over large amounts of banking capital, as well as the control of great railroad systems. These and other evils as the result of interlocking Directorates are now well recognized and known, and they have been emphasized by the disclosures of this investigation.

Reaching the consideration of the recovery of funds taken from the treasury of the New Haven for illegal and indirect operations the report conveys the conclusion that suits are maintainable against Marsden J. Perry and Oakleigh Thorne of New York for improper or double commissions in the negotiations conected with the acquisition of the Westchester Road; also for $1,524,072, a large part of which ($1,200,000 the report states) was expended by Mr. Mellen in obtaining Westchester franchises and for the sum of $2,748,700, which went to John L. Billard in the deal with Boston & Maine stock.

Upon this phase of the affairs of the road the report lays down the following view:

If any expenditures were made in violation of the anti-trust laws of the United States, are not such expenditures ultra vires and is it not the legal obligation of the Directors to satisfy out of their own fortunes any loss which results to the company? Only lawful expenditures are authorized. All illegal disbursements are ultra vires. Directors cannot without accountability deplete a corporate treasury in ventures which are in violation of the laws of the land.

The report concludes with the declaration that the New Haven monopoly was corrupt and urges civil and criminal prosecution of the New Haven Directors. It says:

This investigation has demonstrated that the monopoly theory of those controlling the New Haven was unsound and mischievous in its effects. To achieve such monopoly meant the reckless and scandalous expenditure of money, it meant the attempt to control public opinion, corruption of government, the attempt to pervert the political and economic instincts of the people in insolent defiance of law. Through exposure of the methods of this monopoly the invisible government which has gone far in its efforts to dominate New England has been made visible.

It is inconceivable that these wrongs could have gone on without interference if the members of the Board of Directors had been true to the faith they owed the stockholders. A number of Directors appear in many instances to have voted without knowledge and to have approved the expenditure of many millions without information. According to the testimony of some of the Directors they merely approved what had been done by some committee or by some officer of the company.

A Body for Ratification.

The Directors' minutes reveal that it was largely a body for ratification and not authorization, as the law intended a Board of Directors should be. None of the Directors would have been so careless in the handling of his own money as the evidence demonstrates they were in dealing with the money of other people.

The Directors actively or passively acquiesced in the efforts of the Mellen-Morgan-Rockefeller régime to extend the domination of this corporation over the whole transportation field in New England.

If these Directors who were faithless to their stewardship were held responsible in the courts and at the bar of public opinion for the failure to do these things they should have done, the lesson to Directors who do not direct would be very salutary.

Most of the Directors of the New Haven accepted their responsibilities lightly. They failed to realize that their names gave confidence to the public, and that their connection with the corporation led the public to invest. When these Directors were negligent and serious losses resulted therefrom they were guilty of a gross dereliction of duty, of a breach of trust that was morally wrong and criminal in its fruits.

Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharge their trusts. A corporation can be no better or worse than those who operate it. It should be just as grave a crime to plunder stockholders or the public through a railroad corporation as it is to personally rob an individual.

The insuring of honesty throughout the management of the great railroads of the country is a most important question before the people today, and only when by thorough exposure of wrongdoing and an awakened public conscience coupled with effective laws this result is produced, may railroading be placed upon the high level that it should occupy. The revelations in this record make it essential for the welfare of the nation that the reckless and profligate financiering which has blighted this railroad system be ended, and until this is fully done there will be no assurance that the story of the New Haven will not be told again with the stockholders of some other railroad system as the victims.

Correspondence with Morgan & Co.

A sidelight on the investigation appears in an appendix giving correspondence between Commissioner McChord, who had immediate charge of the commission's hearings, and the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. in regard to the examination of the books of the firm and the personal records of the late J. Pierpont Morgan in regard to New Haven affairs.

On May 26, this year, following the declaration by J. P. Morgan, Jr., in an interview, that these records were "available and ready for production before any proper tribunal at any time," Commissioner McChord telegraphed Mr. Morgan that the commission desired to avail itself of this offer and would be pleased to send its examiners to his office for the purpose. Mr. Morgan replied telling Commissioner McChord to have the counsel of the commission arrange with Francis Lynde Stetson for the "production of the records as offered," and added that "we should expect that all of the evidence thus produced would become a part of your records."

In a letter addressed by Commissioner McChord to Mr. Morgan July 6, he says that the accountants of the commission, when they went to the offices of Morgan & Co. in pursuance of the arrangement that was made with Mr. Stetson, "instead of being allowed free access to the books and papers concerning the transactions of the New Haven Railroad and of its subsidiaries have been denied such access and have been obliged to call for such information as they could designate, and when an item was shown them all other items except the specific one named have been covered up, and all information concerning the financial transactions of the New Haven Railroad or any of its subsidiaries with J. P. Morgan & Co. or J. P. Morgan has been refused where a third person was involved in such transactions."

Commissioner McChord declares that this was not the character of examination he understood from Mr. Morgan's statement he was willing for the commission's accountants to make, and was not an examination upon which any conclusion could be based by the commission as to what the books did or did not show.

Mr. Morgan's Explanation.

Mr. Morgan replied saying that only where the names of third parties were involved had there been any refusal to show the records and in two cases an effort had been made to get the consent of the third parties that they should be shown.

On the same day that he wrote Mr. Morgan the Commissioner also wrote D. E. Brown, the Interstate Commerce Commission's expert district accountant, asking if free access had been given to the records in the office of Morgan & Co. Mr. Brown's reply was as follows:

> First—Full access to the records of J. P. Morgan and J. P. Morgan & Co. has not been granted to me. Such items of accounts as contain the record of the transactions published in their statement, addressed to the Chairman of the New Haven board, dated March 4, 1914, have been submitted, and all exposed data foreign to the particular transaction under review have been covered by papers, and in innumerable instances where the name of a third party was involved such information was also covered up.
>
> Second—Whether I have been allowed to inspect all transactions on the books of J. P. Morgan & Co. and relating to the New Haven or its subsidiary companies I am unable to state. I do not know what accounts are on their books except the few reported in their statement previously referred to, and several deposit accounts, dividend and interest accounts which they voluntarily submitted.
>
> In review of the correspondence, I can see such letters only as are submitted by them. Whether they are all the correspondence on the subject I cannot say, beyond the fact that such is their statement.
>
> Correspondence between J. P. Morgan & Co. and third parties on the transactions referred to will, as a rule, be referred to such parties and their consent obtained before submission to me for inspection. J. P. Morgan & Co. do not consider this proceeding is before a proper tribunal, and it is only before such a body or court that a proper submission of data will be effected.
>
> This procedure cannot be dignified by the title of an investigation. No successful investigation can be conducted wherein the parties under investigation specify the evidence and limitations under which it must be accepted. All that I could consistently state is that I have seen certain accounts and correspondence pertaining to such transactions, substantially confirming the profits and losses published in their statement of March 4, 1914.
>
> Whether such records as I have seen reveal the full story of their relations with the New Haven and its related companies I have no evidence beyond the statement of the firm's representatives that such is the case.
>
> Yours truly, D. E. BROWN,
> District Accountant.

On July 10 Commissioner McChord telegraphed to Mr. Brown for a verification of his statement that the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. did not consider the proceeding as being before a proper tribunal. Mr. Brown replied that the statement was made to him July 7 by Dwight W. Morrow, who became a member of the firm July 1.

The next day Commissioner McChord telegraphed Mr. Brown to come home, as it was useless for him to continue the investigation further.

Some Who Opposed B. & M. Deal.

At times the investigation has gone out into bypaths of sentiment, as for instance in the passage in one of the appendices where it is shown how Mr. Mellen in 1907 was tempted to let the Boston & Maine slip into the hands of the late E. H. Harriman. There were Directors of the New Haven opposed to acquiring the Boston & Maine. The late Charles F. Choate, a Director, wrote Mr. Mellen:

> I have been greatly troubled by the rumors of your dealings with Boston & Maine Railroad Company. I have little faith in that company and cannot think it is fairly earning the 7 per cent. dividend. I don't wonder the parties owning large blocks want to sell, but I think it is a great mistake for the New Haven to buy it at any price. The current rumor that you have bought has hurt you and the company very much, indeed.

Others wrote in like strain.

Secrecy was essential as Mr. Mellen wrote to H. M. Whitney "that just as little official information should get into the newspapers regarding the Boston & Maine as was absolutely necessary, and, further, that the Washington situation he thought was completely cared for."

On May 21, 1907, H. M. Whitney wrote Mr. Mellen that he hoped Mr. Mellen would think it consistent to say something at an early day touching the Boston & Maine matter, and "I have also thought it possible that the Little Father in Washington might like to get his finger into the pie, in which case, if it happened before the public had become reconciled to the change, it might result in infinite harm to all your interests."

Another letter by Charles F. Choate, Sr., was written on May 30, 1907, to Mellen as follows:

> I see great trouble ahead for the company and for you personally from the State's action. The stockholders here seem almost in dismay at the present conditions. So far as I have seen them they are not willing to give their proxies for the meeting on May 31, seeming to think that this is in some way connected with the Boston & Maine merger.

Meyer and Lodge Sounded.

Notwithstanding opposition, the evidence indicates that the policy of getting the Boston & Maine was steadily pursued under Mellen's direction. A letter shows that a representative of Mr. Mellen took luncheon with then Postmaster General Von L. Meyer and sounded him on legislation to validify the transaction. Mention is made also of a lunch with Senator Lodge for the same purpose and suggestion is made of other prominent personages who might be persuaded to meet Mr. Mellen to talk over the matter. The Republican organization of Massachusetts is confidently regarded as willing. When it seemed that there might be public opinion in the way of the merger, Mr. Mellen wrote Lawrence Minot of Boston as follows:

> If I am to be rejected in my plans for the improvement of the business of the City of Boston particularly, and the Commonwealth generally, would it not seem funny that Mr. Harriman should be the Moses to lead the disaffected element out of all the troubles they anticipate from a control by the interests I am representing?

On May 13, 1908, a telegram as follows was sent to T. E. Byrnes, Vice President of the New Haven:

> Have had talk with Mr. Harriman today. Want you to see Warren, Choate, and Benton and advise me if best possible way out of difficulty is not sale. It is useless to contend if we are to have public sentiment against us. Why is it not better to let Harriman have the fight on his hands and we retire with profit? It seems to me it administers poetic justice in addition to letting us out. Have another appointment with him tomorrow.

As it turned out, Mr. Harriman did not buy the Boston & Maine, and the Billard deal was thought of as a way out of the difficulty.

PROSECUTORS IN THE DARK.

New Haven Evidence Not Yet in Hands of District Attorneys.

The report of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, which has been forwarded to the District Attorney of New York, for the investigation of local transactions by the Directors, had not been received when the office of District Attorney Whitman was closed yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Whitman is in Newport, and is expected at the Criminal Court Building today. During his absence, Assistant District Attorney James A. Delehanty is acting in his place, and he said that he knew nothing of the Interstate Commerce Commission's report. Neither had it been received by Lloyd D. Willis, Secretary to District Attorney Whitman. Mr. Delehanty thought the report might be received today.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 13.—Donald T. Warner of Salisbury, State Attorney for Litchfield County; Charles Searls of Thompson, State Attorney for Windham County, and Charles Phelps of Rockville, State Attorney for Tolland County could not be reached tonight, but Frank D. Haines of Portland, State Attorney for Middlesex County, said tonight he had not received any communication from the Federal Commission, although he was expecting a copy of the evidence. He said if there were any criminal transactions in the New Haven case his county was as much concerned as any in the State.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 13.—Thomas J. Boynton, Attorney General of Massachusetts, denied tonight that he had received any evidence from the Interstate Commerce Commission or the Department of Justice relating to alleged illegal transactions by the New Haven directors. When informed that the report of the commission said that evidence had been submitted to the proper authorities of Massachusetts he replied that he had received no communication in regard to the matter. Asked whether he contemplated prosecution as a result of the findings he said that he did not.

GOV. WALSH WON'T TALK.

Directors Asked to Join Big Suit Against Old New Haven Board.

BOSTON, July 13.—Gov. Walsh, who has been active in trying to arrange a settlement of the difficulties of the New Haven with the Government as regards the separation of the Boston & Maine from the New Haven, would make no comment upon the Interstate Commerce Commission's report.

No action has been taken in Suffolk County, which embraces Boston, but soon after the commission concluded its investigation the Middlesex County Grand Jury began an investigation of the Hampden deal, a matter in which it had jurisdiction because Cambridge banks were involved. The investigation resulted in the indictment on June 29 of Charles S. Mellen and several bankers on charges of conspiracy to defraud two Cambridge banks by lending money on insufficient security. The securities were notes of the Hampden Railroad, indorsed by the Hampden Railroad Corporation. Twenty-two indictments were returned in all, eleven of which were kept secret. This is the only Massachusetts prosecution of New Haven financing yet undertaken. William J. Corcoran, District Attorney of Middlesex County, would not say whether he had received any evidence from the commission.

Only an hour before the report was published here Sherman L. Whipple, who had announced that he would bring suit for $155,000,000 against former Directors of the New Haven in behalf of stockholders, made public a letter he had sent to the present board demanding that its members join in the proceeding. Mr. Whipple's letter is understood to be merely a formal matter before the filing of his suit, which is expected this week.

In his letter Mr. Whipple referred to the testimony concerning New Haven investments, which proved unprofitable, and continued:

"It is our judgment that Directors are liable for these losses which have so plainly resulted from their neglect of judiciary duty. On this ground the corporation is entitled to recover from its Directors the difference between what was actually paid out for these investments and their actual values—a sum amounting to not less than $94,000,000.

"It now seems practically conceded that all these purchases—trolleys, steamship lines, and Boston & Maine shares alike—were also in violation of the Federal Anti-Trust act and, on that ground, illegal.

"On this ground, in our opinion, the railroad is entitled to recover from its Directors $155,000,000—the aggregate amount paid for the Boston & Maine shares and steamship and trolley lines.

"We therefore, in behalf our clients, who are, and during all the period of the transactions herein referred to have been, stockholders, respectfully demand that you institute proper legal proceedings to enforce the liability of Directors to the corporation which we have pointed out, and such other liability as may be disclosed as a result of a careful and thorough investigation of the company's affairs."

The exact amount that will be named in the suit has not been made known, but the letter indicates that the claim will be made that the Directors are liable for $94,000,000 on one ground and $155,000,000 under another interpretation.

CARMANS NOW FACE FIRE OF GRAND JURY

Doctor's Auto Trip Is Under Scrutiny in Hunt for Weapon That Killed Mrs. Bailey.

NO IMMUNITY TO BE GIVEN

Mrs. Carman Receives a Letter Containing a White Powder—Bardes's Story Unshaken.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEPORT, L. I., July 13.—If Dr. Edwin Carman testifies before the Grand Jury in the case of his wife, Mrs. Florence Carman, who is charged with the murder of Mrs. Lulu D. Bailey, he probably will have first to sign a written statement waiving immunity. This was announced by District Attorney Lewis J. Smith today, on the eve of laying the Carman case before the Grand Jury.

The District Attorney also intimated that Mrs. Ida Powell, Mrs. Carman's sister, who he thought knew a great deal more about what happened at the Carman home at the time of the murder than had been elicited from her, would be obliged to sign a similar waiver before she would be allowed to testify before the Grand Jury.

Mr. Smith had explained that he would not allow Mrs. Carman to testify before the jury without first waiving immunity. He added that such an agreement in her case had been indicated by her lawyer, and that if the Grand Jury was willing to let her testify on the District Attorney's recommendation she would be called as a witness.

It became evident from the District Attorney's talk this evening that a careful search was being conducted for the murder revolver, which disappeared with the murderer, and the subsequent disposal of which the authorities had been unable to trace. In this connection, Mr. Smith said Dr. Carman would be asked to explain in great detail an automobile ride which the District Attorney has learned he took on the night of the murder, a few hours after the shooting.

According to the District Attorney, Dr. Carman, after the officials left the Carman premises and while they were busy following bloodhounds on the supposed scent of the murderer, was seen busily furbishing up and lighting his automobile.

Physician's Route in Question.

While the officials were away following the dog's false trail to Lynbrook, Mr. Smith learned, Dr. Carman left the house for an hour or two. He returned early in the morning. When asked to explain where he had gone on that occasion, Dr. Carman, according to the District Attorney, said that he had paid a visit to a patient. But the physician will be asked to trace in detail to the Grand Jury the route he followed on that visit, from the time he left his home until he returned. Dr. Carman will be asked to account also for every moment of the time he was out of the house that night after the shooting, when, he testified, he left the house to fetch Thedore Bedell, a friend, to identify the dead woman.

Dr. Carman said late tonight that his wife had received a letter containing a white powder which he presumed to be strychnine. The letter said that the sender sympathized with Mrs. Carman, and added, "Take one dose of this and you will feel all right." Warden Hulse of the jail was absent, but Sheriff Pettit admitted that a letter had been received by Mrs. Carman and would be examined by the authorities in the morning. He would not say whether it contained any drug.

Preliminary to the Grand Jury's investigation a conference was held in the office of the District Attorney until late this afternoon, at which Elwood T. Bardes, the star witness for the State, was questioned and cross-examined by George M. Levy, the Carman lawyer, in an effort to discredit his testimony that he had seen a woman resembling the description of Mrs. Carman on the night of the murder, walking away from the office window toward the back of the house immediately after the shot was fired.

At that conference, carried on in the presence of the District Attorney, Assistant District Attorney Weeks, and Sheriff Pettit, none of whom tried to keep the witness from answering any question which Levy put to him, the Carman lawyer was unable to shake the story Mr. Bardes told at the Coroner's inquest. Mr. Levy admitted that himself, as he emerged from the room, flushed and angry. But he insisted the conference had confirmed his opinion that Mr. Bardes's story was untrue. He said he had documentary evidence of financial transactions that showed Mr. Bardes up in an unfavorable light.

Says Bardes Was Unshaken.

District Attorney Smith was as much pleased as Mr. Levy was angry. He explained that he had allowed Mr. Levy to have absolutely free rein with the witness.

"I have no objection to what Levy thought of Bardes," Mr. Smith added. "In all his inquiry—and it was a drastic one—Levy did not develop that Bardes had ever been convicted of a crime or indicted. He showed that Bardes had had some little trouble in the past—as who has not?—and showed what purported to be a copy of a statement written by Bardes concerning the trouble in question. Levy never shook him once. Levy himself denied that he had had any intention of getting a warrant for Bardes at any time," added the District Attorney, calling to mind what purported to have been a conversation between Mr. Levy and a detective yesterday, in which reporters were allowed to overhear the lawyer tell the man at the other end of the wire to "hold up that warrant."

Mr. Smith said that when the Grand Jury took up the Carman case tomorrow, the first day's witnesses would be members of the Bailey family—Mr. Bailey, Madeline Bailey, daughter of the dead woman; Mrs. Kimball, cousin of Mrs. Bailey, and Mrs. Jennie Duryea, mother of Mrs. Bailey. They will be examined to show the time of Mrs. Bailey's departure from her home and to help fix the time of the murder and the incidents immediately thereafter. Harry De Beau, the real estate man who last saw Mrs. Bailey before she entered the Carman home, auso will be examined. If the testimony of these witnesses does not take up the entire day, there also will be called tomorrow Dr. Howard Phipps, Dr. William H. Runcie, and Dr. Roy Grimmer, who performed the autopsy, and who will be asked to trace the course of the bullet.

Celia Coleman, the Carmans' negro maid, who has been missing from the ken of the Carman lawyer since Thursday, will be called as a witness on Wednesday or Thursday. Mr. Smith would not tell whether the girl had changed her testimony given at the inquest, that she had been in the kitchen all evening on the night of the shooting, and that neither Mrs. Carman nor any one else had appeared there or passed through the kitchen door to or from the yard where the shot was fired.

Waivers of Immunity.

Such members of the Carman family as will be called to testify probably will be called on Thursday or Friday, Mr. Smith said. Mrs. Carman, if the jury consented to hear her, after she waived immunity, probably would testify on Thursday.

"Will you insist that Dr. Carman also sign a waiver of immunity before he is permitted to testify?" was asked of Mr. Smith.

"I think he will be asked. I think I may. He probably will," replied the District Attorney.

"And will you insist that Mrs. Powell also sign such a waiver?"

"I probably may," replied Mr. Smith.

The District Attorney is going to find out also whether the illness of Mrs. Platt Conklin, the mother of Mrs. Carman, is really so grave as to prevent the aged woman from testifying before the Grand Jury.

The importance of Mrs. Conklin's testimony is realized keenly, since she seems to have been peculiarly in the confidence of Mrs. Carman, she alone of all the family having known of the installation of the dictograph in the doctor's office, and she having accompanied Mrs. Carman to New York on the afternoon of the murder. So far there has been no effort to take her testimony in record form. Mr. Levy is to let Mr. Smith know today if he can take her testimony.

The District Attorney looks forward also to getting important new facts from Mrs. Powell in the Grand Jury room and to gain enlightenment on discrepancies and contradictions in her testimony at the inquest. He said he did not know whether he even would call before the Grand Jury the tramp Farrell who told of seeing a woman walk from the office window while he was walking away after begging for food at the rear door. From the beginning Mr. Smith has placed little faith in Farrell's story.

Mr. Smith said the Burns Detective Agency was to make a report to him in writing in a day or two. He was well satisfied with the work of Mr. Burns in the case so far, he added. He would not divulge what oral reports, if any, Mr. Burns had made, but admitted he had been unable to trace any previous intimacy between Dr. Carman and the murdered woman.

The attention of the District Attorney was called to the fact that in the affidavit of Celia Coleman given to the lawyer of Mrs. Carman and shown to the reporters by Mr. Levy last night, it was noticed that the girl's testimony there concerning here going to the pantry when the shot was fired had first read that she remained there "about five (5) or ten (10) minutes," but that these words had been crossed out and there had been written above them instead, "about a minute." Mr. Smith smiled, as if he felt that it didn't matter much what the affidavit contained.

In her testimony at the inquest the girl was made to admit that Mr. Levy caused her to sign the affidavit without reading it to her or letting her read it. This the lawyer denied. The District Attorney feels that the affidavit in the circumstances is not worth the paper it is written on.

"Gunman" Story Discredited.

The story about the hired gunman, "Joe Anderson," who supposedly was brought to Freeport by a jealous woman who paid him to bring the revolver with which the murder was done, fell to pieces today when the officials confronted the teller, a Bronx youth named Meyer D. Newman and self-styled "alias Duke de Leon," with a man answering the description of his alleged friend Anderson. They found one Joe Anderson at a downtown hotel named by Newman, traced him from there to a farm in Putnam County, and brought him here today. They let Anderson wander through the corridors of the Court House, and presently introduced there Newman himself, from the jail cell where he was awaiting sentence for carrying a deadly weapon. The two men passed each other time and again without any sign of recognition. Finally they asked Newman:

"Do you know who that man is?"

"No. Who is he?" he replied, looking blankly at Anderson.

"That's Joe Anderson," they told him.

"He's not my Joe Anderson," retorted the youth, quickly. "He's in Kansas City."

But the authorities are not looking for any more Joe Andersons.

The examination of Mrs. Carman before Coroner Norton, as Justice of the Peace, scheduled for this morning, was postponed by consent of the District Attorney and the Carman lawyer until July 21. Although a crowd was on hand to see the expected session, at which it was believed Mrs. Carman herself might be present at the formal adjournment, the curious were disappointed. Not even the Coroner appeared.

Mrs. Carman spent the day in jail with her usual outward calm. Her husband visited her with the customary huge bunch of flowers, as well as a big box of candy. With these under his arms he posed for photographs in front of the jail. It was explained in behalf of Mrs. Carman that her sister, Mrs. Powell, had not visited her owing to Mrs. Carman's unwillingness to have any relatives except her husband call at the jail.

Mrs. Powell alone of all Mrs. Carman's family, it was recalled, was not at the Carman house when the officials, amid the avid interest of nearly all the villagers, went there and arrested Mrs. Carman. She remained working at her desk in the First National Bank, but on the next day she remained away from the bank and has been at the Carman home ever since.

ARRESTED AS BOY'S SLAYER

Farmer Taken When Offering Sympathy to Youth's Family.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERSIDE, N. J., July 13.—Edward Murphy, a farmer, who discovered the murder of Herman Fisher, 17 years old, who was shot as he was on his way home from his sweetheart's house, at Taylor's Station, early Sunday morning, was arrested today on suspicion of having committed the crime. Another man who was jealous of the boy's attention to Miss Ida Wilhelm, 18 years old, may be arrested before tomorrow.

Murphy is married, but does not live with his wife. A 10-gauge shotgun, such as was used to murder Fisher, was found hidden in Murphy's barn, with a pair of shoes which fitted the footprints found near the place of the crime. An additional piece of circumstantial evidence was a leaf from a pear tree caught in the trigger of the shotgun. The murder was committed near a pear orchard.

Murphy and Herman Fisher were formerly the best of friends. He was with George Fisher, 16 years old, brother of the murdered youth, when the body was found, and was solicitous about the family. Today he went to the Fisher home to offer his sympathy and insisted on accompanying Misses Anna and Elsie Fisher, sisters of the victim, to Riverside to aid them in purchasing mourning clothes.

While Murphy was in Riverside the county authorities were investigating a story of his having made a threat. They questioned his father, C. Franklin Murphy, and his mother. The mother produced the shotgun. Murphy was arrested secretly and hurried off to the Mount Holly jail. He refused to make any statement.

The Observer three years ago. He had owned The Pall Mall Gazette since 1892, and he made J. L. Garvin, one of the foremost Unionist journalists, editor of both. With two such organs supporting the Tory cause through thick and thin no Unionist Government could possibly refuse whatever their proprietor should ask as a reward when the days of Ministerial plenty succeeded the lean days of opposition.

Now all these plans have come to nought, thanks to young Mrs. Astor's injudicious remark, which was overheard by her father-in-law.

Now William Waldorf is careless of his son's political prospects and considers only his own outraged feelings. He is even ready to abandon all hopes for a title for the Astor family because of these feelings. He is so determined to get rid of both The Observer and The Pall Mall Gazette that he is offering them at a price which THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent is informed on good authority is ridiculously below their real value as a purely business proposition.

For some time past The Pall Mall Gazette has been paying expenses, while The Observer is actually making a profit of about $50,000 a year.

The instruction to the solicitors were peremptory. They must sell both papers and sell them quickly. Mr. Astor wants to wash his hands of them and prove to his son that he is not going to tolerate the witticisms of his son's wife.

PUTS COAL CARRIERS UNDER INDICTMENT

Sweeping Charges Filed Against Pennsylvania, Lackawanna, and Northern Central Roads.

CHARGE ILLEGAL FAVORS

Fines of More Than $1,000,000 Possible — Second Criminal Case Under Commodities Clause.

ROCHESTER, July 13.—Indictments were filed today in the United States District Court against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the Northern Central Railway Company, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Company. All the indictments relate to transactions in connection with the mining of anthracite coal in the Pennsylvania fields and transportation to Buffalo and vicinity, and allege unfair advantages by the railroads over other shippers. The four companies are liable to fines of more than $1,000,000 in case of convictions.

The indictment against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company charges violation of the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act. Under this clause railroads are forbidden to transport commodities which they own, not required by them in their own business. It is the second criminal case under this clause.

The indictment charges that half a dozen coal mining corporations, ostensibly separately incorporated, which ship all their coal over the Pennsylvania system, in reality are owned, operated, and financed directly by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The indictment contains twenty-five counts, the maximum penalty under the law for each violation being a fine of $5,000.

The indictment against the Northern Central Railway Company charges that it leased coal lands near Shamokin, Penn., to the Mineral Railroad & Mining Company at a rental in the form of a royalty of 28 cents a ton, and that while the mining company has been mining and shipping a million and a half tons yearly, the railroad company never has collected a cent in royalties. The Government asserts that by reason of this situation there was a discrimination in favor of this particular shipper. The indictment contains fifty counts, the maximum penalty for each violation being a fine of $20,000.

The indictments against the Lackawanna Railroad and Coal Companies charge that the railroad owns five trestles in Buffalo which are rented to the coal company at a nominal rental of $48 a year for the five trestles. It is asserted by the Government that this is a discrimination and gives an advantage to the coal company in the form of a concession or rebate from the freight rates paid by it to the railroad. The indictments each contain five counts, the maximum penalty being a fine for each offense of $20,000.

John Lord O'Brien, Federal Attorney for this district, has been working on the indictments for two months. The Grand Jury which returned them held the longest session in the history of the district.

CAR ROWDIES WERE GUNMEN

Detective Reads of Their Arrest and Lands Them for a Shooting:

Detective Burgess of the West Forty-seventh Street Station was reading a morning paper yesterday when his eye chanced on an account of the street car riot in Long Island City on Sunday evening. Among the names of men arrested for rioting he saw those of William Reddington, a youth of 18, who gave his address as 24 Columbus Avenue, and Alfred Dolan, 19 years old, of 513 West Fifty-second Street.

Burgess dropped his paper and hurried to the detective's room in the West Forty-seventh Street Station, where he took two hats from a safe. On the sweat band of one hat were the initials W. R. and on the other the initials A. D.

The detective then went to the saloon of Patrick Shine, at 437 West Fifty-third Street, near Tenth Avenue, and asked Shine if he could repeat the names of any of the six men who shot him in the shoulder and arm on June 20, in an attack on his saloon. Shine, among others, gave the names of Reddington and Dolan. The hats the detective had were found in the saloon after the men who had shot up the place had fled.

This was enough for Burgess. He took Shine to the Long Island City jail, where, according to the police, the saloonkeeper clinched the case against the two prisoners by identifying them as two of his assailants. After they had paid $3 fines for disorderly conduct in Long Island, they were rearrested and brought to Manhattan, charged with felonious assault.

AUTO JUMPS INTO DITCH.

Exploding Tire Stops a Race Up Noroton Hill.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, July 13.—Two autos were racing up Noroton Hill last night when the tire of the machine driven by John Conway, a chauffeur of 302 West Fifty-second Street, New York, exploded. The auto left the road, plunged through a hedge, and then into a ditch.

A young woman and a man who were in the car were uninjured. Conway was cut about the face.

The passengers in Conway's car jumped aboard the other car, owned by Cyril Crimmins. Mr. Crimmins later had the damaged car taken to a garage for repairs. It was said that it belonged to a guest of Mr. Crimmins.

satisfied. But in my case I am getting only the uncertain glory in the public estimation of having been a twin commander of a crew of piratical buccaneers. I believe that it is the way the Interstate Commerce Commission would have us classified."

The reporter found on inquiry that Mr. Mellen had stated the law with strict accuracy.

"I wish the Federal prosecuting authorities would name the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as a joint defendant," said Mr. Mellen. "I would gladly testify to the implication of some men who are quite prominent in Boston financial circles."

Speaking of the recent election of James H. Hustis as President of the Boston & Maine, Mr. Mellen continued:

"He'll find it a hot seat when he takes it. He will get along all right if he succeeds in throwing overboard some of the controlling spirits on the board. I had to struggle with them. They thought they wanted control till they recently got it and then they didn't know what to do with it. They are still in that state."

Mr. Mellen was unwilling to mention names in any of his personal references. After this last digression he returned to the commission's report to make a few statements about the commission's strictures against the New Haven for having invested $400,000 in a newspaper.

"Well," said Mr. Mellen, "the Interstate Commerce Commission wants newspaper publicity and it gets it by going after it. We needed newspaper support and we went after it in the most sensible and direct way. When you want to get one you want to get it all. A railroad is a semi-political institution and needs publicity just as much as the Commerce Commission or others having a political axe to grind.

"I am glad, however, that the commission dubs me a criminal of the higher type. At least they give me credit for having been a leader and if I fell into criminal ways I at least was not a tool of other brigands. There is some solace to me in this thought. Whatever the undertaking I'd rather be a real Captain than one of the crew."

Boston & Maine Stock.

A further disclosure of the commission's report brought forth some statements relative to the purchase of the Boston & Maine stock by the Boston Railroad Holding Company, a subsidiary of the New Haven, incorporated under Massachusetts law for the purpose of purchasing and holding Boston & Maine stock. Mr. Mellen was told that the purchase of the stock was one of the acts of the New Haven that came in for condemnation, as being in violation of the Sherman Act.

"If the purchase of the stock is to be the basis of a prosecution under the Sherman law or any other law, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts should be joined as a co-defendant and co-conspirator against the law of the United States and the welfare of the people of New England. For the purchase of the Boston & Maine stock by the holding company was done with the express authorization of the Massachusetts Legislature in the law providing for the chartering of the holding company in 1909."

J. P. MORGAN SURPRISED.

Puzzled by Commerce Board's Statement About His Books.

J. P. Morgan had seen only the extracts from the Inter-State Commission's report on New Haven, printed in the evening papers yesterday, and would not comment on the criticism of the management. It is expected in the financial district that he will issue a statement after studying the full report.

Mr. Morgan apparently was surprised at the reopening of the old question as to the right of the commission's examiner's to examine the banking firm's books in a hunt for matters bearing on the New Haven. This point was settled in a conference between Mr. Folk and Francis Lynde Stetson, at which it was agreed that all data pertinent to the investigation should be provided by the bankers. Mr. Morgan said that when the examiners left his office one Friday night he expected them to return on Monday, and that the report published yesterday was the first intimation he had that the work was not to be carried further.

President James H. Hustis of the New Haven Railroad, acting Chairman in the absence of Howard Elliott, who is on his vacation, said yesterday that until an official copy of the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission had been received, no statement would be issued by the company.

He added that when an official copy was received it would be put before the Board of Directors before any formal statement was made.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 13.—Although none of the Directors of the New Haven Railroad would admit it tonight, a special meeting of the Directors probably will be held before the close of the week. The regular monthly meeting was held last Saturday. The Directors were stunned by the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and will immediately begin sessions to take up the finding. It is believed that the first meeting will be held at noon on Wednesday.

None of the Directors here would talk about the report.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 13.—Robert W. Taft refuses to talk about the Interstate Commerce Commission's report on the New Haven. He said that any statement in behalf of the Directors must come from the entire board.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—As Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and T. De Witt Cuyler, both members of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Board, became Directors of that company subsequent to the completion of transactions criticised in the Interstate Commerce Commission's report, neither official would comment upon the report tonight. Mr. Rea and Mr. Cuyler both said they entered the New Haven Board in the later part of 1910, and could not comment upon things which transpired before that time.

Special to The New York Times.

MERIDEN, Conn., July 13.—John L. Billard after reading the Interstate Commerce Commission's report of the New Haven investigation today said he did not think there was any likelihood of prosecution by the Government. He said he was still a member of the New Haven board, and would attend the Directors' meeting in New York on Thursday.

"I have nothing to say for publication," said Mr. Billard. "There has been already too much said in the newspapers. One would think the Directors were all robbers from the accounts of the transactions; on the contrary, everything was above board and perfectly proper, the members of the board being well paid elderly business men, who knew what they were doing. I think that no official statement by the Board of Directors will be given out regarding the commission's report.

"The present stage of proceedings is too critical for any of the Directors to be making unnecessary comment. I think it would be impolitic for me to give out any statement at this time."

JUSTIFIED, SAYS BULKELEY.

Ex-Governor Gets Much Satisfaction Out of the Report.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 13.—Morgan G. Bulkeley, at his Summer home at Fenwick, got considerable quiet satisfaction this evening by reading the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the New Haven Railroad investigation. Over the telephone tonight he said he thought the report fully justified all he said a year ago when he declared the financial management was "rotten."

"Aside from the question of individual liability, the report says nothing that hasn't been known by everybody in Connecticut for the last two years or longer," said Mr. Bulkeley. "I am no longer a stockholder and neither is the Aetna Life Insurance Company, of which I am President. I sold most of the stock last Winter, and got rid of the last 5,000 shares several months ago when the stock was at 70 or better.

"I don't care to offer a public opinion as to the criminal liability of the men who directed or permitted the weird mergers and company juggling in the various counties of this State. At the annual meeting in September, 1913, when I was on a New Haven train on the way to a meeting, I warned the stockholders that the management was financially rotten, but the most of them paid little heed to what I said and which has now been fully proved.

"I did my part toward influencing the stockholders, but I got out of the mess after the contest before the Massachusetts Public Service Commission, and all I can say is that I feel completely justified in my action."

BODINE DEFENDS SALE.

Says Mellen Knew All About Rhode Island Securities Company.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—Samuel T. Bodine, President of the United Gas Improvement Company, in discussing tonight the purchase by the New Haven Railroad of the Rhode Island Securities Company from his company, said:

"The New Haven Directors knew exactly what they were buying. They knew all about the company, and Mellen wanted the property. They believed it to be a wise policy to control all transportation in New England. We were not anxious to sell. The New Haven sought the sale and had to pay our price to get the company, and we naturally considered in making our price what we expected to make out of the property in the future."

QUICK ACTION, SAYS McLEOD.

Bay State Official Thinks New Haven Stockholders Will Win.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 13.—Chairman Frederick J. MacLeod, of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission, said tonight that the disclosures at Washington yesterday in regard to the New Haven would lead to quick action in bringing before the Attorney General of the commonwealth the apparent violations of Massachusetts laws. Mr. MacLeod believes that stockholders will be able to recover much of the money spent by the Directors of the road.

CALL FOR WARBURG AS BALANCE WHEEL

Conservative Senators of Both Parties Think Reserve Board Should Have a "Stabilizer."

FEAR EX-OFFICIO MEMBERS

O'Gorman in Favor of the New York Banker—David Lamar's Hand Seen in the Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Among conservatives of both the Democratic and Republican Parties there is an earnest desire to have Paul M. Warburg of New York confirmed as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. It is frequently said that the three selections that have been confirmed by the Senate are not men sufficiently well known to command instant and reassuring attention, while the two ex officio members of the board, Mr. McAdoo, the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mr. Williams, the Controller of the Currency, have their critics on both sides of the chamber.

The feeling of uncertainty regarding the possible course to be followed by Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Williams is directed chiefly against Mr. Williams. The fear seems to be that unless men of high financial standing and great personal experience are included in the board's membership, Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Williams will dominate its policy, and that Mr. Williams will be its active director, because he will be able to devote more time to it than will the Secretary of the Treasury.

This view was expressed this afternoon by a distinguished Republican Senator, who is personally very favorable to Mr. Warburg's appointment. This Senator said nothing that might have been construed as personally offensive to Mr. McAdoo or Mr. Williams, but his idea seemed to be that both officials had personal animosities in the financial world that might consciously or unconsciously be determinative of their views on broader subjects.

But there is practically no disposition on the part of the Senate to attempt to modify the attitude of the Committee on Banking and Currency in its insistence that Mr. Warburg submit himself to examination. Mr. Warburg's refusal to accept the committee's invitation to appear has disappointed some of his friends and embarrassed others. This view of the case was expressed this afternoon by Mr. O'Gorman of New York, who, in spite of reports to the contrary, highly approves of his selection.

O'Gorman's Denial.

Mr. O'Gorman issued the following statement on the subject this afternoon in response to requests for his views:

> I notice that The New York World has stated that I am opposing Mr. Warburg's confirmation. The statement has no foundation. The New York World could have found out the facts without any difficulty. I have favored Mr. Warburg's appointment, and several of my colleagues are aware of my high opinion of his qualifications. I regard him as fitted for the responsible place for which he has been named on account of his broad experience as a banker, his scientific knowledge of the system, and his absolute integrity. His delay in accepting the invitation of the Banking and Currency Committee, however, is embarrassing because the Senate is not likely to confirm an official who declines to meet a committee charged with the responsibility of inquiring into his qualifications. Federal Judges have not been offended by an invitation to appear before the Judiciary Committee. I am quite confident that Mr. Warburg will be confirmed after his appearance before the committee. I am not a member of the Banking and Currency Committee, having resigned my position on that committee several weeks ago to make way for a new Senator.
>
> It is a pity that a great newspaper, before working itself up into a fury about my alleged hostility to a candidate for public office, did not deem it of sufficient importance to find out in advance what my actual attitude has always been.

Lamar at Work.

What was regarded as an effort on the part of David Lamar and his associates of the so-called Anti-Trust League to inject themselves into the fight over the appointment of Mr. Warburg to the Federal Reserve Board, appeared today in connection with a resolution introduced by Senator Poindexter of Washington, the only Progressive in the Senate. The resolution directs the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate Mr. Warburg's personal part in the Chicago & Alton and the Rock Island deals, both of which, according to published statements of Mr. Warburg's, happened before Mr. Warburg came to the United States. Shortly after introducing the resolution Mr. Poindexter was seen in conversation with Herman J. Shulteis, Mr. Lamar's associate in the mythical league. The Chicago & Alton deal has already been made the subject of an elaborate report by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Poindexter's resolution follows:

> Resolved, By the Senate of the United States, that the Interstate Commerce Commission is hereby directed to report to the Senate the form, manner, and extent of the participation of Paul M. Warburg, recently nominated by the President for membership on the Federal Reserve Board, in the financial transactions or transfers or sale of stock or bonds of the Rock Island, Chicago & Alton, and other railway companies or systems.

A careful canvass of the Senate makes it certain that Thomas D. Jones of Chicago will be confirmed by a small majority. By a somewhat wider margin the motion that Senator Hitchcock will make to have the proceedings in open Senate will be defeated. It seems that nearly every Senator who favors Mr. Jones favors secret consideration of his appointment and some others think that the established custom of the Senate should not be changed for an individual case.

The net Democratic majority in the Senate over both Republicans and one Progressive, is ten. This means that a vote of five Democrats against Mr. Jones would tie the Senate, assuming that all Republicans were against him. But at least two Republicans, Senator Sherman, from Mr. Jones's State of Illinois and Senator Burton of Ohio, will vote for him, so that seven Democrats would have to oppose him in order to give the deciding voice to the Vice President. It does not appear likely that six Democrats will vote against him.

Democrats already committed against Mr. Jones are Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Reed of Missouri, who voted to reject him in committee. Mr. O'Gorman of New York, might also be put down as determined to vote against Mr. Jones on account of his indictment by the Federal Grand Jury for criminal conspiracy, although until he has read the official record of the indictment Mr. O'Gorman will not commit himself. Mr. Martine, from the President's own State of New Jersey, disapproves of Mr. Jones's selection, although he has not made up his mind how to vote. Mr. Lane of Oregon has about decided to vote against him. Mr. Vardaman of Mississippi, who is bitterly opposed to Mr. Warburg, seems for the moment inclined against Mr. Jones, and Mr. Walsh of Montana is mentioned unauthoritatively as of the same conviction.

Not Enough to Defeat Him.

All these taken together make seven Democrats, but there is nothing to make it certain that all of them will vote against Mr. Jones, at least if the vote is taken as it will be, in secret session. It seems now that the Democrats who will vote against Mr. Jones are Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Reed, Mr. Lane and possibly Mr. Martine and Mr. Walsh. At least three more votes would be necessary to his defeat.

There is an unconfirmed rumor that Democratic votes in opposition to Mr. Jones may be still further offset by votes of Republicans, who feel that the presence on the Federal Reserve Board of Mr. Jones would offer fruitful fields of later embarrassment to the Democratic Administration. But careful inquiry has not disclosed the names of these Republicans. The general impression is that an almost solid Republican vote will be cast against Mr. Jones on the ground that he is a defendant in a suit for conspiracy. The objection to Mr. Jones was thus expressed by Mr. O'Gorman:

"It is very embarrassing to have the vote to make a man a high official under the same Government that has characterized that man as an outlaw. Suppose the Government's characterization should be sustained by the courts and he should be adjudged guilty. What would be done with him then?"

To a suggestion that the defendant might pay the fine and retain his post, Mr. O'Gorman merely smiled.

The committee's report on Mr. Jones will be filed tomorrow.

President Wilson today denied that there was any conflict between him and the Senate over the nominations of Messrs. Warburg and Jones. In talks with callers he said he was working in complete harmony with the Democratic majority in the Senate, with only one or two exceptions. Mr. Wilson said he had definite assurances that Jones would be confirmed. He did not discuss the case of Mr. Warburg except to say that he thought the Senate as a whole would be perfectly fair.

FARMERS BACK UP WILSON.

Missouri Willing to Take His Word About Warburg and Jones

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—Expressions obtained from representative farmers all over Missouri and the principal business men of the smaller towns show that the State is almost unanimous in favor of the President's position in demanding confirmation of the appointment of Paul N. Warburg and T. D. Jones to the Federal Reserve Board.

Missouri farmers who were interviewed took the general view that President Wilson had shown himself capable of dealing with every question that had yet risen during his Administration, and their confidence in him was unshaken. They indorsed the President's assertion that every man who was connected with "Big Business" is not necessarily a criminal, and were willing to accept Mr. Wilson's estimate of the character and ability of Jones and Warburg, who were personally known to him.

The view was also expressed that as the country was waiting for the relief promised from the inauguration of the new currency system, the Senate was withholding this relief by dallying with the Federal Reserve Board nomination.

J. T. Moreland, farmer and rich stock raiser, said: "Outside of his handling of the Mexican situation, I'm with the President all the way. If he keeps on as he has started he'll make one of the greatest Presidents. I'm with him on the Federal reserve appointments."

C. C. Gillispie of Columbia, one of the biggest stock shippers in Missouri, said: "The President suits the Democrats of Boone County. I'll bank on his doing the right thing."

F. W. Lebb, cashier of the National Bank of Rolla, said: "The National Bank of Rolla is the only member in this section of the Federal Reserve Bank. I favor Mr. Jones in particular, and consider him a strong man, not from a partisan standpoint, but because he is an experienced business man."

St. Petersburg—he married early in life, but his wife never left her native village—and she is now studying in a college hitherto reserved for the daughters of aristocrats. This young woman is now the chief companion of the Czar's daughters.

Rasputin is said to address the Czar with the familiar "thee," and "thou," a freedom not even granted to Grand Dukes.

The names of an almost endless series of the best-known women in St. Petersburg social circles have been linked with that of this mysterious peasant's son. Women of unblemished reputation have fallen under the unexplained but irresistible spell which Rasputin seems to exercise.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 13.—The name of the woman who attacked Rasputin is said to be Guseva. One report is that he is dead.

On her arrest the woman declared that she wanted to avenge one of Rasputin's girl victims, who is now in a convent. After being lodged in a cell the woman attempted to commit suicide by cutting her wrist with a piece of glass. The woman declared that Rasputin was "a false prophet, leading everybody in Russia astray."

Mysticism—and mystics—have always attracted the Czar and Czarina, and the Siberian peasant Gregory Rasputin has been the latest of a succession of spiritualists, fanatics, and other persons of that kind who have gained favor at Tsarskoe-Selo.

According to report, however, Rasputin has become by far the most powerful and dangerous of the variegated procession, which included the insane monk Iliodor, the late Father John of Kronstadt, and Philippe Landard, the French adventurer.

Rasputin, who was struck down by a woman, has women to thank for his rise to power. A few years ago he was one of the thousands of peasant mystics—some hermits, some wandering preachers — who abound in all the less advanced parts of the Russian Empire. But from the first his influence over women was strong, and when he finally won the interest of the widow of a provincial Governor who had been killed by terrorists, he started on the road which led him to his present position, which has been described as that of one of the three or four most powerful men in Russia.

Through this woman's influence he was brought to St. Petersburg, and through the efforts of other women of the highest circles he gained the Emperor's ear. Fortunately for himself, he was a strong monarchist, and at first was prudent enough to pay more respect to the Holy Synod than most of Russia's mystic leaders had done. So, when the radical Iliodor, who had attacked every one in Russia except the Emperor, turned his denunciations on Rasputin the whole force of the Court and Church cabals lined up behind the new favorite and caused the downfall not only of Iliodor, but of his patron, the reactionary Archbishop of Saratoff.

Once in power, Rasputin began gradually to strengthen his own position; until a few months ago he was strong enough to come out openly and defy the Holy Synod, which tried unsuccessfully to resist the Emperor's desire to make Rasputin a priest. Since then his influence has been great. In a large house in a fashionable district of St. Petersburg he was accustomed to hold audiences for petitioners ranging from the poorest mujiks to the highest noblemen and their wives, taking their written requests and initialling them for the proper Minister or department. It is even said that he was sent by the Emperor to inquire into the fitness for promotion of provincial Governors, whom he judged according to their "purity of soul."

As to the purity of Rasputin's own soul there has been much dispute. There are those who assert that his real name is Vovykh, and that Rasputin, which means "rounder," was only a surname applied by peasants disgusted with his dissolute life. His friends, however, say that he was so distressed by the implications involved by his real name, Rasputin, that he got imperial permission to take the name of Gregory Novy, "the New Gregory." Yet scandal has been persistent with regard to his relations with his women admirers, at first among the peasantry, and later in the aristocracy of the capital.

So strong was Rasputin's influence early in 1912 that editions of the Novoe Vremya of St. Petersburg and the Golosmeski of Moscow in which his character was attacked were confiscated by the police. His influence is said to have been strong in the Beilis affair, and in a number of high official appointments. Yet there are those who credit him with real mystical insight, and declare that some of his remarks, while oracular, have deep and comprehensive value.

AMERICA TO HAVE A SEASLED BOTTOM

Curtiss Again Abandons Fins on the Airboat and Undertakes Another Experiment.

MAY RESORT TO WHEELS

Lieut. Porte Disappointed, but Might Attempt Ocean Flight by Launching from Land.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., July 13.—The America remained on land today while workmen from the Curtiss factory were converting her into a seasled by adding a false bottom. The craft cannot be taken out for another trial until tomorrow night.

The false bottom will be shaped at the bow like an inverted V which will gradually flatten out toward the stern. While the America was a blunt-nosed, flat-bottomed craft, much of her energy was lost in throwing the water to either side as she plowed through Lake Keuka. It is hoped with the new style of construction to use this energy toward helping the America to plane.

Instead of throwing off volumes of water on either side of the boat, the two sharp prows are expected to force the two streams together in the concave bottom of the boat and thus lift her upward.

"The seasled makes the most efficient planing surface," said Mr. Curtiss. "I used it at San Diego in 1910 on some of the first airboats I was building. It brought the boat on top of the water promptly and made it easy to fly. I was forced to discard it at the time, however, because it was too frail. I gave up experimenting after an airboat with this bottom came down on the ocean with a little too much force, split along the keel, and sank. We can make it strong enough on the America, however, so this will not occur.

"The temporary bottom which we are building will add about 300 pounds to the weight of the America. If it is successful we will rip out the true bottom and build a new one of this type. With its reconstructed bottom the America will weigh only about 100 pounds more than she did before. It would take fully a week to make the necessary structural change and the America could not possibly be shipped from New York before July 25.

"The submerged fins were given up because Lieut. Porte thought it might take too long to perfect them. It is possible, though, that we will have to return again to the fins."

There is very little chance now that Lieut. Porte will be able to leave New York on July 18 for Newfoundland. The air pilot plainly shows his disappointment over the failure of the various means of lifting the boat from the water.

Lieut. Porte was asked today about the reports that he had planned the transatlantic flight because his physician had told him that he could not live long.

"That's all nonsense," he said. "There is not a particle of truth in that. My health is all right."

Unless the experiments with the seasled bottom are successful, there is a chance that Lieut. Porte will have the America launched on land from wheels and will stake everything on his chances of alighting safely on land at the Azores, Vigo, and Plymouth.

It was never considered that the America had a very good chance to rise into the air again if she happened to be forced to descend in midocean. The America would float just as well with launching wheels as with a hydroplaning equipment, and the chances of being rescued would not be lessened.

DEFENDS NICARAGUA TREATY

President Diaz Says Other States' Opposition Is Ridiculous.

MANAGUA, July 13.—President Diaz of Nicaragua said in an interview today on the subject of the opposition of Salvador and Costa Rica to the treaty between the United States and Nicaragua:

"The allegation that this treaty violates the Constitution of Nicaragua is ridiculous. Our best lawyers state the contrary.

"The solicitude of outsiders for the Constitution of another country is absurd. If the motives of my administration for democratic government were not honest I would not ask for a treaty, but would prefer a dictatorship like that of José Santos Zelaya and others prevalent in Central American history.

"I am asking an alliance with the American people to insure peace, progress, and constitutional government in Nicaragua. Will our hand of friendship be rejected at the instance of our political enemies in Central America, who prefer revolution?

"I regret that any attention is paid in the United States to this outside interference in a matter concerning only the United States and Nicaragua."

Diego Chamorro, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Nicaragua, in an interview on the same subject, said:

"We regard Salvador's objection that the treaty invades her rights in Fonseca Bay as unfounded. Nicaragua would have as much right to object to the concession that Salvador is now giving to an English company for a port on the north side of Fonseca Bay."

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Costa Rica and Salvador have extended their protests against the pending Nicaraguan treaty so as to include objection to tentative amendments to the compact that would virtually operate as an American protectorate over Nicaragua. The supplementary protests, it was said tonight, had been transmitted to the State Department to be presented at hearings of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is now considering the proposed treaty.

The new objection to the treaty is based on the contention that the proposed protectorate over Nicaragua would impair the autonomy of other Central American governments. Salvador's original protest against the treaty declared that her rights in the Bay of Fonseca would be invaded if the United States received authority to establish a naval base there as proposed. Costa Rica objected that its interests in the route of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal had not been considered.

Samuel Spellman and W. J. Patterson of New York, representing American claimants in Nicaragua, appeared today before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in connection with the proposed treaty.

The committee's inquiry, which is extending into the financial operations in Nicaragua during American intervention, developed little information today, according to Chairman Stone.

Tomorrow the committee will hear Bundy Cole of New York, who represented Brown Brothers & Co. of New York in Nicaragua during the intervention period.

MOB CHASES A NEGRO.

Showed a Milk Bill and Attacked Mrs. Wright in Apartment.

A negro who found a milk bill in front of the apartment of Mrs. Beulah Wright of 1,229 Madison Avenue near Eighty-ninth Street last night, gained admittance when he said he was a new employe of the milk company sent to collect the bill, and attacked Mrs. Wright as soon as he got inside the door. Her cries alarmed tenants in the house and one of them blew a police whistle. When the negro heard this he dropped Mrs. Wright, who had fainted, and ran.

He was captured in the cellar of an apartment house at Ninety-first Street and Park Avenue by Policemen Kensler and Harper of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station. The crowd of pursuers, who had heard that a woman had been beaten, tried to mob the prisoner and the police had a hard time getting him to the police station. Mrs. Wright was sent for and identified the prisoner as her assailant.

According to the police, the negro, who gave his name as Albert Richardson of 435 West Fifty-second Street, admitted he had gone to the house for the purpose of robbery and had used the milk bill as a subterfuge to get in the Wright apartment.

MITCHEL PRAISES HUNGARY'S FIGHT

America Always Extends Sympathy to Men Struggling for Liberty, Mayor Tells Karolyi.

OUR DEBT TO HUNGARIANS

Movement Now Has Universal Support, and Freedom Is Certain, Says Count—Starts West Tomorrow.

Count Michael Karolyi, who is here to interest Hungarian-Americans in the movement for political and economic liberty in Hungary, at a dinner given last night at the Hotel St. Regis in honor of Mayor Mitchel, told the city's chief executive that the fight being waged by the Hungarians was similar to the crusade for home rule in Ireland. Speaking of his work at home and of his mission here, he said:

"The United States has always been the champion of the national democratic idea. You may be astonished that we have got no further than the first steps in the determination to carry out the long-cherished ideals of a national democracy. But that is due to conditions which were hard to overcome. Now, the movement has universal support. The day will come, and must come, when Hungary will obtain its political freedom.

"America has long given its support to the Irish cause. If Ireland achieves home rule it will be due largely to the help received from the United States. We are in a similar position."

The Mayor said that not only do democratic ideals thrive here, but that the people always extended their sympathy to men everywhere when fighting for political equality and democracy.

"On this occasion we are glad," he said, "to extend our sympathy and assure you of a respectful hearing for your object because of the debt we owe to Hungarian citizens here. I did not know the number of Hungarians in this city. The Count tells me there are 100,000."

The Mayor said he had found no better audiences during his Mayoralty campaign than those composed of Hungarians. He said he had a personal sympathy for the Hungarian cause for the very reason cited by the Count. "I believe you can depend upon the moral and sympathetic support of the people in the effort to secure political benefits and democratic ideals for Hungary," concluded the Mayor.

Prof. Gerster Arpad summarized the crusade in Hungary as an economic fight, due to the fact that Austria was a manufacturing nation, and Hungary chiefly agricultural. He said:

"Hungary has to pay enormously for the imports of manufactured goods from Austria. It is for this reason that we want political and economic independence. And for the first time we see all classes united to effect that purpose. Efforts for democracy have failed heretofore because the peasants were not considered or represented. They are now the larger part of the movement. We are fighting for the bread basket, so to speak—a right to which every nation and every people are entitled."

Count Karolyi, who is accompanied by four members of the Hungarian Parliament, will start on a tour of the West tomorrow. Others at the dinner were Alexander Konta, who was the toastmaster; Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, Harry Content, Collector of the Port Malone, Dr. Sigmund Kunfi, and a number of well-known Hungarian bankers and merchants.

He jabbed his tusk under the rope around the bars and began to lift. The strain on his neck and the bones of his skull was terrific. Then came the fracture of his tusk. When it fell to the ground he gave up completely. Samson shorn of his strength could not have been a more affecting picture.

"Now, Mr. Gunda, who is boss around here?" Richards asked tauntingly.

"And Gunda understood," Richards said afterward. "When he smashed up Thuman two years ago he was loose in the yard, and I had to get him myself. Going after him with a rope out in that yard was a different proposition from getting him today. Then he got my leg tangled up in the rope once, and I thought I was going to have a leg sawed off right there.

"Today, as soon as I got the rope on his leg, he quit cold. He knew he was beaten. You see, he remembered that I mastered him before. That's one thing you can count on with elephants. They'll always remember.

"The only way to fool an elephant when he is beyond control is to make him think he's getting the best of you. He thought he had us on the run today. He got too confident. Then, snap! I got the hook in the bracelet and he realized right away he was caught.

Gunda Spoiled at the Start.

"The trouble with Gunda is that he had too much liberty when he was younger. When they used to lead him round the park and ride people on him he got too fresh. He kicked over benches, and once butted over a soda fountain. It seemed as though he was only playful. But the basic principle of handling elephants is to make them feel that they are always under control. In India, where labor is cheap, they have a mahout and a couple of other men to take care of each elephant. At night, when the day's work is over, they are always chained up. Never for a moment are they allowed to feel they can do as they please. Whether we can ever completely master Gunda again I very much doubt."

To make Gunda realize that he must submit the keepers anchored his right fore leg close to the bars of the cage. This compels him to stand with his left hind leg stretched far out behind him. The purpose of the keepers in so stretching him with the chains is to wear him out and make him tractable in order that they can go into his cage this morning and replace his chains.

By 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Gunda was anxious for revenge. Richards tried to feed him some bread, and after taking half a loaf he pretended to reach for the other half, but instead slammed his trunk through the bars at the keeper and almost got him.

New chains will be placed on Gunda today and he will resume his place against the wall. These chains will have swivels in them so that the links cannot become twisted when the elephant tramps round them. The swivels were a suggestion made through THE TIMES by Max Gruber, an animal trainer, several weeks ago.

DAILY TRANSATLANTIC CABLE DISPATCHES TO THE TIMES

HUERTA LEAVING MEXICAN CAPITAL

Was Expected to Depart for Vera Cruz Last Night or This Morning.

CARBAJAL TO SURRENDER

Washington Predicts Swift Overtures for Peace—Carranza Insists on Severe Terms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—It is learned from a trustworthy source that Gen. Huerta will leave here some time tonight or early tomorrow morning for Vera Cruz, supposedly to sail on the steamer Espagne of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique.

It is reported here that the Espagne has received orders to delay her sailing from Vera Cruz for two or three days, and this gave rise to various theories during the day.

The Foreign Minister, Señor Carbajal, received the Diplomatic Corps formally at noon. Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, Señor Carbajal made no statement of special import during the reception, which was purely conventional and very brief. Señor Carbajal paid brief ceremonial visits to the various legations this afternoon.

Neither the Senate nor the Chamber of Deputies met, and there was no sign of the expected developments.

MEXICO CITY, July 13.—According to statements in authoritative quarters here, unless a quick agreement is reached between the contending factions in Mexico, Francisco Carbajal, Minister for Foreign Affairs, will sever his connection with the administration.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, July 13.—Indications here today seemed to show that the recent talk about Gen. Huerta quitting the Presidency had not been substantiated by the developments of the last few days.

According to some persons this was due to the fact that Huerta allowed the report of his giving up his post to be circulated for diplomatic and strategic reasons while he personally reserved the right to squelch the story after the effect of it had been felt.

Now it is being said here that Huerta appointed Carbajal as Minister of Foreign Affairs merely to rally the legal element around him in order to obtain approval of his acts by the Mexican Congress, never intending that Carbajal should become President.

Reports reached here today that the rebels in their recent capture of Zacatecas and Guadalajara executed several priests, and that this is causing much indignation throughout southern Mexico. Several prominent ecclesiastics, making their way out of Mexico through this port, are highly indignant and say they will never return to Mexico unless peace is established by some other authority than the Constitutionalists.

By The Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, July 13.—Four hundred laborers, acting under orders from Mexico City, started work today repairing the gap in the Mexican Railway connecting Vera Cruz with the capital. The rushing of the work is believed here to indicate a possibility that the first train to pass over the repaired road may be a special conveying Gen. Huerta and his family to the coast.

Quantities of rails and ties have been hauled to the break, a little over six miles from Vera Cruz, and the two-mile stretch, which has been without rails since April 21, will be restored to working order within two days at the most.

The body of Capt. Clarence S. Owen of the Marine Corps, the first officer to die here from disease since the American occupation, was started on its homeward voyage to the United States today on the battleship Florida. Dysentery was the cause of Owen's death.

Simple military honors were rendered to the dead marine, but special funeral services were held at the Municipal Palace under the direction of the army Masons and the Army and Navy Union.

CARBAJAL LIKELY TO YIELD.

Expected to Open Negotiations Quickly with Rebels.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—A real crisis in the Mexican situation is believed by Administration officials and the Constitutionalists to be at hand.

The State Department has received definite information that Gen. Huerta is certain to step down and out this time. This information does not indicate the day or hour of his passing, but indicates that he will surely resign within ten days, turning the reins of office over to Señor Carbajal, the new Minister of Foreign Relations.

Señor Carbajal, when in chief authority, according to the information of the State Department, is expected to communicate with the Constitutionalists, offering to turn the Government over to them under certain conditions. It is believed that this offer will be made directly to the Constitutionalists, and not through the A B C mediators. The Constitutionalists are expected to reply that the Government left behind by Huerta must surrender unconditionally or the Constitutionalists will advance and take Mexico City.

A leading Constitutionalist tonight made these prophecies:

First. That there will probably not be another battle before the Constitutionalists enter Mexico City unless the Government left behind by Huerta offers resistance to the advance of the rebels.

Second. Señor Carbajal, once in the Presidency as acting head of the Government, will issue an address, indicating his intention to offer no further resistance.

Third. The Constitutionalists will gain control of the capital soon by force of arms or through the Carbajal Government throwing up its hands. This event may come within two weeks.

European Powers Nag Carranza.

Constitutionalist agents here believe that the situation will soon clear if there is no resistance by the Carbajal Government and there are no foreign complications. They are not so certain, however, that there will be no foreign complications. Information was received today that the A B C Governments and certain large European nations wanted Carranza to give a definite statement of his attitude toward the recognition of the foreign debts and obligations incurred by the Huerta Government. Carranza is not inclined to give any promise to recognize these debts as valid. The Constitutionalists say that they may recognize such debts as they regard as binding on the nation, but feel that these debts must be carefully scrutinized.

There were intimations in diplomatic circles today that some of the powers would not recognize Carranza unless guarantees were given respecting the recognition of the Huerta foreign obligations. The Constitutionalists assert, however, that if those holding obligations incurred by the Huerta Government will wait until the debts can be carefully scanned, the Constitutionalists will deal fairly with the creditors.

The belief is strong in official and Constitutionalist circles tonight that Carbajal will find a way to turn the Government over peacefully to the rebels and thus avert further bloodshed. Much depends, however, on the position Carranza takes in regard to property rights throughout the Republic, a general amnesty, and recognition of the foreign debts.

There were intimations here tonight that despite the truce between Carranza and Villa the biggest problem in the settlement of the Mexican situation will be Villa. Word comes from Torreon that Villa has allowed it to become known that, while he has no ambition for the Presidency, he is determined that some men shall not be named, and one of these on the Villa blacklist is said to be Carranza. Villa is said not to be opposed to Carranza for provisional President, but he does not want Carranza or any one else actively identified with the revolution to be chosen as the regular President.

Will Not Recognize Carbajal.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The Brazilian Minister to Mexico, who is caring for the interests of the United States in that country, telegraphed the State Department today that the resignation of Gen. Huerta in favor of Francisco Carbajal, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, was expected tomorrow or Wednesday.

Minister Suarez of Chile, one of the three mediators, sought an informal talk with Secretary Bryan to learn the prospective attitude of the United States toward the Carbajal Government. While the Washington Government will not recognize Carbajal, Minister Suarez learned that it was not disinclined to treat informally with the new Administration until a transfer of power to the Constitutionalists could be effected.

Gen. Carranza has notified the United States, through John R. Silliman, formerly Consul at Saltillo and now personal representative of President Wilson there, that under no circumstances will he sanction conferences with representatives of Gen. Huerta to draft terms of peace. He told Mr. Silliman that only the unconditional surrender of the authorities at Mexico City would be accepted.

Gen. Carranza explained that he had consulted all his Generals, and their unanimous opinion was that the plan of Guadalupe, providing that he himself as President ad interim take military possession of Mexico City should be carried out to the letter.

Carranza Promises to Keep Order.

Carranze assured the American representative that the Constitutionalist forces soon would enter Mexico City and maintain order there. He suggested that the Huerta forces surrender unconditionally, and said he would give ample guarantees for the protection of life and property.

Officials here indicated that while the American Government would have preferred to see peace conferences, no step would be taken by the United States to interfere with the triumphant progress of the revolution. The Constitutionalists have been informed in unequivocal terms, however, that they will not receive recognition if excesses are committed on their entry into Mexico City.

The Washington Administration and the South American mediators are not relaxing their efforts to bring about the change of administration in Mexica City without disturbance. Plans are making for the transmission of suggestions between representatives of the two factions with a view to effecting the transfer quickly.

Local Constitutionalists think the precedent of 1860 might be followed, when Miramon, who had overthrown Benito Juarez, the legally elected President, was crushed by the revolutionists. Miramon abdicated, leaving executive authority in the hands of the City Council. That Huerta or Carbajal should retire, leaving the police power over the city of Mexico City in the hands of the council until Carranza could reach the capital, was the suggestion advanced by Fernando Iglesias Calderon and other Constitutionalist representatives.

KING TO RECEIVE KRUCKMAN

Latter Will Explain the Round-the-World Flight Project.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—A great effort is to be made to enlist King George's interest and moral support for the Panama-Pacific Exposition's round-the-world flight.

Thanks to the American Embassy's good offices, Mr. Kruckman, the Commissioner for the flight, will have an interview with the King within a week or ten days. Mr. Kruckman will tell the King the details of the projected flight, and believes his interest will insure hearty British participation.

THE NEW YORK TIMES understands that Commander Symington, the United States Naval Attaché here, has practically obtained the British Government's assurance that British warships will patrol the waters between Iceland and Scotland during the flight.

Mr. Kruckman hopes to get away from London next week, going to Iceland and thence to Greenland and Denmark.

CARRIED UP BY DIRIGIBLE.

Italian Soldier Falls 500 Feet and Is Killed.

UDINE, Italy, July 13.—While ten soldiers were holding a dirigible balloon by ropes today a sudden gust swept it from the ground. Nine of the soldiers let go, but the tenth was carried up.

The crew of the dirigible made every effort to haul the man aboard, but he fell from a height of 500 feet, and was killed.

Two Russian Airmen Killed.

ODESSA, July 13.—Capt. Firsoff, of the General Staff of the Russian Army, and a passenger were killed while making a flight at the aerodrome here today.

Steamer Virginie at Havre.

HAVRE, July 13.—The French Line steamer Virginie, which broke down on her voyage from New York, whence she sailed on June 27 for Havre, was brought into port here today by the British freighter Etonian.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

DISENTIS, Switzerland, July 13.—The Canton of Grisons today celebrated the thirteen hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the Benedictine abbey here by St. Sigisbert, an Irishman who in 614 began his work of converting the wild hunters of the Alpine forest. The abbey is reputed to be the oldest in the world except one in Rome.

MONTEVIDEO, July 13.—El Dia, the official newspaper, announces that a bill is to be presented to the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow granting to Uruguayan women the same political rights as are possessed by men, on condition that they are not incapacitated by any clause in the constitution.

FREEDOM OR WAR, DECLARES CARSON

Says He Has Authority to Set Up Opposition Government in Ulster When He Sees Fit.

BOYNE CELEBRATION QUIET

Both Sides Seem to Realize Responsibility—Firing Over Nationalists' Houses at Londonderry.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, July 14.—"Ulster has taken her final decision," says The Daily Mail. "It was announced by Sir Edward Carson at Drumbeg yesterday in a speech of exceptional gravity. He said he had authority to act, and, if necessary, 'will do so with the most grim determination.'

"With him rests the power to choose the moment for setting up the oppositional Government. He warned the British Cabinet that they must either leave Ulster alone or put her down by force. His watchword was 'No surrender.'

"His speech was delivered to a vast, impressive demonstration of Loyalists, held to commemorate the Battle of the Boyne. A hundred thousand men marched in procession before him while drums boomed and cheers filled the air.

"Throughout the province yesterday there were similar demonstrations on a smaller scale, marked by the same resolute attitude.

"While Ulster has made up her mind, the British Cabinet muddles and drifts."

The Daily Mail's Belfast correspondent writes:

"Tonight (Monday) I have been in communication by telephone with Daily Mail correspondents in all parts of the province, and from every quarter I was informed that the day passed off quietly. The Orange organization has been completely successful in its efforts to secure a perfectly peaceful celebration of the Boyne anniversary.

"The days of scrimmage and shillalahs have gone. The 'Twelfth' is no longer an excuse for excesses. An army now marches where a rabble once rioted."

The Daily News says:

"The great Orange demonstration near Belfast in celebration of the Battle of the Boyne and the minor parades elsewhere in Ulster passed off yesterday without trouble or unpleasantness. All was quiet everywhere. Much of this happy result was due to the wonderful restraint exhibited by the Nationalists. They bore insults in silence, not responding to provocation.

"Sir Edward Carson, in a characteristic speech, made bitter references to the Government. There was also a reference to the men in the army who had refused to obey the Government, and a declaration that the same thing would happen again if any attempt were made to employ the forces of the Crown."

LONDON, July 13.—The recognition of the danger inherent in the existence of two armed volunteer bodies seems to have imbued Irishmen with a sense of added responsibility.

The Battle of the Boyne was commemorated today in Ireland with tremendous enthusiasm, but there was a more noticeable absence of disorder than on past occasions of this kind.

Following the custom, a great procession marched from Belfast to Drumbeg, where Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, made his now familiar speech defying the Government either totally to exclude Ulster from home rule or come out and fight.

Lord Londonderry at Enniskillen and Walter Hume Long, M. P., at Garvagh, made speeches in a similar vein, but no disorder was reported at any point up to a late hour tonight.

Rival Nationalist and Orange processions at Glendermot reached the stage of jeering at each other, and for a few moments it looked like trouble, but the police succeeded in keeping the processions apart until the danger was over.

Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons today that the present session of Parliament would come to an end about the close of August and that the new session would begin early in the Winter, which is thought to mean December. Before the present session ends the Government will introduce its proposals for the reform of the House of Lords.

Under this arrangement home rule and Welsh disestablishment will automatically pass into law by the end of August.

Rumors of the early dissolution of Parliament continue to float around, but there is nothing to substantiate them.

The House of Lords today concluded the report stage of the bill amending the Home Rule bill.

An amendment was adopted providing for proportional representation in the elections for the Dublin Parliament, and several minor amendments were added to the bill.

BELFAST, July 13.—The insistent demand of the Protestant portion of the Province of Ulster for exclusion from the operations of the Irish Home Rule bill lent added interest to today's celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, which was carried out here with the greatest enthusiasm.

Sir Edward Carson rode at the head of some 5,000 Orangemen, accompanied by the usual fife and drum bands, the procession including a sprinkling of Orangemen from the United States and the British colonies. They marched through the City of Belfast to Drumbeg, where a great open-air meeting was addressed by Sir Edward Carson and other leaders.

The Nationalist quarter of Belfast was carefully avoided by the demonstrators and on no occasion during the procession did the rival factions come into contact.

So little did the authorities expect trouble that they depended entirely on the local police force to keep order, but all the military were confined to barracks, as is usually the case when political demonstrations take place.

A great crowd of tourists, including many Americans, came to see the procession and to hear the speeches, which were a prelude to resolutions calling on the Ulster leaders to take what steps they considered necessary to prevent Ulster from coming under the authority of the Dublin Parliament.

Sir Edward Carson was the hero of the day. Buttons bearing his portrait were worn by practically every man in the procession, while great canvases spread across the streets in the Unionist section of the city bore his likeness.

It is regarded as significant that in recent interviews which he has given, Sir Edward Carson is quoted as saying that the only condition of peace is the exclusion of Ulster "for the present," while the more remote action of the Unionists must, in his opinion, depend on the way the Dublin Parliament treats Protestants in the other provinces of Ireland.

LONDONDERRY, July 13.—The Orangemen here began the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne with a cannonade, in the course of which they projected their explosives so that they burst over the residences in the Catholic section of the city.

The Nationalists, believing the cannonade to be the prelude to aggressive action on the part of the Orangemen, organized for defense, but no collision between the two parties occurred.

While the Orangemen were attending church on Sunday and the police were busy guarding their processions the Nationalist volunteers succeeded in bringing into the city two automobile loads of rifles. The rifles had been landed at the entrance to Lough Swilly by a passing steamer from America under the noses of the crews of a flotilla of destroyers lying in the Lough.

DRUMBEG, July 13.—The Orangemen's demonstration here today culminated in a scene of immense enthusiasm around the tiny platform where Sir Edward Carson, Bible in hand, pledged the Covenanters never to surrender to coercion, to remain loyal to the Throne, and never to waver in their support of their leaders in the fight against home rule.

Sir Edward, in a speech which evoked tremendous enthusiasm, served notice on the British Government that unless it was prepared to leave Ulster alone it would very shortly find the Ulstermen recognizing no Government except the Provisional Government of Ulster. He said that he had received authority to act, and if necessary that meant he was to exercise his powers without regard to consequences to himself. The Ulstermen, he added, were not going to give way and were bound to win because God would defend the right.

Sir Edward offered the Government the alternatives of giving Ulster a clean cut-out of home rule or of coming to fight the Ulstermen. These, he said, were the only possible alternatives. Ulster, he concluded, was claiming only justice, and if it did not get it from the Government, it would take it for itself.

COUNTESS GETS DECREE.

Lady Russell, for Whom Her Husband Went to Jail, Wins Suit.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 13.—No mention was made in court today of the marriage in Nevada of the Countess Mollie Russell and Earl Russell when the Countess brought suit for the restitution of conjugal rights.

It was only the second ceremony, which took place at a registry office in London on the return of the pair from America in 1901, that was mentioned in court. Counsel also suppressed the story of the Earl's imprisonment for bigamy in marying Mollie Cooke, a beautiful American girl, while his first Countess was still alive. The latter divorced him, and now the woman for whom he suffered imprisonment has in turn brought him a second time into the Divorce Court.

Only the barest facts were related. The pair lived together as husband and wife until last February, when the Earl wrote to his wife that he had decided not to live with her again. She replied, refusing to take him seriously and expressing the hope that he would return, saying she was prepared to welcome him and forgive the past.

Earl Russell answered that he was "grimly and finally resolved" not to continue to live with her. He said he had no quarrel with her, and bore her no ill-will.

The court ordered the Earl to return to the Countess within fourteen days.

ACCUSES AMERICAN BANK.

Head of Liverpool Firm Blames It for His Bankruptcy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LIVERPOOL, July 13.—Commercial morality in the United States was very low, said A. H. Crow in the Liverpool Bankruptcy Court today, when the firm of Crow, Rudolph & Co. filed a petition. Its deficiency is nearly $1,000,000.

Mr. Crow said a firm in Pensacola, Fla., owed his firm $450,000. The American company had a guarantee from a bank in Florida, but he had been told by the Bank Examiner that the guarantee was ultra vires.

The Official Receiver said it was difficult to see why Mr. Crow accepted the position lying down. He could not think that any bank would defend such action on a question of liability.

ITALIAN PEASANT KILLS 7.

Victims Include Priest and Doctor—Carabineers Hunting Him.

BERGAMO, July 13.—A peasant of the village of Camerata Cornello, Simone Pianetta by name, today killed seven persons, presumably to satisfy old hatreds in the case of some of them, and then took refuge in the mountains, where Carabineers are hunting him.

Pianetta appeared in the neighboring village of San Giovanni Bianco armed with a gun. Coming upon the village physician, Dr. Moralia, he shot him dead. He proceeded to the house of the parish priest, Father Paleni, burst into a room where the priest was sitting at the bedside of his stepmother, and killed him before the eyes of the sick woman, who is dying from the shock.

Pianetta's next victim was Signor Giudice, secretary of the local authority, and he also shot to death Giudice's daughter, Valeria.

On leaving Giudice's house, Pianetta proceeded toward the open country and on his way killed two men who were walking along the highway. He closed his list by shooting a laborer as the latter was digging in a field.

LIVERPOOL DOCK STRIKE.

Power Stations Rendered Idle and Several Liners Tied Up.

LIVERPOOL, July 13.—A strike was started today among the Mersey dock employes with the object of enforcing recognition of the workmen's unions and bringing about the establishment of a joint board of workmen and employers to deal with disputes.

While the strike was not general, many of the power stations were rendered idle and several liners were imprisoned in the docks owing to the impossibility of opening the gates.

DUKE OF AOSTA VERY ILL.

Cousin of King of Italy Is Suffering from Typhoid Fever.

NAPLES, July 13.—The Duke of Aosta, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, is reported to be dangerously ill.

He has been suffering from typhoid fever for the past three weeks.

The Duke suffered a sudden relapse yesterday, and his condition is causing much anxiety, as there are symptoms of weakness of the heart.

MAD OFFICER KILLS FAMILY.

Feared Arabs Would Attack Them—Later Commits Suicide.

ORAN, Algeria, July 13.—Under the influence of an overpowering hallucination that Arabs were about to capture them, Capt. Gouze of the Second Regiment of the Foreign Legion shot and killed his wife and three children as they slept, and then committed suicide.

The Captain left a letter explaining that he had been suffering from hallucinations for some months of ever-increasing force. Last night a vision of his wife and children in the hands of Arabs and being subjected to torture recurred so vividly that he seized a pistol to kill them and thus save them from horrors worse than death.

As on previous occasions, the hallucination passed quickly, and he was confronted with his dreadful deed. Overcome with grief, he resolved to join his family in death, and sent a bullet through his brain.

TANNENBAUM, TAMED BY HUNGER, GIVES UP

I. W. W. Leader in Blackwell's Mutiny Sends for Warden and Promises to Obey.

ONLY 24 NOW IN COOLERS

Informers Give Names of More Peace Disturbers and All Are to be Punished.

Frank Tannenbaum, the I. W. W. agitator who was sent to the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island for raiding a church, and who was one of the ringleaders in the recent rebellion in that prison, has yielded to authority and has promised to be good. He pleaded with Warden Patrick Hayes yesterday and the Warden promised to let him out of the "cooler" this morning.

When the incendiary fire was started in the shoe shop of the penitentiary last Wednesday morning Tannenbaum was the first to proclaim a general strike. He organized the men in the brush factory, where he was working, and openly defied the Warden.

"I am against the Warden because he represents the authorities," he shouted from a table top. Warden Hayes heard his words and shortly after that Tannenbaum was in the "cooler."

Tannenbaum has been in solitary confinement about 130 hours and in that time he has eaten eight four-ounce slices of bread. He has slept on a cement floor and has been deprived of all privileges. When he called for the Warden yesterday he said he had had enough. He had no personal complaint to make, he said, but had been led to his speechmaking through a desire to help his "brothers." He hated to give in—that was obvious—and begged the Warden to give him some place other than among his old comrades in the brush factory.

"No, my boy," said the Warden, "you will go back to work in the same shop. That is just where I want you."

The announcement of Tannenbaum's surrender was made by Commissioner Katharine Bement Davis of the Department of Correction, after she had made a visit to the penitentiary yesterday. Warden Hayes talked to reporters, but he gave no intimation that Tannenbaum had yielded. In fact the Warden told the reporters that he had every reason to believe that Tannenbaum would "stick to his principles," and be the very last one to give in.

While the number of insurgents decreased by about a score yesterday, more than 100 were still holding out for their "rights." All of these remained in their cells. They include the leaders of the insurgents, all of whom are in coolers.

The population of the coolers, strange to say, is increasing. On Sunday 16 were confined there, but now there are 24. The increase is due to the Warden's investigation. It is understood that informers in the prison have picked for him a number of disturbers, and it is expected that more will be found today. Warden Hayes does not intend to let any man responsible for the disturbance go unpunished. In his 25 years of prison experience he has discovered that "squealers" are more apt to come to the front after they have been starved a few days.

"Isn't it funny," the Warden remarked yesterday, "that you have to starve a prisoner to get anything out of him. In the business world you give a man a good meal to get anything out of him. The stomach is the indicator in either case."

"Do you think this trouble is all over now?" the Warden was asked.

"You haven't heard me say that it was over," he replied.

Newspapers telling about the insurrection are not permitted to circulate in the penitentiary, but Warden Hayes said yesterday that the prisoners had all the information. Several prisoners, it was learned, received papers thrown to the Island from the Queensboro Bridge. They passed them along and the news made the rounds of the prison.

MUTINY IN TRENTON PRISON.

Convicts Assault Keeper—Driven to Cells with Pistols.

TRENTON, N. J., July 13.—Three hundred State prison convicts started a riot this afternoon when going to their cells from the workshops. The keepers did not restore order till one of them was so badly injured that he was taken to the prison infirmary for treatment.

This mutiny is the second since the law abolishing prison labor went into effect on July 1. On July 2 a number of the convicts, evidently coached by outsiders, refused either to work or go to the shops. The leaders were put on bread and water and on the Monday after the Fourth all went to the shops.

John Brown, 23 years of age, from Atlantic County, serving seven years for burglary, was leading the men from the work shops today. Alongside walked Deputy Keeper James P. Devlin. When nearing his cell, Brown turned upon the keeper and felled him. This was the cue for the others to join in a general riot.

Devlin was badly used up before the other keepers and head keeper Madden came with clubs and revolvers and backed the rioters away to their cells. Devlin was then taken to the hospital.

Head Keeper Madden made light of the riot when asked about it tonight, but he admitted that several convicts had attacked Keeper Devlin.

S. F. PRINCE, JR., SELF SLAIN.

Retired Engineer Found Dying in His Room in the Richmond.

Samuel F. Prince, Jr., 62 years old, a retired civil engineer, was found on the floor of his room in the Hotel Richmond at 70 West Forty-sixth Street early last night, with a revolver beside him and a bullet hole in his head. He was still alive and was rushed to Roosevelt Hospital, where he died just before midnight.

Mr. Prince had lived at the hotel for more than three years. He retired some years ago, when his health broke down. His physician, Dr. W. Allan Bartlett, of 27 West Sixty-seventh Street, said last night that Mr. Prince had been suffering from melancholia and had often expressed a desire to die. His nearest relative is Mrs. Eugene Cabel of Slatington, Penn. She has been notified.

BIG FOUNTAIN FOR DETROIT.

100-Foot Jet from James Scott Memorial Designed by Cass Gilbert.

Some details of the design for the James Scott Fountain, which will form the chief feature of one of the most costly memorials ever provided for by will by an individual for himself, were obtained yesterday at the office of Cass Gilbert, the architect, whose design was placed first in a competition held by the Detroit City Plan and Improvement Commission. Mr. Gilbert received a prize of $2,000 and was appointed architect of the fountain.

The fountain will be placed at the western end of Belle Isle, and will be the focal point of the new park system. The greater part of the site being at present under water, the competition programme called for the designing of all the west end of Belle Isle from a point several hundred feet east of the existing bridges in such a manner as to utilize to the fullest extent the fine possibilities for the combination of land and water effects in conjunction with those of the fountain proper.

Where the fountain itself will stand there is already land and its construction may proceed irrespective of the extension of the island. It will be on the axis of Central Avenue. The concourse immediately surrounding it will be raised several feet above the general level of the island, and this elevation will be utilized to form a cascade at the eastern side of the fountain.

The great central jet of the fountain will rise to approximately 100 feet on special occasions, though ordinarily it will ascend only forty feet, all the jets being controlled so as to form different combinations of water masses. From the surrounding pool and flanking basins and the surrounding walls many slender jets of water will play upon the water surface, and the central jet may be lighted from within the basin.

The architectural detail of the fountain has been studied from the Roman imperial period. It is intended that marble shall be the material. Appropriate symbolic statues will be placed around the concourse.

A life size statue of James Scott will be placed on the central axis of and facing the fountain.

BALLOON GOODYEAR WINS.

Makes Flight of 300 Miles and Was Longest in Air.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—The balloon Goodyear, piloted by R. A. D. Preston of Akron, Ohio, won the national elimination race to determine the third American entrant in the international race for the James Gordon Bennett Cup, which will start from Kansas City on October.

This was determined this afternoon when a message from E. S. Cole, pilot of San Francisco 1915, reported that his balloon had landed on Sunday morning eleven miles southeast of McLeansboro, Ill. Seven balloons had been reported Sunday night, but the outcome of the race was not determined until San Francisco 1915 was heard from. There was a little anxiety about the San Francisco 1915 owing to the delay in the report of the landing.

The Goodyear, which landed near Constance, Ky., made approximately 300 miles, about twice the distance made by its nearest competitor. It also won the endurance record, 24 hours and 45 minutes. The official distance will be computed by the Aero Club of America.

STEPHANI RULING REVERSED

Convict's Aunt Not Entitled to $22,000 He Can't Use Now.

The recent decision of Supreme Court Justice Lehman that a life convict is not entitled to any of the earnings of his estate beyond a sum ample for his needs has been reversed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The Appellate Division holds that a contingency may arise, such as the granting of a pardon, which might require the use of the income.

This opinion was handed down in the case of Alphonse J. Stephani, who was sentenced to prison for life in April, 1891, for the murder in this city of Clinton G. Reynolds, a lawyer. Mrs. Marie Hill of Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, an aunt of Stephani's, brought suit as residuary legatee, against the trustees under the will of Stephani's mother and the Equitable Trust Company, as the committee of his property, to have them turn over to her $22,000 which had accumulated up to February, 1913, on the money left in trust to Stephani by his mother, Mrs. Josephine Stephani. Mrs. Hill said that the income from the original $50,000 trust fund kept piling up, and that if it were given over to Stephani it could not be properly disposed of.

EVICT CITY HALL JANITOR.

Too Ill to Move, Ryan Will Be Taken to a Hospital Today.

Proceedings will be started today to have John Ryan, janitor of the City Hall, dispossessed. Ryan has been janitor of the building for several years. He injured his foot when the body of the late Mayor Gaynor was lying in state in the building and since then has been confined to his bed. A short time ago one of his toes was amputated.

Ryan was notified early in the year by Borough President Marks that he would have to vacate his rooms on the top floor of the City Hall, as the place was to be remodeled for use by the Municipal Art Commission. Ryan replied that he was too ill to leave and requested permission to remain until he was able to walk. The Borough President gave him until July 6.

When it was learned yesterday that he still remained in possession of the rooms Dr. Patterson, Assistant Commissioner of Public Works, sent several men to tear down partitions and begin the work of remodeling. Ryan protested from his sick bed, but was told that the city could no longer wait upon his recovery. It was said that he would be removed to a hospital today despite any objection he might make. He is 65 years old.

Mayor to Speak in Charleston, S. C.

Mayor Mitchel will go to Charleston, S. C., at the end of the week to remain until Monday, when he will speak at a memorial service in honor of his grandfather, John Mitchel, the Irish patriot, who fought on the Confederate side during the civil war and was killed in battle. On July 25 the Mayor will address the Forum at Chautauqua, and on Aug. 15 he will leave the city for a three weeks' vacation. The Mayor would not say where he intended to spend his vacation except that it would be somewhere "in the woods."

POLICE LIEUTENANT HELD FOR KILLING

Coroner Reverses the Action of His Jury, Which Exonerated Ashley.

ROW AFTER JULY 4 DANCE

Prisoner Was on Vacation, but Interfered When Policeman Thompson Was Surrounded.

Police Lieutenant Benjamin F. Ashley, attached to the Lenox Avenue Station, was held in $5,000 bail for the Grand Jury yesterday by Coroner Patrick Riordan soon after the Coroner's jury had returned a verdict exonerating the Lieutenant for killing William J. Nash of 47 West 144th Street on the morning of July 5. The jury held that Ashley had shot Nash to death in the performance of his duty, but Assistant District Attorney Deuel contended that the jury's finding was against the weight of the evidence, and asked that the verdict be set aside.

Samuel S. Koenig, counsel for Ashley, protested against it, but Coroner Riordan said he agreed with Mr. Deuel and held the Lieutenant. Ashley furnished bail.

Philip Cohen, 16 years, a clerk, of 22 Pinehurst Avenue; James McKnight, a driver, of 1,505 Southern Boulevard, and Jeremiah Cavanaugh, another driver, of 2,758 Tenth Avenue, made it appear by their testimony that Ashley had shot Nash without sufficient provocation. The chief witness for the defense was Policeman Edward Thompson.

He testified that a Fourth of July dance and celebration of the North End Social Club, recently organized, had ended with a fight early on the morning of July 5 at a dance hall at 102 West 144th Street. The policeman said he arrested John Farrell of 74 West 142d Street for disorderly conduct, and started with him to the station. Several of the prisoner's friends tried to rescue him, and in the struggle that followed Ashley went to Thompson's assistance. Ashley was wearing plain clothes, being on a vacation.

Farrell was knocked down, according to the policeman, and was so badly bruised that Ashley advised the policeman to take him to the Harlem Hospital. Thompson said he recognized in the crowd several members of a band that he called the "Canary Gang," and about which he said there had been many complaints. According to Thompson, store keepers of Harlem have asserted that they were held up and blackmailed by members of the gang.

Thompson said he started to the hospital with his prisoner when the shooting occurred. Lieut. Ashley has maintained that he was kicked in the stomach by Nash, who was followed by the crowd that had set upon Thompson. In self-defense he shot Nash, it is his contention, and following the shooting the members of the crowd turned and fled.

Cohen testified that he saw Policeman Thompson knock Farrell down while a large crowd surrounded the two men. He said he saw Ashley place a revolver to Nash's breast and fire.

McKnight said he was leaving the dance hall with his brother when he heard cries in the street, and saw two men on the car tracks. He said he heard a man's voice calling for some one to "get this thing off the track," meaning, as he later discovered, Nash's body. Cross-examination brought out that McKnight, who is twenty years old, had been three times arrested on charges of felonious assault and disorderly conduct.

Cavanaugh said he saw the start of the fight when Farrell was arrested. Lieut. Ashley, according to this witness, appeared in the street in front of the dance hall, pushed the crowd back and pulled his revolver. When the policeman departed and the crowd began to disperse, he said he saw Ashley cross the street, with Nash close behind him. He said Nash made no motion when Ashley faced him with a revolver and fired a bullet into his breast.

Lieut. Ashley was in condition for duty after the shooting, according to Dr. Daniel J. Donovan, a police surgeon, who said he examined him at the station at 4:30 o'clock that morning. Dr. Donovan said he found no indications that the Lieutenant had been drinking.

The father of the dead man, John Nash, said that Dr. Donovan had examined Lieut. Ashley a long time after the shooting. The police Lieutenant was not placed on the stand.

The jury was out about fifteen minutes and then returned its verdict. It was learned that the jury had read the police report of the shooting, made out by Lieut. Ashley, describing his act as one of self defense when he found himself surrounded by a threatening crowd and attacked by Nash. This report was not introduced in evidence and jurymen who were asked about it said they had not been influenced by any such report.

BINGHAM RETAINED IN JOB.

Gen. Theodore A. Bingham, former Police Commissioner, who has been one of the three consulting engineers in the Bridge Department since the first of the year, is to remain in that office although two of the offices have been abolished.

Bridge Commissioner Kracke explained yesterday that the report Gen. Bingham was to be dropped had been printed under a misapprehension. The appointment of Austin Lord Bowman as Chief Engineer of the Department, which was announced officially yesterday, leaves a vacancy as consulting engineer to which Gen. Bingham will be appointed.

"Gen. Bingham and Colin M. Ingersoll have been associated with Mr. Bowman as consulting engineers in this department," said Commissioner Kracke. "On July 1, two of the consulting positions were abolished by the Board of Estimate. One consulting position remains, and this will be filled by Gen. Bingham."

As soon as the Board of Estimate makes the appropriation for the improvements to the Queensboro Bridge, Mr. Ingersoll again will be retained by the Bridge Department as consulting engineer on traffic problems of the bridge.

KIDNAPPERS' TRUST GOT 150 CHILDREN

District Attorney's Office Hopes to End the Operations of Nefarious Band.

TEN UNDER HEAVY BAIL

Italians Charged with Stealing Frank Longo Held for Grand Jury —How the Gang Worked.

To wipe out a kidnappers' trust, which he believes is as well organized as the much-talked of pickpockets' trust, is the object of an investigation begun by Assistant District Attorney D. A. Weller yesterday, when ten Italians, charged with kidnapping Frank Longo, eight years old, son of Francesco Longo, a baker of 190 Bleecker Street, were held for the Grand Jury by Magistrate McQuade in the Jefferson Market Court. Mr. Weller prosecuted the cases.

Twenty witnesses have been subpoenaed at the instance of Assistant District Attorney Weller, who expects that they will disclose to the Grand Jury today the inner secrets of a band of kidnappers he holds responsible for the thefts of 150 children within the last ten years. Out of this number of kidnappings, thirty-one arrests have been made, resulting in only nine convictions. The witnesses to appear before the Grand Jury have definite as well as a general knowledge of the operations of the band.

Because parents have been terrorized is the only reason that more evidence for arrests and convictions has not been obtained in the past, according to Mr. Weller. It is said that the kidnappers prey principally on small but prosperous storekeepers, and their demands range from $500 to $1,500, according to their belief in the ability of the victims to pay.

When a child is to be stolen usually about six members of the band are involved, and when the ransom has been paid more than half of it is kept by the actual kidnapper. Some of the money goes to a general fund, while the remainder is divided among those who have minor parts in the abduction.

A stolen child, according to information given to the District Attorney's office, is usually placed in the care of some poor man and wife, who may not know the actual circumstances of his kidnapping. The kidnappers keep parts of the child's clothing, and perhaps a lock of his hair, and these are sent to the parents from time to time by gobetweens, with the demand for ransom money. Such tokens are sufficient to inspire the parents with a fear of death to the child, and almost invariably the money demanded is paid without delay.

When Francesco Longo told Magistrate McQuade yesterday the story of the stealing of his little boy, he said he received letters demanding large sums of money, and threatening that he would receive the head of his son if he failed to pay. He then told the Magistrate of the negotiations that followed.

Following Longo, Detectives Cavene, Trabucci, Digilio, and Grecco testified that they had spent weeks of investigation before they arrested the ten Italians charged with the crime. As a result of the testimony of Longo and the detectives, Anthony Siragusa, a flour merchant of 321 East Twelfth Street, said to be the leader of the band, was held first in $7,500 bail, which was later increased to $25,000. In connection with the same case Nicola Patrola, Icaini La Rosa, Francesco Macaluso, Pasquale Malone, Colegeri Malone, Vincenzo Acena, Catherine Acena, Muccio Palladino, and Anthony Domico were held each in $25,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

It is alleged that La Rosa was the man who actually stole the lad from his home. Through Macaluso the negotiations were conducted, according to the detectives, who further says that the boy was concealed in the home of the Acenas.

Patrola is charged with complicity also in the kidnapping of Giuseppe Difiore, 6 years old, son of Cosimo Difiore, a baker, of 133 West Houston Street, on March 21. On this charge he was held in additional bail of $10,000.

With the round-up of the alleged kidnappers in the Longo and Difiore cases it is the hope of the police and the District Attorney to put an end to the operations of kidnappers.

FAVORS INCLINED ROADWAY.

Committee Discusses Connection of Park and Fourth Aves.

A tentative plan for connecting the east side of Park and Fourth Avenues, where they meet at Thirty-fourth Street, so that both sides of the thoroughfare will be opened to vehicular traffic at that point, was considered yesterday at a meeting of the Citizens' Street Traffic Committee of Greater New York, at the Automobile Club of America. The committee did not favor elimination of the grade or the removal of the tunnel and car tracks at the Thirty-fourth Street crossing, as originally suggested by Borough President McAneny, but an inclined roadway on the east side corresponding to the grade on the west side of the tunnel.

The cost of the proposed improvement would be far less than the previously proposed work of opening the entire width of the avenues at grade, which would require closing the trolley car tunnel and the cutting of a new entrance to it at or above Thirty-fifth Street on Park Avenue. This project was opposed by many of the residents and property owners on Park Avenue. It is believed there will be no similar opposition to the new form of improvement now under consideration. Members of the committee and their engineers are to make a further study of the problem before reaching a decision.

The committee will make a tour of Manhattan on July 22 to study traffic conditions, in which they contemplate improvements. The chief points visited will include Central Park West, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, Columbus Circle, Park Avenue above Forty-second Street, and Times Square. At both Columbus Circle and the piaza at Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue it is desired to establish new traffic zones. Streets across town will be inspected with the idea of relieving congestion by establishing one-way east and west traffic thoroughfares.

FLAGLER ESTATE DOUBLES.

Andrew Freedman Allowed $20,000 for Year's Work as Committee.

Andrew Freedman made an accounting to Justice Weeks yesterday as a committee for the property of Mrs. Ida A. Flagler. When Mr. Freedman assumed the care of the estate its value was $2,000,000. The report shows the estate to be valued at $4,665,000. There was an increase in the last year of $478,000.

An additional allowance of $20,000 was awarded to Mr. Freedman by Justice Weeks for his services last year in the management of the estate. This is in addition to the regular fee. The allowance is the same amount as has been awarded to Mr. Freedman for several years past.

The estate consists to a large extent of Standard Oil securities, and Mr. Freedman said in his report that since the Standard Oil Company had been disintegrated into thirty-three subsidiaries the value of the estate had increased.

Divorced Wife Gets Divorce, Too.

A divorce was granted by Justice Mills yesterday to Mrs. Ida Eickmeyer from George Eickmeyer, who is in the automobile business in Yonkers. Eickmeyer some time ago divorced her in Reno. He then remarried and returned to Yonkers with the second Mrs. Eickmeyer. The first Mrs. I. Eickmeyer was uncertain whether the divorce was good in New York State, and so she sued and got a decree herself.

DAUGHTERS DEAD, MRS. NELMS FEARS

Atlanta Woman Appeals to Masons to Search for Mrs. Dennis and Her Sister.

INNES ISSUES A DENIAL

Portland Lawyer Admits He Was in Atlanta in May, but Says He Did Not See Mrs. Dennis.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 13.—In despair at receiving no news of her missing daughters, Elois Nelms Dennis and Beatrice Nelms, Mrs. John W. Nelms today offered $400 reward for information about the girls, dead or alive. She also appealed to the Masonic Order and the women's clubs of the country to aid in the search for her daughters. Mrs. Nelms now fears that the young women are dead, that Mrs. Dennis killed Beatrice and then committed suicide.

Reuben Arnold, counsel for Mrs. Nelms, believes they are dead and that the tragedy occurred in or near New Orleans, and search will be made for the bodies in that vicinity.

Mrs. Nelms today made public parts of a typewritten letter alleged to have been written by Mrs. Dennis and mailed in San Francisco on July 3. Here is as much of the letter as was made public:

> After sending the telegram from New Orleans I got rid of B. there and have come out here to find Marshall and send him to follow her. I have sealed her fate forever. She is now in the unknown land and I am glad I did it. I left with B. to go to the unknown path away from all, where no one will find her or myself.

Mrs. Nelms makes serious charges against Victor Innes, Portland, Ore., in connection with the disappearance of her daughters.

Innes denies all these. He says his relations with Mrs. Dennis were only those of attorney and client, and that the only money she ever gave him was for representing her in a divorce suit.

J. W. Kruger, connected with the Interstate Commerce Commission, a personal acquaintance of Victor E. Innes, said to-day that he saw Innes here in a restaurant with an elderly woman about the first week in May, and Innes preferred not to recognize him. There is no evidence, however, that Innes met Mrs. Dennis while here or even communicated with her.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 13.—John McCourt, attorney for Victor E. Innes, has issued a statement in behalf of his client recounting the whereabouts of the latter since March 1. It was issued because of rumors in connection with the disappearance of Mrs. Eloise Nelms Dennis, for whom Innes was counsel in her divorce suit at Reno eighteen months ago. The statement follows:

> Mr. Innes was in the South from about the 1st of March, 1914, for the benefit of the failing health of Mrs. Innes. Their trip included a visit of several weeks to a daughter of Mrs. Innes's residing in Devine, Texas. They also made visits to Memphis, Tenn.; Rosedale, Miss.; Birmingham, Ala., and stopped in Atlanta, Ga., from April 15 to May 8. They returned to San Antonio, Texas, where they contemplated locating, so that Mrs. Innes might be in a climate agreeable to her. They remained in the latter place from June 3 to June 28, when they concluded to locate in Salt Lake City, and returned to Portland to prepare to move.

LARCHMONT REGATTA---CUP YACHTS QUIT IN CALM

124 Yachts Sail in Second Day's Events of Larchmont Race Week.

The Larchmont Yacht Club is in a way of breaking records this year. There was a fleet of 124 yachts at the starting line yesterday, the second day of race week, and the day on which the number of starters is usually the smallest. The fleet was especially large, in view of the fact that the weather was not at all favorable early in the day, but the haze and clouds blew away about noon and the wind came in from the east and northeast fairly strong, and it blew hard enough and long enough to send the fleet away at very good speed, but it petered out in the afternoon, so that while the little boats sailing short courses got home moderately early and made very good time, the larger yachts, sailing courses of from sixteen to twenty-one miles, made very slow work of it, and the last boat was not timed until after sunset.

As the wind was from the eastward, the courses sailed were those known as the even-numbered courses, on which the yachts go first across the Sound to the Long Island shore, then diagonally northeastward to the New York shore, and then home. This made it windward work on the first leg, a reach on the second, and a run to the finish.

The first away were two Class F schooners, Venona and Miladi, the latter sailed by the veteran George Scott. Miladi had the best of it at the start, but had no chance of winning, as Venona soon took the lead and finished first, so that she did not need her time allowance of five minutes and ten seconds.

The New York 50-foot one-design class showed more spirit at the outset than they have shown in any race during the year. There were six of them, and they were all over the line within three or four seconds, with Caroline to windward and slightly in the lead, Grayling in second position and Barbara third and to leeward. In crossing all headed for the Long Island shore on the port tack, but very quickly Pleont and Grayling went on the starboard tack toward Orienta Point, and thereby worked their own undoing, for when all the fleet got to the eastward and the wind fell flat, the rest of the fleet, which had taken the port tack at the outset, were away ahead, and the last of the four to finish crossed the line nearly thirteen minutes ahead of Grayling. Samuri was first to finish, 44 seconds ahead of Spartan, which was second. When Grayling finished she displayed a protest flag, but the cause of grievance was not made known last night.

Ten of the New York thirty-footers also made the snappiest start that the class has made this year, Nepsi, Oriole, and Carlita leading the fleet. This group of boats spread out pretty well in the eastern part of the course, and while Oriole, the winner, finished a few seconds after 5 o'clock, and Lena was nine minutes astern, it was forty-six minutes later when Nirvana, the last boat to finish, was timed.

The several classes of smaller boats were well filled. In the second division of the handicap class there were seven; in the third division, the full class of six; in the Larchmont interclub class, ten out of a total of twelve; of the Bayside birds a half dozen, and of the Little Star class no less than sixteen, and all of this class finished in eighteen minutes. Two or three boats were left out in the Sound at the end, especially Arvia and Virginia of Class Q, and two of the Sound schooners.

Winners besides those already mentioned were: Buzzards Bay Class, Dutchess; Class Q, Little Rhody II.; Handicap Class, first division, Rohilla; Handicap Class, second division, Nadia; Handicap Class, third division, Twinkle; Handicap Class, fourth division, Mediator; Class R, Margaret; Larchmont Interclub Class, Lewanna; Indian Harbor one design class, Yaqui. In four special mixed classes Dipper, Verge, Merry Widow, and Ipistah; Glen Cove Jewel Class, Cyric; Bird Class, Heron; Manhasset Bay Raceabout Class, Avis; Orenta Class, Alcyone; Stamford One Design Class, Dart; Star Class, Twinkle; New Rochelle One Design Class, Virginia; American Dory Class, Mae; Greenwich Cove Dories, Barnacle; Butterfly Class, Papillon. HOBEY BAKER ON CRICKET.

Princeton Man Says Baseball is Coming in England.

Hobey Baker, the former Princeton athlete who is making a tour of Europe, takes a fling at cricket in a letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES from London, where he took in several big professional matches. Hobey thinks that the interest in cricket is declining in England and that it is only a question of time when baseball will have secured a foothold, which may mean that cricket will be ultimately ousted as the chief sport in England. He says that there is already talk of forming a baseball league in London as a result of the interest aroused by the exhibition game between the Giants and White Sox last Winter.

Aside from the declining interest in cricket, Baker seems to be most deeply interested in the great popularity of tennis in England. "In the City of London there are more tennis courts than there are players in New York," says Baker, but this statement is of course something of an exaggeration. Baker thinks that from the way the English are taking up tennis it is easy to deduce that America will have a hard task in retaining the Davis Cup this year and in winning it back if it ever crosses the water.

Flushing Boat Club Election.

John F. Rogers was elected President of the Flushing Boat Club yesterday at the annual meeting at the clubhouse on Point Ruth. He succeeds James H. Connell. Mr. Rogers was formerly Captain and Trustee of the club. Edward Martin was elected Vice President, George Scholze Financial Secretary, and Michael Posner Secretary. Mr. Scholze and Mr. Posner were re-elected, each having served nearly twenty years. George Kelly was re-elected Captain, Patrick Talbot was elected First Lieutenant, Sammy Wagner Second Lieutenant, and Arthur Moore Third Lieutenant. James H. Connell, William A. Leonard, and George Scholze were elected Trustees for three years. The annual clambake of the club will be held Wednesday evening, July 22, at the clubhouse grounds at 6 o'clock.

Thirty-Mile Race Tomorrow.

A thirty-mile motor-paced race will be the principal attraction at the Brighton Beach Motordrome tomorrow night. In this race there will be great interest in the work of Ernie Pye, the Australian rider, who will compete against Percy Lawrence of San Francisco, Clarance Carmen, and George Wiley. Another big attraction tomorrow night will be the ten-mile motor cycle race with all the stars competing. The starters will be Mike Costello, Johnny Cox, George Sperl, and Martin Kessler. Sperl and Costello will meet in a special two-mile match race for the track championship.

The professional sprint races postponed from last Saturday night will be run off next Saturday night. The list includes a five-mile national championship and three heats in a match race between Caesar Moretti and Alfred Grenda of Australia.

CUP YACHTS QUIT; RESOLUTE LEADING

Defender Candidates Unable to Sail 30-Mile Trial Within Time Limit.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 13.—The Atlantic Ocean borrowed a page out of the log book of Long Island Sound today and dished up the poorest imitation of a breeze that the cup yachts have yet set sail. They flirted with it for five long, weary hours and still it would not spruce up and blow. So the Regatta Committee took pity on the trio and called the race off. The yachts were then ten miles from home. At the rate they were going they would have finished by moonlight. There is a six-hour limit on these thirty-mile races and it simply could not be done within that time.

It was to have been a triangular race and both Resolute and Vanitie completed two of the three legs. At the end of the twenty miles Resolute had a lead of five minutes and fifty-seven seconds. She covered the distance somehow in four hours, fifty-four minutes and twenty-eight seconds. Vanitie did it in five hours and twenty-five seconds. It was Resolute's race up to the time the committee called it off.

Defiance, after drifting stubbornly alongside of the Cochran sloop and leading her at times, ran into a dead calm near the second turn and was wallowing there when the committee arrived on R. P. Perkins's yacht Ituna and flashed the welcome news. This was at 5:19 P. M. The tri-city yacht caught sight of the signal first and promptly withdrew, the others following suit to go back to Newport for the night.

This was the third race that has been spoiled since the yachts got here. Gales, fogs and no wind at all have played havoc with the regular schedule. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the yachts will race under the direction of the Newport Yacht Racing Association.

Except for a few brief clashes after the start today, it was little better than a drifting match. The committee changed the starting line and sent them away from Brentons Reef lightship at 12:15 after a delay of half an hour waiting for a breeze.

What there was of it came from the southeast, and a course was selected that would give them a ten-mile beat to a buoy four miles off West Island, then a reach west, southwest to a buoy seven miles off Point Judith whistling buoy, and a broad reach back to the lightship.

All three yachts had on new mainsails, Resolute also carrying her so-called "Batwing" club topsail and Vanitie using her new shell gaff for the first time. They got away to a good start, Vanitie crossing the line first at 12:15:10, Resolute following two seconds later and Defiance at 12:15:39. There was half an hour of exciting manoeuvering. Resolute stole into the lead five minutes after the start, Vanite took it back five minutes later, and Defiance forged ahead of both five minutes after that. Finally, Vanitie and Defiance paired off and hugged the shore, while Resolute with Designer Nat. Herreshoff aboard, stood out to sea.

There she was becalmed for half an hour and the others seemed to be leaving her, but she got a good little breeze after awhile and when the three drew together at the first turn, Resolute led by one-quarter of a mile. The times here were: Resolute, 2:06:38; Vanitie, 2:12:42; Defiance, 2:16:51. Resolute had gained six minutes and six seconds on Vanitie, and the latter gained three minutes and forty seconds on Defiance. The reach to the second mark was a farce. They were in the doldrums most of the time, and it took them more than three hours to cover the ten miles. Sails were broken out and hauled in with every shift in the wind. The crews were on the jump every minute, but they could not make the boats go. Defiance did the best work in the faint southwest air, and at one time passed Vanitie. But toward the end the Cochran sloop picked up a zephyr and got back into second place.

Resolute turned the second mark at 5:09:40; Vanitie at 5:15:35. Vanitie had managed to pick up just nine seconds in this leg. They had their ballooners out and were crossing slowly for home when the committee called the race off.

Two Draws at Olympic A. C.

Dick Stosh, former 135-pound amateur boxing champion, last night fought ten rounds to a draw with Young Dyson of Providence in the main bout at the Olympic Athletic Club. Stosh carried the fighting to the Down East boy, but tired after the sixth round, and until the final bell was on the defense.

Stosh's showing against his veteran rival was very good, considering that he has not contested more than half a dozen professional bouts.

In the second ten-round contest Mike Metigue, an Irish importation weighing 154 pounds, earned an even break with Rube Howard of Texas.

Dave Cross, brother of Leach and Phil, upheld the family reputation when he knocked out Johnny Baker of Brooklyn in the second round of the first ten-session contest.

Wolcott Training Jim Johnson.

Jim Johnson, the negro heavyweight, who is to box Joe Jeannette for the second time within a month at the Stadium A. C. tomorrow night, is training for his bout at Dal Hawkins's in Westchester. He is being trained by Joe Wolcott, the "giant killer" of former days. Johnson says he will make a better showing and be in much better condition against Jeannette than he was at the last bout, when Jeannette outpointed him.

The Johnson-Jeannette bout will go ten rounds.

Swim Record for a Schoolgirl.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., July 13.—Miss Louise Debus, a local high school girl, swimming under the auspices of the Philadelphia Turngemende, yesterday broke the best authentic record for women over the five-mile course in the Schuylkill River. Miss Debus covered the distance, which is in dead water, in two hours and forty-eight minutes. She used the double over-arm stroke until the finish when she spurted for one-quarter mile with the crawl stroke.

Ten-year old Florence McLoughlin swam nine and a half miles in the Delaware River yesterday in three hours twenty-two minutes and twenty-five seconds. She used the under-arm side and over-arm stroke.

YANKEES LOSE AND WIN IN DOUBLE-HEADER---CUBS DEFEAT GIANTS---LAWN TENNIS---TURF

ED WALSH GIVES SOX EVEN BREAK

Yankees Lose to Veteran Chicago "Comeback," but Win Second Game.

Ed. Walsh of the White Sox, who has not been pitching this season the way he used to in the good old days, "came back" in a most impressive manner by shutting out the Yankees, 2 to 0, in the first game of yesterday's double-header at the Polo Grounds. It was Walsh's first full nine-inning game this season. The veteran allowed the Yankees only six hits, but had to work every moment to keep pace with Ray Keating, who pitched a splendid game for the New York team. And yet Chicago won on New York's plays.

"Slim" Caldwell had the Sox dazzled in the second game and the Yankees divided honors for the four hours and thirty minutes of sport by winning, 3 to 1.

The two games were filled with exceptional fielding plays, one of which was a remarkable bare-hand catch by Roy Hartzell in the second game. Collins drove the ball out to left field in the fourth inning for what looked to be a double, but Hartzell grabbed the ball one-handed, leaning against the wall.

The Sox were robbed of one run in the second engagement, when Umpire Bill Dineen was unable to move fast enough to get out of the way of Blackburn's drive over the pitcher's head in the third inning. There were two men on first and second bases, and if the hit had been allowed to go it would have undoubtedly rolled out to centre field and given Faber a chance to score from second. Faber did cross the plate as it was, but Umpire Hildebrand ordered him back to third, as there is a specific rule which covers such a contingency and prevents a run being scored unless all the bases are occupied when the ball is hit. When Faber was sent back to third it left the bases full, but Ray Demmitt's strikeout made the last out and retired the side without any of the runners being brought in.

Catcher Ed. Sweeney of the Yanks got a terrible shock to his modesty when Weaver, in a slide home in the first game, caught his spikes in Ed.'s trousers and ripped them all the way up from the knee. A hurry call was sent for pins, but none was forthcoming. Little Maisel grasped what was left of his trousers and held the open ends together as Sweeney hurried to the bench. It was noticed that he appeared in a brand new pair of "rompers" when he came out at the start of the next inning.

Weaver was out on the play which caused so much havoc with Sweeney's trousers. Weaver had tried to score from second on Demmitt's single to right, but was nailed on Cook's quick throw to the plate.

Although Keating pitched excellently in the first game, he owed his defeat to himself. The Sox's first run, which would have been sufficient to win the game, as later events proved, came in on a wild pitch after Demmitt had got to first on a base on balls. Demmitt went around to third on Collins's single. Keating then unlimbered the wild pitch, which gave him an opportunity to score. The Sox got their other run in this inning, when Collins scored on Bodie's hit through Peckinpaugh.

Ed. Walsh's comeback looked to be in danger of proving a fizzle in the first inning, when the Yankees got three men on bases. Walsh worked a little strategy in this inning by deliberately walking "Birdie" Cree, which worked out to perfection, as Mullen hit into a double play and ended the inning. Hartzell had got on base in this inning on a pass and Peckinpaugh had followed him with a two-base hit.

Walsh was in dangerous holes a number of times, but he was the cool and collected Walsh of the old days and tightened up on each occasion.

Errors by the White Sox helped the Yankees materially in the second game. Their first run, scored in the third inning, resulted from a wild throw by Weaver. Boone and Caldwell had singled successively, Boone being held at second. Hartzell hit to Blackburn, who threw to Weaver, forcing Caldwell at second. Weaver threw to first to make a double play, but the throw went wild and Boone scored. The other runs were scored in the fourth on a base on balls to Cree, Mullen's sacrifice and Nunemacker's drive to right, and in the seventh on Nunemacker's double and Fournier's wild throw.

On three hits in the sixth, singles by Weaver and Collins and Demmitt's double, the Sox scored only one run. The score:

Johnson Shuts Out Detroit.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Walter Johnson allowed Detroit only three scattered singles and Washington won today's game 3 to 0, going into second place in the pennant race. Johnson himself scored the run needed to win in the fifth inning when he singled, took second and third on infield outs, and went home on Milan's single. Shanks tripled in the sixth and scored on a double steal. Morgan tripled in the eighth and scored on McBride's hit. Johnson struck out ten men. The score:

Collins Blanks Naps with Two Hits.

BOSTON, July 13.—Collins held Cleveland to two hits today and Boston won, 2 to 0. The home team made many solid drives off Morton's delivery, but spectacular fielding by Graney and Leibold cut off apparently certain hits. Morton held the Boston's hitless for three innings, but in the fourth, with two out, Gardner singled and scored on Janvrin's triple. Janvrin made an unsuccessful attempt to steal home. In the fifth Carrigan, Collins, and Rehg were passed successively, and Carrigan scored when Scott forced Rehg at second. Only two Cleveland players reached third base. Collins received a base on balls each of the three times he went to the plate. The score:

BIG JIM VAUGHN PUZZLES GIANTS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 13.—Playing as if the title of world's champions depended on the outcome, the Cubs and Jim Vaughn, the former Yankee southpaw, today evened up the series with the Giants, winning by a score of 4 to 2. Aside from one bad inning, the ninth, when Vaughn suffered from wildness, McGraw's men never had a look-in. Vaughn had twelve strikeouts to his credit and five hits was the best the Giants could do.

It was a regular Cub day from every viewpoint and they got the "breaks," even to the elements, rain stopping the contest after four and one-half innings of play with the score even and at a time when Hank O'Day's men were showing signs of slugging Art Fromme. After a ten-minute layoff the West Siders proceeded to go into the lead, never to be headed. They are now three and a half games behind the Giants.

Unlike their contest on Sunday, the Cubs performed in pennant-winning style, even to the extent of "out peppering" their rivals. The fielding was sensational. Their hits were timely and the only miscue registered was a wild throw by Vaughn which did no damage. Maybe Claude Derrick, secured in a trade with Cincinnati, and who was in the line-up for the first time, had something to do with the change. He did not get a hit and had only five chances in the field, but one of these, a grounder over second, showed him to be there with plenty of class.

In every other frame the Giants were helpless before Vaughn. He retired at least one New Yorker on strikes in every inning except the fourth, and the five bingles made off him were scattered through the entire game, one of them "bobbing" up in time to tally two runners in the ninth, after a pair of passes and a hit batsman had filled the bases with one out.

Merkle was the biggest mark for Vaughn, the first sacker fanning three times, once with the bases loaded. Snodgrass, who was taking Robertson's place, hit the air twice, his first setback coming in the first inning with two out and two on bases. Bescher fell for a slow one for a third strike in the third and then Vaughn retired them in order in the fifth on whiffs, Merkle, McLean, and Stock making up the trio. Fromme took his breeze in the sixth and Snodgrass saw three ease by in the seventh. In the eighth Stock was handed the same medicine.

Doyle started the ninth by fanning. Barnes and Fletcher got on through walks. Snodgrass was hit and then after Merkle went down, McLean batted in a pair of markers. McGraw pulled some "inside stuff" at this stage, sending Meyers into hit for Wiltse. The chief ended the game with an easy bounder to Sweeney.

The Cubs counted in the fifth. Sweeney walked, Bresnahan sending him over with a triple. Vaughn followed with another three-base blow over Bescher's head, good for one more tally. In the eighth Saier walked and scored on Zimmerman's two-base drive, Sweeney putting Heine across with a single. The score:

Boston Wins on Lucky Home Run.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—Dugey's lucky home run in the twelfth inning, with Rudolph on first base today, won for Boston, the home club losing, 8 to 7, in a game featured by hard hitting. Dugey's hit ordinarily would have been a good double, but Dolan fielded it poorly and it rolled to the fence for a home run. The score:

EVANS BREAKS UP GAME.

Steve's Home Run in Twelfth Inning Defeats Pittsburgh.

Steve Evans, "demon" batsman of the Brooklyn Federal League team, yesterday broke up the prettiest exhibition staged at Washington Park in many days, when in the twelfth inning he smashed a home run over the right field wall and gave Bill Bradley's team a one-to-nothing victory over the Pittsburgh Rebels. The win was the third scored by the home team in four games with the Westerners. Up to the time Evans so viciously connected with one of Walter Dickson's curves, a pitching duel that would have done credit to any two major leaguers had been in progress between the former Boston twirler and Joe Finneran, erstwhile Philadelphia National. Neither had an advantage until the deciding blow was struck by Brooklyn's right fielder.

Hits were few and far between, five being the total allotted each side. Only thirty-eight men faced Finneran in the twelve innings, while thirty-nine Brookfeds opposed Dickson.

A sensational catch by old Davy Jones saved the visitors from defeat in the ninth inning, for he robbed Evans, who later turned the trick, of an almost certain home run. Hap Myers handled twenty chances perfectly, and some of them were exceedingly difficult plays. Holt, a youngster who displaced Gagnier at short, gave a fine exhibiton around the short field, three times cutting down hits with wonderful stops.

Hugh Bradley, the Pittsfeds' first baseman, was severely spiked in the fifth inning in a collision with Westerzil, and may be out of the game for some time.

Pittsburgh's only real chance to win came in the fifth period, but a fine stop by Westerzil cut a man down at the plate and saved the game. McDonald started the inning with a two-base hit and was sacrificed to third by Bradley. Holly then smashed a warm liner down the third-base line, which Westerzil cleverly handled and threw to Owens in time to tag out McDonald. Brooklyn had its sole opportunity in the same inning, when Westerzil received a life on a bad throw by Holly, on which play Bradley was spiked, and went to third on Holt's single, after one was out. Westerzil, however, was thrown out at the plate on Owens's roller to Lennox. The score:

Al. Huenke on the Way.

Albert Huenke, the young ball player who has been procured by the Giants from the Dallas Club of the Texas League, is considerable of a pitcher, according to accounts from the Lone Star State and from his native town, New Brendon, Ohio. Huenke's friends in New Brendon, where he is the idol of all baseball enthusiasts, boast that there is not a baseball player within twenty-five miles of his home whom Al has not struck out at some time or another. Huenke is a graduate of the New Brendon High School and obtained his first professional experience with the New Brendon team in the Western Ohio Trolley League. He is 22 years old.

One of Huenke's home town papers has the following to say about him: "Friends here of Albert, or more commonly known as Al., Huenke, will no doubt be pleased to hear of his recent jump into the limelight by casting his lot with the New York Giants. Al. has pitched many games in this vicinity and we guess that if he can stand up against such sluggers as Dave Simpson and Jig Sullivan he won't have much trouble in the National League. New Brendon people always stick by their native sons, and every one here hopes he will succeed. You know us, Al."

Huenke will probably report at once, although the Dallas team desires to keep him for the remainder of their season.

Coast League Wants Draft Canceled

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—In a resolution adopted today the Directors of the Pacific Coast League requested the National Baseball Commission to cancel the right of draft from the Coast League now enjoyed by the National and American Leagues. Too many good players developed in the Coast League are lost to it as soon as they show promise, the Directors believe.

TENNIS REVERSALS DUE TO HOT SPELL

Davis Cup Candidates Defeated in First Day's Play on Seabright Courts.

Tennis form received a big setback in the opening rounds of the annual invitation tournament of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club yesterday on the grass courts of the club near Rumson, N. J. There were several startling reversals of form and the result of several of the matches caused the members of the Davis Cup Selection Committee considerable anxiety as more than one candidate for the team went down to defeat. The excessive heat was held responsible for several of the upsets. This was evidenced in the match between Lyle E. Mahan, the former Columbia University player, and Harold H. Hackett, Captain of last year's Davis Cup team. The latter was compelled to default his match before the end of the second set.

The defeat of William M. Johnston, the California schoolboy champion, was the most pronounced upset of the day. He was defeated by Robert Le Roy 2 sets to 1 by the score of 7—5, 2—6, 6—4. Johnston was suffering from the effects of the heat in his match with R. Norris Williams on the Westchester Club courts Sunday and did not display any of the hard driving that has characterized his work since coming East this year. He played a back court game and permitted many shots to get away from him which would not have bothered him much had he been in proper shape. Le Roy was quick to note the condition of his opponent and played a forcing game. He showed good judgment with his placement shots and came out on top in many of the rallies. Johnston's playing was a distinct disappointment.

Another big surprise was the downfall of George M. Church, the former Princeton Captain, at the hands of N. W. Niles, the Boston player. The match was decided in straight sets, both of which went to deuce. Church was defeated by the score of 12—10, 7—5. Seldom has a better match been played on the Seabright courts, as each game was replete with smart rallies, well executed strokes, and fast court work. Church played a strong net game, but his opponent made a number of clever gets. It was not until the twentieth game of the first set that Niles was able to break through Church's service. He then ran out the set. Church put up a stubborn defense in the second set, but Niles won by superior playing.

R. Norris Williams, 2d, of Philadelphia, was extended to the limit to win from Walter Merrill Hall of the West Side Club in two deuce sets. Williams is practically assured of the second place on the Davis cup team, and the fact that Hall was able to force the Harvard and Pennsylvania champion to 7—5, 7—5 was not taken as a criterion of the strength of the latter's game. His playing lacked the brilliancy and effectiveness that marked his successful encounters on the Westchester courts, while there was a general listlessness in his general playing. Hall was at his best and Williams narrowly escaped defeat.

William J. Clothier, the former national champion, gave a clever exhibition against Hugh Tallant, winning in straight sets by the score of 6—1, 6—2, while Frederick C. Inman scored a creditable victory over M. W. Washburn, the Harvard player. The match was a close one throughout, Inman winning, 6—4, 8—6. Gustave F. Touchard played an improved game and took the measure of Dean Mathey after a spectacular match of three sets.

Maurice E. McLoughlin will not compete in the singles, but will partner Thomas E. Bundy in the doubles. The latter is drawn against Bernon S. Prentice, and will play in the second round today. McLoughlin and Bundy are drawn against Touchard and Washburn in the second round of the doubles. The summary:

Achelis Cup, Men's Singles.—First Round—George P. Gardner, Jr., defeated George L. Wrenn, 6—1, 6—2; Robert Le Roy defeated William M. Johnston, 7—5, 2—6, 6—4; A. S. CLAY COURT TENNIS.

Rain Stops Play in National Tournament at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, July 13.—Rain interfered to a considerable extent with the play in the fifth annual clay court tennis championship tourney on the courts of the Cincinnati Golf Club here today. Two More Polo Entries.

Eleventh hour entries received by the Polo Association yesterday, assure competition for the open and senior championships of the United States during the tournament of the Point Judith Country Club at Narragansett Pier beginning July 20. The Meadow Brook Club and the Bryn Mawr Country Club decided at the last moment to compete for the senior title, while Cooperstown and Meadow Brook will fight it out for the "open" laurels. Larry Waterbury will be the only member of the "big four" to take part in the championship contests. He, J. Watson Webb, the southpaw mallet wielder, Rene La Montagne, an American internationalist, and H. C. Phipps, will comprise the Meadow Brook quartet for the senior and open events. Bryn Mawr expects to make a strong bid for the senior title. Five clubs will engage in the fight for the junior honors.

FRENCH WIN DOUBLES.

English Tennis Team Loses Four-Set Davis Cup Preliminary.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 13.—Contrary to the expectations of the British critics, France defeated Great Britain today in the doubles match in the second round for the Dwight F. Davis International Lawn Tennis Cup. Score: Max Decugis and Max Germot (France) beat H. R. Barrett and T. M. Mavrogordato, (Great Britain,) 6—3, 5—7, 7—5, 6—4.

The Frenchmen began in brilliant style with a superb combination, against which the individual ability of the British players availed little. The second set was full of excitement and a case of dingdong tennis throughout. In the tenth game of this set the Englishmen twice were within a point of winning, and they finally captured the set with a love game on Germot's service.

In the third set the Frenchmen made a wonderful recovery when the score stood 3—5 against them. Germot made some remarkable strokes, and the service of Decugis was so swift that in attempting to return the ball on one occasion Mavrogordato broke his racquet.

The last set was characterized chiefly by Decugis's smashing, which resembled Maurice McLoughlin's, the American expert, and he scored the winning point by a midcourt smash that could not possibly be returned.

The British team on Saturday won the first two singles matches, and need only gain one of the singles, which are to be played tomorrow, to win the round.

PITTSBURGH GETS MATCH.

Germans Will Play Davis Cup Tie on Allegheny C. C. Courts.

The courts of the Allegheny Country Club at Sewickley, a suburb of Pittsburg, Penn., will be the scene of the Davis Cup tennis tie between Germany and the winning nation of the Australasian-Canadian tie, and the match will be played July 30 and 31 and Aug. 1. This announcement was made yesterday by Robert D. Wrenn, Chairman of the Davis Cup Committee of Management, following a meeting of the committee. Chairman Wrenn has not received word as to when the German players will arrive in this country. The German team will consist of Otto Froitsheim and Oscar Kreutzer, who will play in both the singles and doubles.

The entry of the Germans into competition makes it certain that four of the challenging nations—Australasia, Great Britain, Germany, and Canada—will be represented in the international matches in this country. It is the first time in the history of the Davis Cup that more than one foreign nation has appeared in the United States. The schedule of the matches as it now stands covers four consecutive weeks, including the challenge matches, with the Americans defending.

Australasia and Canada will meet on the courts at Onwentsia, near Chicago, July 23, 24, and 25. The next week the winning nation, probably the Australasians, will move to the Allegheny Country Club to meet the Germans. This schedule will prevent Norman E. Brookes and Anthony F. Wilding, the Australasians, from playing in the Western championship doubles. The British will meet the winning nation of the Allegheny matches at the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston, Aug. 6, 7, and 8. The Americans will defend the cup at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I. on Aug. 13, 14, and 15.

POLO CUP FOR GREAT NECK.

Special to The New York Times.

CEDARHURST, L. I., July 13.—In the deciding game for the Blizzard Cups, the feature of the annual polo tournament of the Rockaway Hunting Club here, the Great Neck quartet this afternoon defeated the Meadow Brook Magpies by a score of 11 goals to 8. The match was the best played of the series and had its exciting incidents. Capt. George A. Miller, who refereed the contest was thrown from his horse while following a play in the third period. He escaped injury, but was shaken up. He was able to resume his position after a short rest.

J. Watson Webb may not be a star of the first magnitude, but he comes very near that mark, for his playing today was a revelation to behold. He appeared to be all over the field at the same time; was in the midst of every decisive play, and scored six of the eleven points credited the victorious Great Neck combination. He also was a tower of strength to the defense.

The Magpies received a five-goal handicap, but before the first period had passed the victors had almost discounted that allowance. In the fifth chapter they overcame it entirely, and went into the lead from which they were never displaced. A large crowd witnessed the match. The line-up and summary:

Reds Win in Squadron A Polo.

The fastest polo seen this season at Van Cortlandt Park was played yesterday by the Red and White teams of Squadron A, the former proving the better by 8 goals to 4. From the start the match was close. Because of the heat frequent substitutions were made between periods. The Reds got away to a winning start in the first period, when Farrelly and Barret both scored. Smidt counted for the Whites in the second frame, but Strong and Holt boosted the Reds' total to 4 with a goal apiece. In the third Holt registered again, and in the fourth period Smidt sent his second counter through the Reds' goal. H. W. Cram, back for the Whites, made the tally more interesting in the fifth, when he tallied twice, but in the sixth L. Hunt, who substituted in the second, fourth, and sixth periods for Farrelly at No. 1 for the Reds, put the game beyond reach of his opponents when he scored twice in succession. Lieut. Strong assisted him with another goal. The line-up and summary:

WHITES.	REDS.

It was not Comely's fault that the Demoiselle Stakes for two-year-olds that was run for at the Empire City track yesterday was not put to the credit of James Butler. Even with the seven pounds weight she gave Coquette, which beat her by a nose, she was the best horse in the race. That she did not win it was due to the strategy of Buxton, who rode Coquette, and showed himself as good a general as he is a jockey.

Catalina, from the Butler string, and Goldcrest Girl of the Schorr stable, were both scratched from the race, Catalina because it was a "sure thing" her stable companion would win, and Goldcrest Girl because the Schorr people thought she had no chance against the Butler nomination. That left only three starters, with Comely the choice in the betting over Brigs Sister, which was trumpeted about as "the best horse in the West of her age," as second choice over Coquette, which latter had won a good race at Aqueduct, in which she had beaten Catalina, the Butler second string, for this stake.

When the trio were sent away on their five-and-a-half-furlongs journey, Coquette at once went to the front, her jockey's instructions having apparently been to go to the front and stay there as long as she could. Brigs Sister was in second place for only a short distance, for Comely quickly took her measure, and then, Kederis, sure he had her beaten, was content to go easy and wait for the real battle with Coquette in the stretch. Coquette plugged along steadily in front, Buxton holding her to the rail as closely as he could, as if he would retain this point of vantage all the way to the end of the journey.

But when he got to the head of the short stretch the Board of Strategy, of which Buxton was the chief member, got in its work. He swung wide enough to leave a place through which it would have been possible for Comely to squeeze, and take the pole from her. It was a trap laid for Kederis, and he fell into it without a thought that Buxton might have brains as well as his mount had speed. Kederis tried to drive Comely through the opening Buxton had invitingly made for him. Just as it seemed certain he was to get the place he had been playing for, Buxton drew Coquette sharply across to the rail position, to which she was entitled by right of leadership in the race, and Kederis found himself caught in a trap. The consequence was he had to pull Comely up and go around on the outside of Coquette. This cost him valuable time and lost him the race, for though Comely came with a terrific burst of speed as soon as she had a clear track ahead, she was beaten in the driving finish; by the very narrowest of margins, it must have been, for it looked from the stand as if the Butler family had nipped Coquette at the post and won by an inch or so. The judges said otherwise, however.

When Kederis came back to the stand to weigh in he looked at the finish board and his face showed that he was astonished that the race had been given to Coquette. Buxton appeared surprised, too, but his face was wreathed in smiles as he thought how cleverly his bit of strategy had worked to make sure of a race he was in doubt about. After making his weight Kederis went up into the stewards' stand and made a complaint of foul riding. It availed nothing, however, as they showed the young man just how Buxton had been within his rights in outgeneraling him and had kept within the rules of racing in doing so. But it was all a severe blow to the Butler contingent, who had backed Comely as if it was "all over but cashing their bets." The summaries:

JUDGE MOORE'S SHOWPLANS

Will Hold Private Exhibition of His Horses at Rockmarge.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 13.—Judge William H. Moore of New York is planning for his annual private horse show at Rockmarge, his driving park at Pride's Crossing, for the last of August. Judge Moore recently returned from England where his string was shown at the international show at the Olympia and Richmond. At the Olympia he won four championships and fifteen blues, and at Richmond won a championship and four blues. His peerless Lady Seaton won the Grand Challenge Cup, but the Moore road four failed to capture the coaching Marathon this season, although in past years the cup has been won by the coach carrying the Rockmarge colors of maroon and black.

While in England Judge Moore purchased five new horses, which will be trained for the show ring and will be paraded at the driving park's annual show. Over 1,000 invitations will be sent out for the show and all the North Shore colonies will be represented. A band concert will be one of the features of the afternoon, and after the show Judge and Mrs. Moore will entertain at tea at their Summer home on the Shore in the Paine reserve. All the prize winners in the big show abroad and in this country will be shown and between thirty and forty horses will be exhibited by Judge Moore. The event will be one of the largest affairs of the Summer season.

THE NEW HAVEN REPORT.

Looking backward it is not possible to defend the management of the New Haven Railway. It does not attempt to defend itself. If Mr. MORGAN were alive he could do no more than plead in "justification and avoidance" against excessive condemnation for the miscarriage of plans for which the responsibility must be divided between Mr. MELLEN and himself above any other two men. The associates of Mr. MORGAN, the official superiors of Mr. MELLEN, do not defend their own acts. They plead that their mistakes were due to the dominance of a man of exceptionally great prestige and force of character. These are all pleas of guilty in varying degrees. The mismanagement of the road having been established on what amounts to confessions, the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot be said to come as a surprise.

The Interstate Commission itself, however, is older than these errors of management. There are several New England commissions of various ages. It is an arraignment of all of these public bodies that these "crimes" occur under their control, and are only exposed and denounced historically. The public would rather have such regrettable incidents prevented than punished, and it is to be hoped that the New Haven episode will powerfully influence a broader reformation.

JUSTICE LURTON.

An old-fashioned American citizen of the plain democratic kind passed away on Sunday morning. The character which HORACE H. LURTON wore in the eyes of all who knew him is summed up in a word much overworked, but in his case carrying more of meaning than in most—"sterling." It was that, as well as his conspicuous ability, which brought him honor at the hands of two Presidents of different parties and different views, GROVER CLEVELAND and WILLIAM H. TAFT. It was an unusual man who, though a Democrat and an ex-Confederate, not only drew from a Republican President the tribute of an appointment to the highest court in the land, but elicited that honor at a time when by precedent and practice the place should have gone to another section of the Union—when, in fact, it was not Tennessee's "turn."

In all its aspects the conferring of this appointment upon Justice LURTON was extraordinary. It is true that President TAFT consulted his own wishes based upon personal knowledge of his appointee, but that added to the honor instead of detracting from it; for this personal knowledge had been gained from association with him on the bench, in which that excellent judge of Judges had learned Justice LURTON's fitness for the place at first hand. Out of all the Judges with whom he had served he picked Justice LURTON as the ideal man for the place, and disturbed party and geographical rules to make the place for him.

Mr. TAFT wrote to Justice LURTON that in making the appointment he did so because he desired "to "strengthen that court as much as I "could strengthen it." This desire was fulfilled. The length of Mr. LURTON's service was short, only five years, but in that time he had ranked as one of the ablest members of the court and had written some of its important opinions. The highest traditions of the court were sustained by his service in it.

SIGNS OF TRADE REVIVAL.

Signs of the early revival of good business, which were abundant in the reports from authoritative sources all over the country published in yesterday's TIMES, are multiplied in today's news. There are more buyers from every part of the United States in town today than ever before at this time of the year, and the list of them fills two columns and a half of print. The beginning of the receivers' sale of the H. B. CLAFLIN COMPANY's stock yesterday was attended by 1,200 buyers, and the sales were enormous, much of the old stock which, under other circumstances, might have lain dormant a long while being disposed of. Goods were sold to merchants from all points, including Honolulu. The American Woolen Company announces higher prices for the better grades of woolens and lower prices for the ordinary cloths, an encouraging indication of wholesome trade conditions and tolerably clear proof that the woolen trade is not to be blighted by the customs tariff changes.

From many points come reports of mills reopening and men returning to work. A manufactory in this neighborhood with a weekly wage budget of $75,000 has resumed operations. At the Westinghouse works in Pittsburgh the strike is over and 8,000 men have returned to their employment. The letter to President WILSON from a Western manufacturer, printed elsewhere, stating his new found faith in a business revival, the reasons for it, and his practical expression of it, tells a story which will be repeated many times in the near future. It is not a time to crow or to boast, but all reasonable hopes are in the way of being justified.

NO ULSTER WAR YET.

Nobody is going to smile because the celebration of the Orangemen's anniversary in Ulster did not provoke the threatened civil war, except the few remaining light-hearted members of his Majesty's Government, and they will not laugh long or with much real merriment. The situation is still grave, with the threat of immediate war removed. Onlookers in other lands have not believed that civil war was possible in the United Kingdom, but the determination of Ulster not to submit to the rule of a Dublin Parliament, for the present at least, has been expressed in unmistakable terms, and the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne had a meaning yesterday which it never had before.

The orderly character of the demonstration, however, indicates that the danger of an outbreak has been exaggerated. The occasion was more like a festival than a threatening display of the martial spirit. The London Daily Mail may be justified in charging the Liberal press of London with a disposition to make light of Ulster's uprising, but the fact that the Belfast police had nothing to do in the way of quelling disorder, and that no news of serious disturbances comes from the other points of supposed danger through the ordinary news channels, which are assuredly not influenced by British political opinion, indicates that its fears as to the result were largely unfounded.

Meanwhile, the Imperial Parliament is endeavoring to adjust the strangely unforeseen difficulty with a fair prospect of an agreement between the two houses upon a compromise which will be satisfactory to the North of Ireland men. The enactment of an amendment relieving Ulster from the provisions of the Home Rule bill for an indefinite period would be a great triumph for Sir EDWARD CARSON and might not be violently opposed, in the circumstances, by the Nationalist leaders. The newly organized Nationalist Volunteers might cause some trouble, but it would probably not be serious, with the political leaders against them. So it seems that the long-fought-for Irish home rule turns out to be only half a loaf, because the great province of the North refuses to accept its share.

QUESTIONS UNFIT TO BE ASKED OR ANSWERED.

The Senate Committee is quick to see the impropriety of certain questions suggested to be asked regarding the alleged business transactions of some of the candidates for the Federal Reserve Board. The character of the source of the questions is such that there is a presumption in favor of whoever is attacked in that manner. But when the questions are identical, or relate to identical transactions, or are of similar character, the character of the source of the questions becomes of no consequence. Such questions are as improper to be asked by the Senate as by anybody, and without reference to the excellence of the motives with which the questions are asked. When such questions are asked they should not be answered. The questions should be withdrawn, and the gentlemen should be relieved of the necessity of responding either in writing or in person.

There can be no question of the Senate's dignity in refusing to press questions improper to be asked, especially after a first installment had been answered, although wandering far from the duties of the Federal Reserve Bank. If there is any such question of dignity or propriety it is raised by the Senate, not against it. The Senate would be well advised to escape from its dilemma as best it can, saving its face in its own way. It is no business of nominees to teach the Senate anything. And there are some nominees who cannot be forced into the position of pursuing duties which they might be induced to accept, if not treated too insultingly.

NEARING THE END.

Perhaps Mr. ESTAVA RUIZ, retiring, by way of Vera Cruz, from a post in Gen. HUERTA's ever-changing Cabinet, judges rather from the inability of the Huertistas to resist than from any knowledge he may possess of the willingness of the Constitutionalists to desist, when he expresses his belief that the fighting is finished in Mexico. Finished, as effectual fighting, it seems to have been since the earlier ill-managed attacks on the defenses of Zacatecas by the Constitutionalists, without VILLA's assistance. There has been slaughter, though probably exaggerated in the reports, but the obvious disposition of the Federals has been to get out of the range of the revolutionists' guns as quickly as possible.

If Gen. HUERTA really retires today or tomorrow or later in the week, it is not unlikely that the prediction of Mr. RUIZ will come true. BLANQUET seems to have lost his taste for fighting, and the condition of the defenders of the capital is hopeless. They might, if they chose, have the bloodiest fight of the war in the Vale of Anahuac, and vastly increase the roster of Mexican heroes who have died more or less vainly for their country. But that is not likely.

The succession of Mr. CARBAJAL as Provisional President, temporarily of course, would insure an early capitulation on the best terms obtainable. It is doubtful if they would be severe. That the action of the Constitutional leaders thereafter would be taken without any consideration of their obligations to the United States Government and the South American republics is unthinkable. Gen. CARRANZA's recent pronunciamento is reassuring and foreshadows no such proceeding.

PARTY LINES IN THE SUPREME COURT.

Of all Americans eligible to the place, WILLIAM H. TAFT stands out as pre-eminently the man for a place on the Supreme Court bench, and it is to be hoped that he will make his appearance in that tribunal which he will so greatly adorn; but now is not the time. Not from any considerations of partisanship or of the division of offices, but for the real interests of the country, President WILSON should appoint a Democrat. It is true that the old reasons for reckoning with party considerations have been greatly lessened. At various times in our history these have been rightly and necessarily considered. When the direction in which the new nation should grow was still a matter of doubt, when it was an open question whether it should be a nation or a loose alliance of nations, it was of vast importance to consider whether a new member of the Supreme Court should be a believer in federalism or in State rights. When the nation was fighting for existence, when it was doubtful whether it would continue as one or be split into two republics, it was essential that the President should appoint men who agreed with him on that issue.

The issues of today are serious, but the court never divides on party lines. No one reading one of the great decisions of the recent past, even on such questions as the trust problem, could tell whether the Justices writing the majority and minority opinions were Republicans or Democrats. Therefore President TAFT could afford to disregard party lines altogether and appoint two Democrats to the bench. Should a vacancy occur later in President WILSON's term he may repeat that evidence of broadmindedness. But it is still important that there should be minority representation in the Supreme Court, not because there is any likelihood of division on party lines, but because it is advisable to have different schools of thought represented there. There is a difference in the mental attitudes in which intelligent Democrats and Republicans approach national questions. They belong to different parties because their training has been on different lines of thought and because their mental bent is dissimilar. They may agree on the question before them, but they approach it from different angles. It is important that both kinds of training and both intellectual trends should be represented on the bench, because the bench itself will be better for it. Justice LURTON's death leaves only two Democrats in the Supreme Court. The Democratic representation there should amount to at least one-third of the court.

In the ordinary course of events there seems to be little likelihood of a change in the court's membership so far as President TAFT's appointees are concerned. He appointed five members, and with the exception of Justice LURTON they are young men, as Supreme Court Justices go. Justices LAMAR and PITNEY are now only 56, Justice VAN DEVANTER 55, and Justice HUGHES 52. Of their seniors Justice HOLMES, appointed by President ROOSEVELT, is 73; Justice MCKENNA, appointed by President MCKINLEY, is 70; Chief Justice WHITE, appointed by President CLEVELAND, raised to the Chief Justiceship by President TAFT, is 69, and Justice DAY, appointed by President ROOSEVELT, is 65. The Supreme Court has seldom had so large a proportion of Judges under 60.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Their Calm Rather Mysterious. Of the six competitors in the aeroplane race from London to Paris and back, three made half of the round trip and two the whole of it. Only one of the aviators, and he presumably the least experienced of the lot, as he was a man of title, made an involuntary descent, so it can be taken as proved that any country in Europe is now open to invasion, if not by an army in the old sense, at least by a considerable number of men acting in unison. And they would be capable of doing an enormous amount of damage to any fortress or capital, and of doing it at a cost in money and lives that military statisticians would consider negligible.

When one remembers the excited opposition which has always been manifested in England whenever the construction of a tunnel under the Channel was proposed, it seems strange that our estimable cousins seem to see nothing in this race except a sporting event. Nobody whom they wanted to keep out would ever come from France through a tunnel, for a single watchman, or at most three, working in eight-hour shifts, could very effectually close such a road at any moment to no matter how large an army, either by blowing up the British end of it or by letting in the sea. Invasion through the air is a wholly different matter, and though guns have already been invented with which, it is hoped, aeroplanes can be hit and brought down, nobody can have much faith in the possibility of stopping a whole squadron of them, flying high on a dark night.

The mere fact of crossing the Channel through the air at present attracts no attention, yet only a few years ago to do it was considered a desperate adventure, and its first accomplishment raised the bold aviator to the pinnacle of fame. Now the broad Atlantic must be essayed to win the same attention, and last week's continuous flight of over twenty-four hours by the German BOEHM has removed that from the category of impossibilities. With a motor that will run steadily as long as that—and with luck as to weather and the claimed ability to find the way—the difficulties are not insuperable. Then only the Pacific will remain to conquer, and that might not be so hard, for convenient islands are scattered along most of the way between South America and Asia.

A Portrait Far from Flattering. As a reason for putting back on its pedestal in the City of Mexico the statue of WASHINGTON which residents of that troubled capital, to show their dislike for the United States, recently overthrew, one of the papers there declares that WASHINGTON can and should be viewed as the hero of liberty and democracy. It says that his memory is therefore worthy of honor throughout both Americas, great men being of all countries, not of one, and that it was a mistake to view him, as did those who pulled down the statue, as "the American, the ruthless trader, lustful of gold and power, who, with Punic faith and emboldened by his wealth and greatness, tramples upon the weak."

Eloquence and plausibility are combined in these statements after the fashion so characteristic of Spanish America, but it is difficult to avoid the suspicion that the tribute to WASHINGTON was paid merely to introduce the description of the hated "Gringo." Of course we do not recognize the portrait as accurate, and wonder why qualities so alien to our consciousness should be ascribed to us. As a people, we certainly do not desire either to rob or trample upon the Mexicans. Hatred always has a cause, however, and it is not for nothing that there are just two kinds of foreigners, those from Spain and those from the United States, who excite the active animosity of Mexicans.

History supplies explanations in both cases. But ancient tyrannies in the one and territorial acquisitions in the other probably do not count for as much in causing Mexican hostility as does the too frequent failure of both Americans and Spaniards to conceal a feeling of racial superiority to a great majority of the native population. That naturally arouses Mexican sensibilities, and a good many of the adventurers who go to Mexico from this country are not exemplars of tact or courtesy.

How much the Mexicans would love WASHINGTON if he were still alive is a question. He was not a notably democratic hero, and liberty as he knew it had its limitations.

Hardly an Object of Pity. EUGENIE, wandering through the palace and gardens of Fontainebleau and noting the changes that have taken place since she reigned there in power and beauty, can properly enough be described as "a pathetic figure." The pathos lies, however, rather in her age and loneliness than in any special or peculiar grievances that are hers.

She never had an easily demonstrable right to the glories and privileges that were given to her by capricious fortune, and according to most accounts she was one of the most active agents in bringing about the downfall of the Second Empire and her own long exile.

The sorrows and bereavements of her life have had mitigations denied to the vast majority of women, since never for more than a few adventurous days has she lacked wealth and tender consideration. For a while, at least, all of her ambitions were attained, all her desires satisfied, and that is more than can be said of most mortals.

She fell far, to be sure, but the descent ceased while she was still high above the common lot, and there she has remained. Everything considered, is she not, at 88, an enviable rather than a pathetic figure?

VENEZUELAN NEWS.

Thanks from the Consul General for That Printed in The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It has afforded me great pleasure to see in this morning's (Saturday's) edition of your important daily an article about general conditions in Venezuela. I consider that by giving out to the public a true account of things as they are—as you have just done—you are thereby doing justice to Venezuela and its Government.

I regret to say, however, that not all papers follow the great example given by THE NEW YORK TIMES since its establishment, in carrying out a policy which involves a high standard of nonpartisanship, truthfulness and basic morality, and is so well embodied in its famous motto.

There is a newspaper, in particular, that seems to have made it its business to plan a campaign of "ruthless persecution" against the Venezuelan Government, by publishing news absolutely devoid of truth obtained from most unreliable sources and from systematic enemies of all Government established or to be established in Venezuela. By publishing such "trash" a great injustice has been done to industrial and other interests which on many occasions have refused to go any further when negotiations were all but terminated.

Publication of news like that which you have in this morning's paper just comes in time to reassure business between this country and Venezuela and thus restore full confidence. For this reason, I beg you to accept in the name of the Venezuelan Government and in my own an expression of our gratitude.

P. R. RINCONES,
Consul General of Venezuela.

LABOR WELL PAID.

Its Share of the Product Is Twice That of Manufacturers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Let me put the figures from the Census Bulletin of Manufactures (1910) in a form different from that in Mr. Pape's interesting letter. I state them in thousands of dollars:

Value of product		$20,767,546
Wages (16 11-20 per cent.)	$3,434,734
Salaries (4 11-20 per cent.)	940,900
Cost of material (58 14-20 cent.)	12,194,019
Miscellaneous expenses (9 8-20 per cent.)	1,955,783
Balance for manufacturers		$2,242,160

This balance is 10 16-20 per cent. of the value of the product. Out of this wear and tear have to be met. The employes, in wages and salaries, get over four billion dollars—21 2-20 per cent. of the value of the product, just about twice what the manufacturers get. This is no more than fair pay for their skill and their risk.

The worst enemy of the American workingman is the demagogue who tries to persuade him that he does not get his fair share and that the way to get more is by revolution. The American idea is to give all men opportunities to rise, and let the prizes go to the thrifty, the industrious, and the skillful. Any one who has read Mary Antin's book—"The Promised Land"—or Rihbany's recent autobiography in The Atlantic, can see how a Polish family in the one case and an Armenian in the other have come to this country desperately poor, and worked their way up, just as Mr. Lincoln and millions more have done. They were able to do it because they were cheerful, hopeful, and brave, and lived in a free country. Your sullen Socialist is generally a man who never did any real productive work and is greedy for the fruits that hard-working men have earned and are enjoying.

Board of Health's Prompt Work.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish as many of New York's citizens as possible to realize and appreciate the very efficient Board of Health their city maintains for their benefit. My personal experience has been with the department pertaining to the prevention and cure of rabies, and I am very glad to publicly express my deep appreciation and thanks for the prompt, courteous, and conscientious services tendered me and my son by each and every official concerned. Even though my appeal for help and advice regarding a pet dog, which had developed alarming symptoms after having been bitten by a strange dog, was made on a Sunday, the dog was examined, and the suspicion of rabies being confirmed, was condemned, destroyed, and the body removed, all within a few hours. This was executed with so litle confusion, and in such a considerate manner, that any shock of a really harrowing experience was practically avoided.

My son and I were advised to go to the Wasserman Clinic, in the Board of Health Building, at once, as we had been exposed to the virulent saliva in caring for the dog.

Especially do I want to mention the treatment which we received at the hands of Dr. Herman E. Street, the operating physician, and his able assistant, Mrs. Roebuck. Nothing could have been more reassuring than their manner, nor more considerate than their care and unfailing sympathy in what might otherwise have been a most distressing ordeal.

Commissioner Davis's Task.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the editorial article today concerning Commissioner Davis's trying task, the question is asked, "Is this woman's work?"

It is not a woman's work, but whose is it? It is the poor work of men who have preceded the Commissioner that has got things into the present deplorable condition on Blackwell's Island. Can they be trusted to straighten out things better than this woman, though the cost to her must be severe? The work must be done by somebody. Let the Mayor and the people stand by the Commissioner, and let the Commissioner stand by her subordinates, and the trouble will be so remedied that it will be well that it has broken out. Let us have firmness and clearsightedness wherever we can get them.

Men of public affairs, from the truant Congressmen down, are not performing with striking efficiency, or even attention, the work for which they are paid. If in England the masculine government were more efficient there would today be no such unfeminine movement as militancy among women. If women can better things let them try; the cost is great, but the need is greater.

A Consumptive Mother.

Despair and ill-health followed Mrs. V.'s attempt to earn a living for herself and her four little children. She developed tuberculosis and was obliged to give up the sewing—her only income. Six months of rest and proper food mean renewed health for the woman, it is believed. Arrangements have been made for her to go to a day camp, and she has been moved into rooms flooded with sunshine. Three of the children have been sent to a preventorium, and the baby, two years old, goes to a nursery every day. Already her courage has returned and she busies herself with crocheting, while following the doctor's orders implicitly. As the disease is not active, she is not a menace to the child. Twenty-one dollars pays the rent and buys milk and the other food that is needed, as she has few meals at home. The Charity Organization Society asks for $126 to cover these expenses for the next six months.

Gifts may be sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

The society acknowledges with thanks the following contributions sent in response to previous appeals in THE TIMES: Miss M. W. Keck, $5; Mrs. G. P. Slade, $10; "Anonymous," $2; the Nicoll children, $5; "Anonymous," $5; Samuel Friedman, $2; "T. J. R.," $5; H. Bischofsheimer, $1; Mrs. Elizabeth Schlesier, $1; "Cash," $1; Mrs. James P. Snow, $10 "Andy," $1; "H. E. J.," $2; "M. B.," $1; "C. H. J.," $5; Miss Louise R. Godwin, $5.

A Poem of the West.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an uninvited guest to the "Best Short Poems" party, may I butt in with the following choice:

WHERE THE WEST BEGINS.

Out where the hand clasps a little stronger,
Out where a smile dwells a little longer,
That's where the West begins;
Out where the sun is a little brighter,
Where the snows that fall are a trifle whiter,
Where the bonds of home are a wee bit tighter—
That's where the West begins.

Out where the skies are a trifle bluer,
Out where friendship's a little truer,
That's where the West begins;
Out where a fresher breeze is blowing,
Where there's laughter in every streamlet flowing,
Where there's more of reaping and less of sowing—
That's where the West begins.

Out where the world is in the making,
Where fewer hearts with despair are aching—
That's where the West begins;
Where there's more of singing and less of sighing,
Where there's more of giving and less of buying,
And a man makes friends without half trying—
That's where the West begins.

This, I believe, was written by Arthur Chapman, a Western poet, and appeared some years ago in a Denver newspaper. The fact that it has been widely copied strikes me as pretty good proof of its appealing qualities.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Times's Symposium a Blow to the False Prophets of Calamity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I congratulate you heartily upon your "business outlook" symposium in this morning's issue. It contains a splendid promise for the immediate future; it does more, it shows that the promise is actually in process of fulfillment. One blast of real facts has silenced the dismal wails from the political Cave of Adullam. The gentlemen who insisted that we were all ruined, and would stay ruined until they came into power again, must be surprised, or disappointed to note that prosperity decided not to wait for them.

Even before the realization of the wondrous crop of grain the signs of vigorous recovery were unmistakable. For example, the weekly trade review issued by Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago, said nearly a month ago:

> It is timely to state that conditions in the dry goods trade generally are fundamentally sound. Prices have ruled strong for the past six months with an upward tendency at the present time, and retail selling throughout the country has continued very close to normal. Stocks of merchandise are conservatively low, and * * * as buyers have not anticipated their Fall requirements to any great extent heavy demands will undoubtedly be made on wholesalers during the coming months. Road sales for the past week show a gain over those of the corresponding week a year ago, and collections are better.

Then there was the statement of The American Wool and Cotton Reporter:

> The strength of the wool market remains unchanged, the sales of the week, in spite of the holiday, totaling 5,000,000 pounds. The seasonal lull which usually occurs at about this time seems to be non-existent this year, a greater volume of business being transacted than in the same week for many years past.

This, too, regarding a business headed straight for extinction, according to the embattled defenders of Schedule K of the Payne-Aldrich tariff of blessed memory.

To touch the West again, here is the President of the Detroit Oak Belting Company, Frank H. Croul, speaking of his industry resuming with a full force:

> Men do not buy belting to look at. They buy it to use in their factories. The larger quantities that they are buying now means that they are increasing and planning to increase their output of products. In March, April, and May our business was poor, but in June the improvement was so marked that we have a full force at work now.

As to the steel trade hear the report of one of Pittsburgh's leading newspapers (owned by Senator George T. Oliver):

> Pittsburgh is returning to its old-time prosperity. This is the opinion voiced by leading manufacturers, bankers, and business men of the community. All branches of trade are feeling the stimulus of the return of normal conditions.

No one need be told that the condition of the steel and iron trade is the best barometer of business in the country. The Iron Age, in a recent editorial, said: "The corner seems to have been turned at last."

Would it surprise the "calamity howlers" to know that the steam railroads of the country, during the fiscal year 1913, just reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission, carried 1,033,679,680 passengers, or 39,307,397 more than in the previous year? Or, that they increased their freight tonnage by 239,239,857 tons, to the unprecedented figure of 2,058,035,487 tons? They added to their payrolls 115,298 men, making a total of 1,815,239 men, with wages of $1,373,830,589. Their miles of line now exceed 244,000.

The crops, which have given the final push to this great movement, are the most wonderful in all history. Over 930,000,000 bushels of wheat alone! Corn nearing 2,868,000,000 bushels, with oats and barley also bumper crops, making for cereals alone a 5,000,000,000-bushel mark, worth, at present prices, $3,418,000,000. This is the July 1 estimate of the Department of Agriculture. But, on top of that, is the yield of the farms of other products. Including live stock, this stupendous yield, which will be marketed within the next four or five months, will be worth, according to George M. Reynolds of the Commercial Bank of Chicago, from $11,000,000,000 to $12,000,000,000.

What has become of the "flooding of our markets with the products of the pauper labor of Europe" of which we had such confident predictions, and of which the gold export was conclusive proof? The gold export has stopped. The Bank of France secured all it needed; we had the gold to spare, the current rate of exchange favored the flow; hence it went. The gold will flow back, with equal ease, when we need that form of currency. With our new currency and credit facilities we will not need bullion or coin to the same extent, except as reserves.

As to the "flood of foreign goods," hear this from The Dry Goods Economist:

> Those who anticipate a marked increase of our imports under the new tariff will do well to examine the Government's most recent figures. During the first eight months under the new tariff foreign manufacturers sent into the United States only 8.8 per cent. more of their finished products than they did under the old law. This is little enough in itself, but even a very much larger increase in imports would shrink into insignificance in the light of the small part which imported goods play in comparison with our domestic production. Take wool manufactures, for instance. Our total imports of these for the year 1913 reached a value of less than $17,500,000, while the products of this country's woolen industry, according to the United States census, in 1909 reached an aggregate of over $500,000,000. It would indeed take a very much larger increase in imports to make a serious dent in such an enormous domestic production, which no doubt has greatly increased since that census.

Of course, we need not fear if imports do increase greatly. Such imports will be paid for by exports, and, normally, there will be a profit both ways. That's what trade means, in sane elementary economies, whether national or international.

Well, we all thank you for the message of good cheer you have brought us from the "captains of industry." And, maybe, there will be less talk and noise from the Cave of Adullam, and more words of heartening and encouragement to our brave and wise captain of the Ship of State at Washington.

A Polo Grounds Nuisance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to complain about the peddlers and barkers who sell anything from a peanut to a glass of lemonade at the Polo Grounds. We pay our good money to see a ball game and are compelled to act as waiters by passing along this and passing along that, and so often miss a fine play. I would suggest that the managers of the Polo Grounds put up a bargain basket to be sold at the entrance to the seats and containing, let us say, peanuts, soft drinks, sandwiches, candy, and ice cream. This would save all the commission paid to the barkers, and would give the paying public a chance to see the games in peace.

PRAISES NAVY DIPLOMATS.

Perry's Wisdom, Secretary Says, Was Proved in Mexican Difficulty.

NEWPORT, July 13.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels at the opening of the session of the Naval War College today in a speech told how the nation's foreign policy often hangs upon the action and discretion of a naval officer commanding a warship in a far-away port. He recalled incidents in which commanders of American warships had opened new chapters in American history.

"The navy in the technical diplomatic sense," said Secretary Daniels, "must leave to the Department of State the settlement of international policies, and properly so. But in the practical operations of policies affecting other nations the action of the youngest naval officer commanding the smallest vessel in a foreign port might determine the action of our Government independent of the policies which the trained diplomats might have planned. In many quiet ports the first American seen is an officer of the navy."

There had been no Secretary of State, Mr. Daniels said, who had availed himself more of the service of the naval officer as a diplomat, who had shown greater confidence in his ability and judgment, than had Secretary Bryan.

He recalled the demand made for a salute of the Stars and Stripes by Admiral Mayo at Tampico as an example of how the action of a naval officer in a foreign country precipitated "an issue not contemplated in diplomatic channels, and irrevocably committed his Government to a policy of action in support of his demand." Commodore Perry's achievement in opening up Japan to commerce, Dewey's brilliant victory and his administration in Philippine waters, and finally Rear Admiral Fletcher's occupation of Vera Cruz were referred to by the Secretary as conspicuous instances of the double service required of the American naval officer abroad.

Ambassador Jusserand of France and James Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, were praised by the speaker as "modern diplomats" who, he said, had "replaced indirectness and evasion with directness and sincerity."

"If all American diplomacy in the Spanish-American war had been modeled after that of Perry," the Secretary continued, "the United States might not have yielded to the temptation of imperialism. If our Government had followed closely the diplomatic pace set by another great Commodore of the United States Navy, who himself followed the diplomacy of Perry and squared his every action with the basic doctrines of our Republic, we would not have strayed so far afield. We would at least have been consistent in our diplomacy; we would not have laid down one rule for Cuba and another for the Philippines."

After his address at the War College, Secretary Daniels spoke to the apprentices at the training station. He told them that they might yet become Admirals under the law which permits twenty-five enlisted men to go in line for commissions each year.

MORE FEDERAL JUDGES HERE

To Dispose of Long Pending Cases—Two Mail Fraud Trials.

To clear from the calendar of the Federal District Court some of the mail fraud cases which have been pending for years District Attorney Marshall has obtained the services of two Federal Judges from other States, and began yesterday the prosecution of two of these indictments. In the courtroom Judge W. I. Grubb of Alabama sat to try Max Stern and Barney Zinn, who operated as the Reliable Real Estate Brokerage Company of 62 Delancey Street, and in another room Judge Gordon Russell of Texas began the trial of Nova Adolphus Brown, Harold Lewis Davis, Floyd N. Franklin, Thomas P. Cowhey, W. F. Gunter, Paul Smith, Herman R. Lingg, William M. Andrus, I. E. Clarke, and N. A. Brown, Incorporated, of 1 Wall Street, over the sale of $650,000 of stock of Franklin's, Incorporated, a Long Island City candy concern.

In the first case Stern and Zinn are accused of having used the mails to obtain money from persons having real estate for sale by representing that they had purchasers awaiting them. They are alleged to have required a $20 fee, and in the case of M. S. Oulds of North Arlington, N. J., to have taken as well a blooded rooster of high degree, although, as a matter of fact, they knew of no possible purchasers and did nothing to attract them.

When this case was adjourned for the day yesterday afternoon Mrs. Oulds, who had been a witness for the Government, complained to Assistant United States District Attorney James W. Osborne that she had been insulted by some of the friends of the defendants in the corridor. They had, she said, objected to her account of how she came to give up her fowl and to her assertion that the defendants had taken the "last dollar she had in the house."

Mrs. Oulds was not patient over the insult and was complaining loudly, so Post Office Inspector Barber warned the friends of the defendants that he would arrest them if they interfered with his witness, and took Mr. and Mrs. Oulds out one way, while the defendants' party left by another elevator.

In the case of Franklin's, Incorporated, the Government is basing its case on the promises held out to investors in the advertising literature sent out. In that it was promised that Franklin's candies would "be sold in every hamlet throughout the United States, and we will be cutting one of those 1,000 per cent. melons that other candy makers have been cutting for many years." A circular, it is charged, showed a picture of a five-story factory as "Our New Home," although, as a matter of fact, the Franklin's quarters were only a two-story building.

Assistant District Attorney Spence and ex-Assistant District Attorney John N. Boyle are prosecuting the candy stock sellers and they are defended by George D. Zahm and Arthur M. Sagar.

A Pretty Group of Bathers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to say to you, sir, that the best-looking bunch of girls I have seen anywhere, in any print, or at any time, is the bunch of bathers in your Sunday supplement, July 12. Where did you ever find them? Are they the real thing, or some artist's fancy? I refer especially to their facial pulchritude—figures don't count—and fairer faces than theirs, I repeat in a loud voice, I have never previously beheld in such numbers at one time! They are not New York girls, are they?

THE DREAM TREE.

The magic wonderful Dreamland Tree
Bears a dream on every bough;
It's easy to make a Dream Tree grow
At night—if you learn just how.

This is the way: when the candle's snuffed
And you are snug in bed,
Plant some dream-tree seed in the pillow soft
That lies beneath your head.

As soon as all is dark and still,
And mother's gone below,
Lie quietly and watch, for then
The tree begins to grow.

Over the bed it spreads, and if
You keep a sharp lookout,
You'll see the branches form, its leaves
And little flowers bud out.

The dream-fruit ripens very fast,
So, all at once—ker-plop—
A fine one falls from off its stem
Right on your face to drop!

If on your forehead—that means luck—
(Your nose it's best to miss!)
But, when a dream falls on your lips,
You're going to get a kiss!

CHICAGO GOES AFTER OLD WORLD'S IDEAS

Sends Big Commission to Study Terminals, Waterfronts, Health, and Schools.

CITY FACES HARD PROBLEM

Must Find Means for Dispersing Great Traffic Through Small, Congested Area.

The biggest and most important delegation sent from Chicago to Europe since the World's Fair of 1893 reached New York yesterday. It is known as the Chicago Railway Terminal Commission and Associates. With them are Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Superintendent of Schools, and Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton.

In the first group are twenty men, many of them experts either on railways, engineering, architecture, or finance; six representatives of the Board of Aldermen, and half a dozen men of prominence in matters connected with railways or education.

In the printed list of members of the party, whose purpose is to study railway terminals, harbor and transportation facilities in American and European cities with the view of getting the best ideas for the development of terminal facilities in Chicago, each member has a brief biography.

At the head of the commission is John F. Wallace, formerly Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal. The other members of the commission are Walter L. Fisher, ex-Secretary of the Interior; Bion J. Arnold, Chairman of the Board of Supervising Engineers of Chicago Traction; Edward H. Bennett, consulting architect of the Chicago Plan Commission; Lawrence E. McGann, Commissioner of Public Works of Chicago; John W. Beckwith, First Assistant Corporation Counsel of the city, and Ellis Geiger, Chairman of the Aldermanic Committee on Railway Terminals.

To assist the seven members of the Railway Commission and to gather ideas about other things of importance in the Government of big cities, five Aldermen and the Secretary of the City Council Committees were appointed by Mayor Harrison to go along, and seven men were invited to accompany the committee.

The commission visited Toronto, Montreal and Boston on the way here, and spent much of yesterday examining New York terminals. They inspected the Grand Central Terminal, then called on Mayor Mitchel, who presented them to Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith. He showed and explained the harbor, the docks and the Bush Terminal.

Alderman Geiger, who is credited with being the father of the plans for the terminals, said last night, explaining the work ahead of the commission:

"The terminal proposition in Chicago presents many difficulties. First we have a complicated set of street railways. In Chicago are 5,000 miles of main tracks belonging to these lines. Again, 85,000 miles of railroad tracks, one-third of the railway mileage in the United States, centre or terminate in Chicago. Within a radius of three-quarters of a mile, in our most congested district, are six railroad passenger terminals. Besides, a very large proportion of our freight is handled in that territory.

"Except the Northwestern Passenger Terminal, finished this year, all these terminals have outgrown their usefulness. The Pennsylvania, Burlington, Alton, St. Paul, and Fort Wayne roads have just got ordinances through the City Council providing for a single terminal development to cost $70,000,000. It will be used as a passenger terminal for these railways and for a freight terminal for the Pennsylvania and C. B. & Q. In addition, four other railway terminals will have to be provided for now. Work will start on the Union Terminal about Oct. 1, and it is estimated that it will take five years to finish.

"We are due in Liverpool on July 20. After an inspection of the docks, we go to London, thence to Paris, Frankfort, Vienna, Budapest, Dresden, Berlin, Leipsic, Hamburg, Kiel, Copenhagen, and Stockholm. We sail from Liverpool on the Mauretania on Aug. 22."

Dr. Willis O. Nance, who, as an associate of the commission, will look into health matters in foreign cities, will also investigate the vice question. Representatives of the Board of Education, it was said, will look particularly into the question of noises of terminals as affecting schools.

Neither Mrs. Young nor Mrs. Britton is officially a member of the body, but were sent along by the Board of Education in the hope that they might gain useful information for Chicago's schools.

The men were entertained at Claremont at dinner last night by Charles R. Crane. They will sail today on the Lusitania.

STUDENTS VISIT THE TIMES.

Members of the Columbia Summer School See a Paper Made.

The making of a newspaper was explained and demonstrated last night to thirty-seven students of the Columbia Summer School, who were taken through the Times Annex in two squads by Leonidas W. Crawford, Assistant to to the Director of the Summer School, and Frank G. Meredith. After the eleven floors of the Annex had been visited, the students went to the top of the tower of the Times Building and had a view of Broadway and environs by white light.

As they went through the Annex the students seemed most impressed with the extent and variety of the departments linked together in the production of THE TIMES. Many of them were surprised to find a restaurant, rest rooms, a library, a large business office, council rooms, a "morgue," and so many men all in one newspaper building.

The visiting of the Annex is part of the regular programme of the Columbia Summer School. The students who have registered to take the course known as University Excursions, Division 2, have been divided into five parties to visit certain institutions of educational and cultural value in the city. Last night the first party were in the Annex, the other four being scheduled to inspect the building on later dates.

Excursions taken to date by the students have included visits to the Metropolitan Museum, the Immigration Station on Ellis Island, the Children's Farm School in Thomas Jefferson Park, the Jumel Mansion, and the Van Cortlandt Mansion, Museum, and Park. The New York Stock Exchange, the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the American Museum of Natural History, the Zoological and Botanical Gardens in Bronx Park, and various sections of the city will be visited by the students before the end of the Summer session.

Stephen B. Halsey, who died at his home, in 957 Boulevard, Long Island City, on Feb. 13, left an estate valued at $39,328.45 in real estate and $123,295.63 in personal property, according to affidavits filed yesterday with Philip Frank, transfer tax appraiser for Queens.

The real estate grew out of the investments made by Halsey's father, who was associated with John Jacob Astor in founding Astoria. The personal property consists of stocks and bonds. The estate is equally divided between his widow, Mrs. Adelia V. Halsey, and their children, Harold V. Halsey, Francis R. Halsey, and Ruth V. Halsey.

JEWELERS' BOARD DEFENDS ITS WORK

National Body, Denying Apfel Charges, Explains Its Activities to Protect Trade.

DOES NOT RUN LAW OFFICE

Never Attempts to Collect Claims—Spares No Expense in Fighting All Frauds.

The National Jewelers' Board of Trade filed yesterday with the Attorney General through its counsel, Beekman, Menken & Griscom of 52 William Street, its brief in answer to the charges brought against it by Charles L. Apfel. The Attorney General has been conducting hearings through his deputy, Joseph A. Kellogg, to see if there is ground for the bringing of a suit against the national board on the charge of practicing law illegally, and the New York County Lawyers' Association has intervened to watch the proceedings.

In the first place the national board enters a general denial of Mr. Apfel's charges as far as any illegal act is concerned. They were that it conducted a collection agency and law office; that it acted as counsel and attorney in collections and litigations; that it advised with insolvent debtors concerning settlements with their creditors, and that it maintained a rating book. Then the board asserts specifically that it never attempted to collect claims directly or through any of its employes, but that it always sent them to attorneys selected from a list of bonded lawyers. Moreover, it stated that it never appeared in bankruptcy proceedings on behalf of creditors or permitted its employes to act as proxies in bankruptcies.

Much of Mr. Apfel's complaint rests upon Article 7 of the board's constitution. In that it is provided that as soon as a bankruptcy or request for extension of time of payment in the jewelry or kindred trades occurs the board shall send a notice to all members, who must then send any claims they have to the board for collection. A settlement or grant of an extension of time to a debtor which has been authorized by the committee of creditors may be submitted to the Finance Committee of the board, which may then accept the same, making it obligatory on every creditor member. Non-members of the board may be invited to meet its members and discuss failures, in which they are interested, upon conditions approved by the Finance Committee.

Great Risks in the Trade.

In justifying its work the board calls attention to the great risks to which the jewelers' trade has always been exposed. In the earliest times, it says, they usually took the form of downright robbery.

"Today the loss is more frequently caused," it says, "through concealment of assets, accompanied by fraudulent bankruptcy, directed by a trained mind of an unscrupulous person—sometimes one who has been admitted to practice at the bar."

The board has made it difficult for thief to dispose of the profits of his crime by its system of rapid intercommunication, but its main activities are now against the more subtle and less direct forms of wrongdoing.

The principal evils injuring the honest dealer the board defines as the smuggler who can undersell by avoiding paying duty, the false stamper who, with an excess of alloy, deceives the public, the fraudulent bankrupt who enriches himself with concealed assets, the attorney who aids him in his wrongdoing, and the honest, incapable dealer who fails through bad business methods.

It was to guide against these commercial pests that the National Board was formed, "not as a business or for profit, but simply as a guild striving to solve trade problems." Its activities, the board declares, do not amount to the practice of the law in any sense, but simply amount to assisting its members.

In cases of honest failures the board has supplied receivers skilled in the jewelry business to the great advantage of both the estate and the creditors, and it says:

"If it were possible to detail the history of the extensions during the panic year of 1907, it would be shown that the afairs of concerns having capital invested of many millions of dollars were administered under the supervision of members of the board, aided by one or more prominent bankers, for a period of several years with the result that not alone were the creditors paid in full, but that a large capital remained to the debtor. All this work was done absolutely without compensation."

Ferret Out Dishonest Bankruptcies

Then the board refers to dishonest bankruptcies and says:

"Probably this honorable tribunal, having in mind the more refreshing practices of the law, is unacquainted with the subterranean methods of many of the lower classes of the 'bankruptcy ring,' and cannot fully appreciate the ingenuity of devices and the devious ways that are adopted to make perpetration of fraud successful. To thwart all the varieties of skillful schemes devised to defraud, drastic and uncompromising methods are necessary, so that the board makes it an invariable rule, regardless of the expense involved, to fight fraud once it is scented in a bankruptcy case. It employs detectives, auditors and lawyers, and strives by continuous persistent endeavor, often extending over a period of many years, to defeat the wrongdoer."

It was because of the willingness of members confronted by involved cases of fraud to agree to a settlement rather than enter on a long, discouraging fight that the board made its Article 7 so strict. For, as Meyer D. Rothschild, twice President of the National Board, said in a passage of his evidence, quoted in the brief:

"The great body of members who belong to the Board of Trade belong to it for the insurance it gives, and the insurance is not the chap we catch, not the man we send to jail, nor the attorney we disbar, but for every man we catch are the twenty men we prevent from doing the same thing—the twenty shyster attorneys that we have driven out of business in this country."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Lasky Feature Play Company, affiliated with David Belasco, the Liebler Company, the Famous Players Film Company, Harold MacGrath, and George Barr McCutcheon, has completed arrangements with Walker & Co. of London and Dusseldorf of Germany, for the placing of the American films abroad on a renting basis. The deal was made by Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky concern, who has just returned from abroad.

The cast will include Helen Lowell, May Allison, Robert Ober, Edward Begley, Alan Brooks, Jean Shelby, Harry English, and George Seyboldt. Lawrence Rising is the author, and this will be his first lengthy play, his only other previous work for the stage having been a sketch done last season at the Princess Theatre.

Arthur Hammerstein, by cable, has engaged Orrin Johnson, who is on a motor tour through France, to play one of the important parts in "The Trap," the new Richard Harding Davis-Jules Eckert Goodman drama, now in course of production. Tully Marshall and Charles Richman have already been engaged for this play.

Five thousand orphans will be the guests of A. L. Shakman, manager of the new Eighty-first Street Theatre during July and August. The work of novelizing the play has been done by Miss Lillian Lauferty, and the illustrations will be made from the flashlights of the actual scenes in the farce.

IN MEMORY OF DR. HEITZEL.

Dr. Levin Will Talk on Life of the Founder of Zionist Congress.

Two meetings will be held tonight under the auspices of the Zionist Council of Greater New York in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the death of Dr. Theodor Heitzel, founder of the Zionist Congress. Dr. Schmarja Levin of Berlin, who was a member of the first Russian Duma and now belongs to the International Actions Committee of Five, which has the direction of Zionist affairs the world over, will speak at both meetings.

Part of Dr. Levin's remarks will be a reply to the criticisms recently made by Jacob H. Schiff in a letter to The American Hebrew. Mr. Schiff deplored what he called the "hasty and inopportune action" of Dr. Levin and his associates in Palestine in connection with the struggle between supporters of the German and the Hebrew languages for the Jewish Technicum at Haifa.

Both meetings will begin at 8:30. Dr. Levin will speak first in the Bronx at the London Casino, Third Avenue and Claremont Parkway. Then he will go to the downtown meeting at the National Theatre, Houston Street and Second Avenue. Louis Lipsky, Chairman of the American Federation of Zionists, will preside at this meeting, and Rev. Joseph Rosenblatt, with a choir, will conduct religious services. Other speakers besides Dr. Levin will be the Rev. H. Masleansky, Bernard Rosenblatt, Secretary of the American Federation of Zionists, and A. Goldberg, editor of Das Yiddische Volk.

Leon Zalatkoff, editor of The Jewish Daily News, will act as Chairman of the Bronx meeting, and the Rev. Bernard Wolf will conduct religious services. Those who will speak, besides Dr. Levin, are P. Schick, Dr. Joseph Blustin, Rev. Joseph Zess, Dr. Morris Levin of the Jewish Theological Seminary, and Rev. Dr. N. Bazal.

Meetings at which Dr. Schmarja Levin will be the chief speaker will be held in Brooklyn on Thursday night.

DR. ANNA SHAW EXPLAINS.

Suffragist Points to Possible Causes for Low Kansas Registration.

"Women are not forever hiking after politics," said Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the National Woman Suffrage Association, yesterday, referring to the complaint that women in Kansas were not registering for the primaries. "They may not come out in municipal or school elections for the sake of voting when their candidate is sure to win. When there is some big question up they will be out in force.

"When you hear a story that the women anywhere are not registering or voting, like this story from Kansas, it usually means that some party or some man of a party is anxious about standing in a coming election and is worried because he is afraid the women belonging to it are not going to do their share.

"The story in today's papers that Kansas women are not registering for the primaries is too indefinite for me to take much stock in it. No figures at all are given of the women who have or who have not registered or voted, whichever it is. There is only the statement that 300,000 have the right to vote. It does not even say how many more days there are of registration, if it is registration.

"The Kansas women may have the same reason for not voting at the primaries that the women in Illinois had. The Illinois women registered, but when they found that it was a State law that for the party they voted in the primaries they must vote for the next two years they were not willing to bind themselves.

"Men very often do not vote at the primaries unless there is some big party matter up. It has no effect upon their voting for the regular elections. Perhaps this story means that some Progressive is getting anxious because so many of the Progressive men are going over to the Republican Party and he needs the help of the women. They always complain about the women when they need their help."

CARDINAL GIBBONS BACK; HAD FINE TRIP

WILL BE 80 ON JULY 23

Says His Health Is Good, and That He Found the Pope, Who's a Year Younger, Very Well.

Cardinal Gibbons, who will be 80 years old the 23d of this month, and who looks to be in better health than in years, was among the arrivals from Europe, on the North German Lloyd liner Berlin, yesterday morning. Cardinal Gibbons had been away since May 2. After attending the Consistory in Rome and taking part in the creation of twenty-seven new Cardinals, toured France, Switzerland, Belgium, England and Ireland. Everywhere he said he enjoyed himself to the utmost and in Ireland he was happy to note that the condition of the people was better than it had been in years. The former land tenants of Ireland, he said, are rapidly being transformed into landlords, all the result of the splendid law passed during the Premiership of Gladstone, which made possible the purchase of farms by the poor on easy terms.

Cardinal Gibbons said he was in Rome two weeks, during which time he had several interesting talks with the Pope.

"I found his Holiness in good health and very cheerful," Cardinal Gibbons said. "I also discovered during my talks with him that I was eleven months older than he. His Holiness was born in June, 1835, whereas I was born in July, 1834."

From Rome the Cardinal went to Switzerland, where he was the guest of Frank Jenkins at the latter's estate on Lake Geneva. While the guest of Mr. Jenkins the Queen of Belgium, whose estate adjoins that of Mr. Jenkins called on Cardinal Gibbons. Subsequently when the Cardinal went to Belgium he was entertained at the palace in Brussels.

After a short visit to England Cardinal Gibbons went to Wexford, Ireland, where he remained three days. It was in Wexford that he was struck by the prosperous condition of the former tenantry.

"Well, what do you think of the situation in Ulster?" the Cardinal was asked.

"As an outsider, it is quite evident that I cannot talk of Ulster," was the smiling reply.

"Well, then, how about conditions right here in the United States?"

"To that question I will reply as I imagine my friend Col. Roosevelt would and that is 'not a word, not a word,'" the Cardinal answered.

Until noon on Sunday, Cardinal Gibbons said, he had not seen the sun for twenty days. In England, in Ireland, and at sea, he explained, the skies had been overcast continually. It was during the celebration of mass on the Berlin, on Sunday, the Cardinal added, that the sun broke through the clouds for the first time in almost three weks.

"And now," said Cardinal Gibbons as he bade the reporters good-bye, "I must leave. I am happy to be back home, am feeling fine and am going straight to Baltimore."

Collector of the Port Dudley Field Malone and the Rev. Father Beeman of Baltimore went on board the Berlin at Quarantine and welcomed Cardinal Gibbons. The Cardinal left for Baltimore on the Congressional Limited yesterday afternoon.

THE WEEK IN THE THEATRES.

The same seven theatres which are struggling to keep open all Summer with regular attractions were still doing business last night despite the heat. The shows are "Potash and Perlmutter," at Cohan's; "Kitty MacKay," at the Comedy; "The Dummy," at the Hudson; "A Pair of Sixes," at the Longacre; "The Follies," at the New Amsterdam; "Too Many Cooks," at the Thirty-ninth Street, and "The Passing Show," at the Winter Garden.

There were several changes in the bills at the moving picture theatres. "My Official Wife," and "Uncle Bill" are now at the Vitagraph Theatre; The Strand is showing "The Little Gray Lady"; Rainey's African Hunt Pictures remain at the Casino; "Manon Lescaut" is still at the Republic; "Cabiria" continues at the Knickerbocker, and "Neptune's Daughter" is still running at the Globe.

Where the bills are changed each week the following are the offerings:

The Royal La Reine Co., "electrical wizards," head the bill at Marcus Loew's show at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Others are the Flying Banvards, the Aerial Cromwells, the Three Anchors, the Bounding Patersons, and the Skating Bear.

The sixth week of the run of Eugene Brieux's sex drama, "Damaged Goods," began yesterday at the Academy of Music, and attracted large audiences at both matinee and evening performances.

Houdini, at Hammerstein's Victoria and Roof Garden, this week is walking through a brick wall. Having proved that straight-jackets, zinc-lined packing cases, multiple locked handcuffs, and even prisons are no more confining to him than ordinary store twine, Houdini performs this feat, spirit fashion, with a wall made of real bricks and real mortar, and built by a committee from the audience. "The Temptress" dance, with Alice Eis and Bert French, continues. The surrounding bill is built along laughing lines. It includes the Six Berlin Madcaps, Billy McDermott, Sylvia Loyal and Her Pierrot, (an European novelty with 100 pigeons;) Joe Jackson, the Girl from Milwaukee, Harry Breen, Loda Selbini, Jack Horton and Mlle. La Tiska, Smith, Cook, and Brandon, and the Helen Leach Wallen Trio.

Eddie Foy and his seven little comedians and comediennes are showing a new act at the Palace Theatre for the first time. Father Foy and his brood of seven, assisted by Mamma Foy, have been hard at work rehearsing this new idea in family clowning. The Palace is holding over Jean Sawyer and her two team mates, Nigel Barrie and Benne Dixon. She presents a new maxixe brought from Buenos Ayres, and a new classical dance with cake-walk interpolations. Adelaide and Hughes also remain on the bill. Their new feature is a scenic dance entitled "The Cat and the Canary." For her showing against Belle Baker last week, little Ruth Roye is playing her fifth consecutive week at the Palace. De Hoven and Nice present a new dancing act. Spissel Brothers and Mack show their European novelty, "The New Chef." An extra attraction is Diamond and Brennan. Another number is Eddie Bruch and Sister, 'cello and violin virtuosi, and Libbey and Barton, comedy cyclists.

At the New Brighton Theatre there is a mid-Summer carnival of vaudeville acts. Laura Guerite makes her first stage appearance since returning from England. She has several new songs written specially for her, and in addition Miss Guerite wears several new startling gowns of the type for which she has long been famous. Harry Carroll, the composer of "The Passing Show of 1914," appears in a singing and dancing offering with Laura Hamilton, who was a feature of "The Honeymoon Express." Winsor McCay, the newspaper cartoonist, is showing in Brooklyn for the first time his moving cartoon of a prehistoric dinosaurus named Gertie. A feature of the bill are two dramatic playlets. They are Paul Armstrong's one-act drama, "To Save One Girl," and a playlet presented by Joseph Hart entitled "The Blue Diamond," by John Willard. Other offerings are Ray Arveson and Irene Weston in a repertoire of drawing room dances; the Charles Ahearn Troupe of Cycling Comedians; Chief Caupolican, the Indian baritone in songs and stories; James C. Morton and Ralph Austin in a versatile offering; Rich and Galvin in dances; Maxim Brothers and Bobby, and the Five Indians.

Owing to the success of the Six "Water Lillies" at the New York Theatre last week, William Morris held them over this week. This aquatic feature, with its sextette of diving girls, gives an interesting exhibition of difficult dives into a huge tank. Among these mermaids are: Norah Leahy, who swam the rough waters of Hell Gate last week; Florence Scheublin and Mable Smith, who dived from the ninety-foot tower on the Million Dollar Pier at Atlantic City, and who will essay some high bridge diving in this city before their engagement ends. A diving contest for silver cups, open to all, occurs every night, in conjunction with this act. The balance of the programme is devoted to photo plays.

McKenna's Minstrels are the headline attraction at the Rustic Theatre, Palisade Amusement Park, this week. They have an aggregation of seven players, all of whom have been identified with the more important traveling minstrel troupes. Others on the bill are Wilson and Wilson, a couple of singers; Signor Piotti, in a series of scenes and songs from "big" operas, and the Sylphones, musicians. In addition, four reels of motion pictures are projected. At the amphitheatre the free attractions include the Great Holden, making a high dive from a height of 112 feet; "Billy" Mick and his trick mule; Barra and Barra, tight wire artists; the Dare Family, in an aerial act; Blake's Dog and Pony Show, and Jeanette Maine on the trapeze. Fireworks are a feature for Thursday night.

TO ABOLISH CUSTOMS LINE.

New Baggage Inspection System Expected to Save Much Time.

The customs line, which for years has produced so much grumbling and fretfulness on the piers of incoming transatlantic liners, will be abolished within the next three weeks. Yesterday with the arrival from London of the Atlantic Transport liner Minnetonka a new system was tried out with great success. The new system, customs authorities say, will not only shorten by many minutes the average stay on piers of the homecomer and visitor from abroad, but will also result in the saving of a great amount of money to the Government, as fewer Inspectors will be needed.

Under the old system if a man brings ten trunks into the country he cannot apply for an Inspector until these ten trunks are under the proper customs letter. It requires often as long as an hour to get the trunks assembled, and then the voyager proceeds to take the last place in line before the customs desk and await his turn to get an Inspector to go through his luggage.

Under the new system tried out on the arrival of the Minnetonka the Inspectors are assigned to stations under the letters, and proceed to the examination of the baggage as fast as it is brought out of the ship and placed under the letter. It is no longer necessary to wait until all of a passenger's baggage is landed to begin the inspection, each piece being examined as fast as it is brought ashore.

There were seventy-four cabin passengers on the Minnetonka, and twelve Inspectors were assigned to the work, where usually, according to John J. Raczkiewicz, the Deputy Surveyor in charge of the inspection of baggage, eighteen men were used.

The baggage examination began shortly after 1 o'clock and was completed in thirty-five minutes, where usually an hour at least is used up.

TWO NEW FILM PLAYS ARE SHOWN

"My Official Wife," a Russian Drama, Splendidly Produced at Vitagraph Theatre.

"THE LITTLE GRAY LADY"

Channing Pollock's Play Depicted on an Elaborate Scale at the Strand—A Keystone Comedy.

Two new pictures were shown in the moving picture theatres on Broadway yesterday. At the Strand Channing Pollock's "Little Gray Lady" was the film drama which made its bow, while "My Official Wife" was the leading feature at the Vitagraph Theatre. Both plays, in pictorial form, were made from well known dramas which had been seen here many times on the "legitimate" stage, but the film productions were done on a larger and more elaborate scale than was possible in the regular theatres.

"My Official Wife," a Russian drama written by Richard Henry Savage, has Clara Kimball Young in the leading picture rôle of Helene Marie, the young nihilist who succeeds in entering St. Petersburg despite the fact that the Russian police are after her. In that city she plots to kill the Czar, but her plans fail because of the jealousy of an American whom she has tricked.

The picture is splendidly done and is interesting from start to finish. In addition the Vitagraph Theatre shows a new comedy, "Uncle Billy," a three-part play written by Marguerite Bertsch, together with the usual daily Vitagraph releases.

"The Little Gray Lady" at the Strand has Jane Grey in the leading rôle of Anna Gray, a quiet, high-principled young woman, who falls in love with Perry Carlyle, a weak young clerk, whose own extravagant tastes and the dissipations induced by endeavoring to please Ruth Jordon have combined to plunge him into debt and dissatisfaction at his lot. He finds that his position in the Treasury Department enables him to obtain possession of pieces of mutilated money, and that by pasting them together he can induce tradesmen to accept them for good bills, and so add considerably to his income. In a very few days, however, the Secret Service men are on his trail, and it is only owing to the heroic self-sacrifice of Anna that he is saved from the consequences of his crime. Ruth, in his trouble, discards him, and as he realizes that her affection was inspired only by mercenary motives, while Anna loves him sincerely for himself alone, he is swept in a revulsion of feeling to a love for her that is as deep and lasting as her own.

In addition the Strand presents a Keystone comedy film and other pictures, together with the Strand Concert Orchestra.

LURTON FUNERAL PLANS.

Family Starts for Tennessee with Body—Messages of Sympathy.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 13.—The body of Justice Lurton of the United States Supreme Court, who died here yesterday, was taken away today in a special car attached to a train which left Atlantic City at 2 o'clock. The members of the family accompanying the body on its journey to Clarksville, Tenn., included Mrs. Lurton, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Lurton, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Horace Van Devanter, and Harry Jacobs, Justice Lurton's secretary. The party will travel to Clarksville by way of Harrisburg, Penn., and Cincinnati.

The funeral services will be held at Trinity Episcopal Church in Clarksville on Wednesday morning. Messages were received today from ex-President Taft, Attorney General McReynolds, George W. Wickersham, C. C. McChord, members of the Senate and House from Tennessee, Judge Sanford of Knoxville, Tenn.; Secretary Lane, all the members of the Supreme Court, and many other members of Congress.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—When the Senate adjourned late today it was upon the adoption of a resolution of respect to Justice Lurton. Senator Shields of Tennessee delivered a brief eulogy, characterizing Justice Lurton as one of the greatest jurists of his time.

President Wilson today sent the following telegram to Mrs. Lurton:

> Our deepest sympathies go out to you in your bereavement. The country has lost a gifted and honorable servant, whose memory it will always honor, and I am sure that my feeling is the feeling of the whole country.

MAY NAME McREYNOLDS.

Washington Selects Attorney General as Lurton's Successor.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—It was said today with a good deal of assurance that President Wilson would make his selection of a successor to the late Justice Lurton from the South. A very direct intimation was given that the President's choice was likely to fall on James C. McReynolds, Attorney General of the United States, who is from Justice Lurton's own State of Tennessee.

Doubt is cast on the intimation concerning Mr. McReynolds, in spite of its high source of authority, by the knowledge that President Wilson is opposed greatly to making any changes in his Cabinet. Mr. McReynolds's ambitions look to the Supreme Court bench, however, and the President might be induced to modify his attitude.

When Representative A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania urged William B. Wilson, the Secretary of Labor, to become a candidate for Senator from Pennsylvania, the President objected on the ground that he was opposed to making any changes in his Cabinet. Another case in point is that of David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture. It was said that Mr. Houston desired to be a member of the new Federal Reserve Board, but ran counter to the President's fixed objection to having any changes in the Cabinet.

To Organize the Native Born.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 13.—Among the organizations incorporated today was the Society of the Native Born of the United States of America, which is to promote the welfare of members, obtain employment for them, and foster in them patriotism for their native land. The chief office is in Manhattan, and the Directors are Charles Hammond, Frank J. Keyes, and Frederick Keller, all of Manhattan.

Studying Grasshopper Pest.

GLOVERSVILLE, July 13.—P. M. Easton, a representative of the State Department of Agriculture, is here today studying specimens of the grasshoppers which are causing great alarm by their depredations. He said that the State would take no further action until he had reported the matter to the department and submitted specimens for examination.

GERMAN DIPLOMAT DEAD.

E. von Haxthausen, Minister to China, Had a Long Career.

BERLIN, July 13.—Germany's Minister to China, E. von Haxthausen, died here today after a long illness. He came to Berlin to undergo medical treatment. Herr von Haxthausen was appointed Minister to China in February, 1911. He succeeded Count von Rex, who is now Ambassador to Japan.

Herr von Haxthausen had a long diplomatic career, in which he served Germany in many foreign and domestic fields. He was born in Lauenburg in 1858, and just thirty years later entered the diplomatic service in the Department of Foreign Affairs in Hamburg. In 1889 he was appointed Consul General at Warsaw, Prussia, and in the years immediately following he held the same office in Marseilles, France, and Krakau and Lemberg, Austria-Hungary.

In 1905 he became the Consul General at Amsterdam, and in 1906 the Minister Resident at La Pas, Bolivia. Three years later he was raised to the rank of Envoy Extraordinary, and the following year he was assigned to the Foreign Office in Berlin. In 1911 he was appointed Minister to China.

CAPT. EDWIN V. GAGER DEAD.

Member of Crew of the Monitor Dies in Newark at 80 Years.

Capt. Edwin V. Gager, who was a member of the crew on the Monitor in her fight with the Merrimac, will be buried tomorrow from St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, Newark. He died Sunday at his home, 23 Brunswick Street, that city. Born in Bleasant Valley, Dutchess County, N. Y., Oct. 14, 1833, Capt. Gager as a boy of 14 entered upon a seafaring life.

The outbreak of the war found him commander and part owner of the Monticello, which he offered to the Government. The ship was transformed into a fighting craft and, with Capt. Gager in command, she took part in one of the earlier naval engagements off Sewall's Point, in Chesapeake Bay, and also in the capture of Hatteras Bay inlet.

Billy Baxter, Old Minstrel, Dies.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Billy Baxter, old-time minstrel, who had played with nearly all of the leading minstrel companies of America and who had appeared before the royalty of Europe with his banjo, died at a hospital here last night of cirrhosis of the liver. Born in Cincinnati, O., in 1861, he turned early to the stage, where his musical talent soon won him a place among the stars of minstrelsy. He made several tours of the world, and on many occasions rulers of Europe requested him to play and sing the old "darky" songs. A few years ago he retired from the stage, and since then had made his home at the Press Club in this city. Nearly every night he entertained the newspaper men with his stringed instruments and old-time Southern melodies.

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, Vt., July 13.—Mrs. W. Duncan McKim, wife of Dr. McKim, of Washington, D. C., died at her Summer home here tonight following an illness of several months. She was attended by her husband and local physicians. Mrs. McKim was popular in the Manchester Summer colony and during previous seasons had entertained extensively. She was the daughter of the late Charles V. and Arabella Moran of New York. Burial will be in Baltimore.

EARL OF ELLESMERE DIES.

As Novelist He Wrote Under the Pen Name of Charles Granville.

Francis Charles Granville Egerton, third Earl of Ellesmere, died yesterday in London. He was born in London on April 5, 1847, and was the son of the second Earl and the daughter of the first Earl Cawdor. He was educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, receiving his B. A. degree from the University in 1867. Among his ancestors were the Dukes of Bridgewater, and the first Earl of Bridgewater, for whom Milton wrote Comus.

Ex-Police Chief John W. Tierney.

John W. Tierney, former Chief of the East Newark Police Department, died at his home there yesterday. Mr. Tierney was appointed Chief of Police in 1900, and held the office until 1910, when he was succeeded by the present Chief, Thomas Neville.

$76,909,322 TOTAL OF TAX RECEIPTS

Treasury Confident That Returns Next Year Will Be Fully $100,000,000.

EXPECT FEW PENALTIES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Treasury officials said today that the collections under the corporation and individual income tax law next year probably would not be less than $100,000,000. This would be paid on or before June 30, 1915 for the calendar year 1914. There are two reasons for this prediction. The tax for 1914 will have to be paid on the income received during the entire twelve-month period. The tax now being collected for 1913 is for ten months only, except as to corporations which paid the income tax for the months beginning March 1, 1913, and also the corporation excise tax for January and February, 1913.

Figures revised up to the close of the Treasury Department today showed that the total thus far collected from the income tax of 1913 had been $76,909,322.72. With collections for two more months in 1914 than in 1913, the receipts will be at least one-sixth larger. It was pointed out today that in all probability the collections for January and February, 1914, in reality will amount to more than one-sixth of the total for the whole year, because there will be included in the income received in January the semi-annual payments made on many investments not included in the tax of 1913. Only the semi-annual payments of July 1 figured in the income tax collections for 1913. Besides including two of these semi-annual payments and embracing two more months of income in 1914 than in 1913, the income collections for 1914 are expected to show the normal growth, as did the corporation tax collections, that naturally will be the result of a better understanding of the new income tax law.

In the first year of the corporation tax the receipts for 1910 were $20,959,783. In 1911 the receipts were $33,511,525. In 1912 the receipts were $28,583,259. The receipts from the corporation tax in 1913 were $35,006,299. Treasury officials think there will be a normal growth of the same kind in the income tax collections in the next few years.

The revised figures giving a total of $76,909,322.72 collected to date under the income tax law show that the actual payments into the Treasury have been as follows:

Payments to June 30	$71,386,156.13
Payments July 1	349,587.24
Payments July 2	815,723.88
Payments July 3	1,766,594.60
Payments July 6	177,715.73
Payments July 7	907,969.56
Payments July 8	597,058.23
Payments July 9	295,744.72
Payments July 10	329,714.87
Payments July 11	283,057.76
Total	$76,909,322.72

Treasury officials today expressed the belief that the new tax had been collected with remarkable success and little trouble. They believe that there will be few penalizations for failure to pay the first year's taxes in the legal time limit.

Detailed figures have not yet been received by the Internal Revenue Bureau showing the amounts collected in each of the revenue districts. In New York City there are three internal revenue districts. Up to June 30 the total receipts in these three districts were $19,324,899.18. This was more than one-fourth of the total of $71,386,156 that had been collected from the entire country up to June 30. Since June 30 there has been $5,523,166.59 collected from the whole country. If more than one-fourth of this is also to be credited to the New York City collection districts it would mean that the total collections under the income tax law from New York City alone were close to $21,000,000. Up to June 30 the New York City districts paid $11,348,041.88 on account of individual income tax and $7,976,858.30 on account of corporation, excise, and income taxes.

The income tax payments up to June 30 show that more than half of the tax was paid by corporations and individuals in five collection districts, as follows:

New York City districts	$19,324,899.18
Philadelphia district	4,864,741.93
Pittsburgh district	3,693,735.17

TEST COMPENSATION LAW.

Workman Asks $10,000 for the Loss of the Use of a Hand.

A damage action which will put the new Workmen's Compensation law to the test was begun in the Supreme Court yesterday by Albert Kaufman, who sued Henry B. Singer for the loss of a hand. Kaufman says he was employed by Singer in his factory, at 273 Van Sinderen Avenue, Brooklyn, and that on April 14 his hand got entangled in a leather belt and was so badly mashed that it will never be of use again.

The value set upon a hand by the new law is a sum of money equal to two-thirds of 240 weeks' pay. Kaufman, however, asks for $10,000, and the question must be setled whether a person is entitled in certain cases to receive higher compensation than that allowed under the statute. Another question is whether an accident that occurred on April 14, before the law became effective, comes under the law's provisions.

NOTION JOBBERS SEE GOOD TIMES AHEAD

Association's Annual Meeting Gets Reports That Spring's Gloom Is Dispelled.

BUYERS MAKING RECORDS

Claflin Case Discussed in Its Relation to the Jobber's Place in Business.

Fifty members of the Jobbers' Association of Notion Buyers began their annual meeting at the Waldorf yesterday. With hardly a dissenting voice they reported that their orders were fully up to the standard of former years in quantity. Buyers from the South said they were laying in stocks of notions greater than their region had ever before needed.

Occasionally a jobber from the Far West or Middle West had a tone of despondency, but the others cheered him up with declarations that the outlook had nothing in it to suggest gloom or despair.

Mason Miller, President of the Smith-McCord-Townsend Dry Goods Company of Kansas City, was Chairman of the meeting. He announced that every year, in July, when the notion jobbers come to New York to buy, they meet for an afternoon and compare notes about trade. He suggested that all who had spoken to him privately had spoken hopefully and had not shown the pessimistic mood of last Winter and Spring.

The Claflin receivership came up as a theme upon which to hang a general discussion of the business situation, in its three phases of manufacturing, jobbing, and retailing.

"We men who stand in the middle," said Norman H. Johnson of Richmond, Va., "have been splendidly vindicated in the Claflin failure. The heart of the situation was that the Claflin firm saved other firms by taking them over and robbing both the Claflin firm and the firms taken in of the services of expert buyers as middlemen. The Claflin people couldn't find out so quickly, as keen jobbers could have found out for them, what was wrong.

"The result was inevitable. I believe in the jobber and the value of his function in business. In September, 1910, before a convention of the Southern Merchants' Association at Atlanta, I made an analysis of the Claflin situation and the trend it was taking as a business policy. I said that if it should succeed it would be because it could override successfully the best laws of good merchandising, as I understood them. It's failure was not a bad thing for business in general, if we only let it teach us the road we ought to follow."

Mr. Johnson and most of the others who spoke reported a growing tendency on the part of department stores and big business institutions to depend on the jobbers in the local neighborhoods, buying from these jobbers instead of trying to buy direct from manufacturers when they were not in a position to make a scientific and detailed study of the goods offered and the manufacturing conditions.

"And these jobbers," he said, "have been the apostles of sound business methods. We have preached to the retailers the need for sound business principles and the need to sell always at a profit large enough to insure stability. We have preached the trading stamp practically out of the South, we have preached against the special rate to the stenographer, to the nurse, to the school teacher. We have preached faith in one policy for all, and especially faith in a set system of terms for jobbers and wholesalers and the abolition of all special and unusual credits. There is no calamity howl in our business and the reason for this, I think, is that within ten years we have completely made over the methods of doing business."

The meeting took up the matter of freight rates, appointing special committees to try to induce manufacturers to pay the freight on such goods as woolen yarns to points where they had no special agents. This rule, if adopted, it was held, would allow all jobbers to get goods on equal terms instead of penalizing the jobbers at points away from the big cities by imposing special freight rates on them.

A committee which had applied to the railroads for a new classification of hair pins, which would permit them to be rated lower than at present, reported that it could get no concession. The reason, it was stated, was that the railroads were so deeply concerned in plans to raise their rates that they had no time to give attention to a plan to lower the rate of any commodity.

The meeting was open to the public for the first time since the jobbers organized, the previous policy of holding secret sessions having been abandoned by unanimous vote.

THE ROBBINS SALE.

Large Carpet and Rug Offerings from the Smith Factory.

Buyers from many sections of the country were on hand yesterday for the widely advertised sale begun by Robbins Brothers of an unusually large assortment of rugs and carpets manufactured by Alexander Smith & Sons. The values, which were announced as "startling," were in many instances considerably below the current quotations for similar goods elsewhere. A good many buyers in town for the Claflin sale dropped in to view the offerings, and transactions for the day reached an excellent aggregate.

The sale as a whole is said to be the largest single offering of Smith goods ever made, since it includes, according to the sellers, 5,000 bales guaranteed to be in absolutely perfect condition. The senior member of the firm said he was very much surprised at the interest shown in the sale yesterday, which indicated clearly that buyers are in need of goods.

He added that many buyers have not as yet reached the city and that all signs point to a record sale of the rugs and carpets. Among the offerings coming in for particular attention yesterday were Smith best quality Kirman Axminster seamless rugs. Rugs of this kind, 9 by 12 feet, were priced at $16.75, while others, 6 by 9 feet, sold at $8.50. Other sizes and prices were rugs, 54 by 78, $3.95; 36 by 72, $2.55, and 27 by 54, $1.47½.

MANY BUYERS AT THE CLAFLIN SALE

MUCH GOODS DISPOSED OF

No Sacrificing Done, but the Concessions Made Appealed to Those in Attendance.

The "peremptory sale" by order of the receivers of the H. B. Claflin Company, which began yesterday for the purpose of radically reducing stock in all departments (except flannels and blankets,) took on an international aspect by the presence of more than 1,200 buyers from literally every section of the United States, as well as from Honolulu, Cuba, and Porto Rico. It was probably the most cosmopolitan gathering of buyers ever assembled at one time and place in this country for the purpose of purchasing dry goods.

It was obvious that the notice of the sale had attracted the most widespread interest everywhere, as buyers for big and little stores were on hand from as far westward as California, while representatives of jobbers and retailers were in evidence as far away as from Louisiana and Texas. They were all bent on "bargains" and according to John C. Eames, Vice President of the Claflin Company, they were successful in their quest. It was apparent, however, that yesterday's sale was not a sacrifice in the ordinary sense that a peremptory auction is. At the close of the day's trading those competent to judge estimated that the reduction in price from the regular prevailing values ranged between 10 and 35 per cent., according to the character of the goods and the demand.

The wash goods department seemed to be the centre of attraction, and before the close of business large sales in different lines were made at clean-up prices. The stocks consisted of novelties suitable for the current season as well as broken lots. It was said that yesterday's transactions cleaned up at fair prices numerous odds and ends of small lots which the firm has had on hand for a considerable time. Printed poplins, for instance, were offered at 13½ cents, while printed flaxon was quoted at 10 cents. The price on Garland ratine was 11½ cents, while Pacific ratine was quoted at 12½ cents. White plisses went for 11½ cents and Zig-zag crepe at 22½ cents. According to well informed persons the stock of wash goods was not very large, being for the most part cloths not of the present season novelties.

There was a brisk run on the offerings of dress ginghams, which included such well-known brands as Red Seals, Toile du Nords, Barnaby's Costume Zephyrs, Amoskeag A. F. C. and Palmer cloth at 7½ cents. The regular price quoted by the Amoskeag Company on A. F. C. dress ginghams is 9¼ cents. The goods went in a hurry. The stocks of these goods were more or less limited, and in broken lots, but the price was too attractive to be withstood by the buyers. Renfrew Devonshire cloth was quoted at the sale at 14 cents, while the price of the goods by the selling agents in this city is 14½ cents.

Good sales were reported in the domestic department. Fruit of the Loom bleached muslins were offered yesterday at 9 cents. The regular selling price of this brand is a quarter of a cent more. Lonsdale 4-4 bleached muslin was sold at 8¼ cents, while Taylor, Clapp & Co. regularly quote 8½ cents. Although the jobbers are regularly quoting American standard staple prints at 5¼ cents, the Claflin Company failed to cut prices on this line. Pilgrim subcount prints were, however, sold at 4½ cents. Amoskeag staple ginghams were offered at 6¼ cents. Pride of the West India linens, in the white goods department, were disposed of at 7½ cents. White Flaxon sold at 7½ and 9½ cents.

At the close of the day local dry goods commission men who had viewed the announcement of the Claflin sale with considerable misgiving as to its adverse effect on their own lines of goods, seemed to experience considerable relief. The impression was quite general that the sale did not go much beyond the limits of what is known in the trade as a "clean-up." Considerable comfort was taken by these men in the fact that many of the goods were in broken lots and not the latest novelties. The opinion of many was that the retarding effect of the Claflin sale would not be as great in the trade as had been feared.

Vice President Eames said the sale was not to be construed as a sacrifice sale, as is often the case the sellers are going out of business, but should be regarded by the trade as an opportunity for extraordinary "bargains."

"The opening today has proved very gratifying," said Mr. Eames, "and has afforded convincing proof to the army of buyers from all over the country that they can pick up the biggest bargains in seasonable and other dry goods ever offered in this country. Naturally there was a drive on wash goods of all kinds, and the bargains obtained will give a great impetus to retail stores everywhere. Advices received this morning from faraway points, like California, for instance, are to the effect that buyers are on their way from the Coast and will be here by the end of the week or the first part of next week.

"In fact, we expect more people here next week than this, from all our information. Many are coming several weeks ahead, who make a practice of visiting this city for the Fall season. All of the biggest buyers are either here or on their way. To name them all would be to mention practically every important dry goods house in the United States, as well as many smaller concerns. The sale will be continued for several weeks, and as the season advances we will give especial attention to seasonable goods. These it is anticipated, will sell well."

The value of the stocks to be disposed of at the sale begun yesterday is a subject of discussion in the trade, but many who profess to be well informed as to the extent of the Chaflin goods on hand at the time of the receivership, say they do not in any event exceed $7,000,000. The generally accepted view is that a conservative estimate is nearer $4,000,000. When the store closed last night, none of those in charge was able to form an opinion as to the volume of orders or the amount of money actually realized. It was said, however, that the receivers, Joseph B. Martindale and Frederic A. Juilliard, were much gratified with the day's trading and feel confident that the completed sale will result in the conversion of the stocks into a goodly sum of ready cash. The sale will be resumed this morning and will continue for at least two weeks.

Among the buyers were representatives of the Siegel-Cooper Co., Chicago; Jordan, Marsh & Co., and R. H. White & Co., Boston; Burton Dry Goods Co., and Leon Fellman & Co., New Orleans; Wolf & Marx, San Antonio, Texas; W. C. Stripling & Co., Fort Worth, Texas; Davidson Bros. & Co., Sioux City, Iowa; J. Samuels & Bros., Providence; John Wanamaker, and Abraham & Straus. There was a large representation of buyers for large retail dry goods stores in the principal cities of New England, Philadelphia and Atlanta.

Claflin Creditors to Meet July 24.

The receivers for the H. B. Claflin Company, J. B. Martindale and Frederic A. Juilliard, announced yesterday that the general meeting of creditors that they were instructed by the Court to call would be held at the Park Avenue Hotel on July 24, at 10:30 A. M. By that time they expect to be in possession of the necessary data concerning both the Claflin Company and the twenty-seven stores outside of New York controlled by John Claflin to make a full statement of the situation. A plan of reorganization also may be presented at that time.

PRICES FOR WOOLENS.

New Ones Which Were Announced to the Trade Yesterday.

The American Woolen Company, the leading factor in the piece goods market, yesterday formally opened for the Spring of 1915 its line of serges, clays, and unfinished worsteds comprising Department 1, Division A, of the company. The advances made over the prices that prevailed during the last lightweight season ranged from 5 to 7½ per cent. and in a few instances higher. Taking the entire list into consideration, the method that has been followed out in fixing prices has been to offer concessions on cloths into which inferior wools go and to advance the figures on cloths where the finer grades of the raw product are required. This action was taken obviously in accordance with the increased price of wool.

One particular feature of the opening that is certain to arouse some comment in the market is the fact that 3,192, the staple serge number, is offered at two prices. The price set on this cloth from the Fulton mill is $1.20, while it is obtainable from the Ayer & Wood mills at $1.17½. Up to the very moment of the big company's opening it was known that 3,192 was being sold for current delivery at $1.17½.

A list of the principal numbers opened yesterday with prices for this and the last Spring season follows, the first quotation being for the former and the second for the latter:

Warm Weather Good for Trade.

The warm weather of the past few days in various sections of the country has resulted in increased sales of seasonable goods by retailers according to mail advices received yesterday by local jobbing houses. It is reasoned that with a continuance for a fortnight or more of thoroughly warm weather such as is due at this time of the year, retailers will be enabled to clear out much of their stocks of Summer goods that have given both retailers and jobbers considerable concern. It is argued that, with the shelves of the retailers well cleared of seasonable goods, collections will be easier and a stronger sentiment developed all round. Buyers now in the market from all sections say that the reason many lines carried by retailers have not sold as readily as could be wished is due primarily to unseasonable weather conditions rather than to the lack of purchasing power on the part of the public generally.

PRAISES TIMES REVIEW.

A. Barton Hepburn Says It Will Help to Revive Business.

A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Chase National Bank, said yesterday that he had read the interviews and opinions on the business outlook, published in yesterday's TIMES, with a great deal of interest.

"I was glad to see such interviews appear," said Mr. Hepburn. "They showed the right spirit. The views expressed were hopeful, and that is right. I think some of them were more optimistic than the situation justifies, but business is largely a state of mind, and the sooner we get to talking cheerfully the quicker will be the recovery. Efforts like those of President Wilson and THE TIMES to bring about a better feeling are commendable.

"The farmer can go ahead year after year putting his ground into seed and gathering his harvests without regard to political unrest. But trade, mercantile and manufacturing, has been hesitating. No one engaged in big business has felt free to go ahead until the pending anti-trust legislation is completed. Roosevelt threatened a lot of prosecution; Taft promised less, but did more, and now the new Administration is going further than either of them. I think Mr. Wilson so far has been right. There are unquestionably abuses in connection with business, and those should be done away with. I think the President's treatment of the problem is intelligent and just, but until the way is marked out we cannot expect business to go ahead.

"I could mention a corporation that today has $9,000,000 cash and not a dollar of current debt, and another with between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 with nothing due soon. That is a bad situation, because it shows that these companies are not going ahead. If the threatened legislation is shaped wisely and put on the books in the next month or so we should see business under way again.

"One great good has come out of this depression, in that it has enforced economies among the middle and upper classes. The concentration has resulted in the accumulation of much idle money.

"I think Mr. Wilson's anti-trust views are fair and conservative. It is the uncertainty of what is going to be done at Washington that has held us back."

Americans Still Buying Wool.

LONDON, July 13.—The offerings at the wool auction sales today amounted to 11,123 bales. Catalogues containing the qualities of merinos and crossbreds were readily absorbed at firm prices. Today's sales follow: New South Wales 1,000 bales, scoured 1s 2d@2s, greasy 10d@1s 3d; Queensland 300 bales, scoured 1s 1d@2s, greasy 1s@1s 3d; Victoria 800 bales, scoured 1s 4d@2s 1½d, greasy 11d@1s 5d; South Australia 200 bales, greasy 9d@1s 1d; West Australia 800 bales, greasy 5½d@1s 4½d; Tasmania 400 bales, greasy 9½d@1s 4½d; New Zealand 4,900 bales, scoured 1s@2s 4d, greasy 9½d@1s 3d; Cape of Good Hope and Natal 300 bales, scoured 1s 11d@2s 1½d, greasy 8d@1s 1d; Falkland Islands 2,400 bales, greasy 8½d @1s 2d.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday..4@4½ per cent. for the best names.
Saturday...4@4½ " " " " " "
The quotation is for six months' paper.

Gray Goods in Demand.

The gray goods market yesterday opened the new week in a very satisfactory manner. The market all around seemed to be in a stronger position with converters becoming more optimistic. There were sales of 38½-inch 60-48s in large quantities at 4¼ cents. These transactions virtually cleaned up all goods that can be bought on contract at this price. The 38½-inch 64-60s also sold very largely to the end of the year at 4⅞ cents. Some mills on these goods are holding at from 1-16 to ⅛ higher. Fancy goods, particularly piques in the narrow ribs, continue in good demand for the 1915 season.

Furniture Exhibition Opens.

The opening of the exhibition of Fall furniture at the Furniture Exchange in the Grand Central Palace yesterday was attended by a large representation of out of town and city buyers. The out of town group was especially strong in numbers, some having traveled long distances to be present. Among the manufacturers, an optimistic feeling prevailed and it was agreed that all that is needed to make conditions boom is an increased confidence on the part of the trade. In all there are 356 exhibitors whose displays take in the whole range of furniture making. The exhibit will last until Aug. 1.

Novelty Fabrics Shown.

Much activity prevailed yesterday in the white, wash and printed goods lines, owing to the showing for next Spring of the new staple and fancy goods. A great variety of novelties embracing the very latest effects as developed in domestic and foreign style centres was shown, together with the usual wide range of staple fabrics. The offerings included a comprehensive assortment of 36-inch and 40-inch styles in all lines adapted to jobbers for manufacturing purposes. Among the firms showing the Spring goods were Burch, Bailey & Co., Converse & Co., Edward E. Poor & Co., Clarence Whitman & Co., Inc., and others.

Waiting for the Retailer.

The clothing trade as a whole showed little interest yesterday in the opening of Spring piece goods lines. The fact that it was generally understood that prices would be higher for the coming season was probably responsible for this. If radical reductions had been made or the prices prevailing in the last lightweight season maintained, despite the absence of a buying mood among the manufacturers, more enthusiasm would probably have been the case. Among the leading sellers, the sentiment exists that very little in the way of substantial orders will be obtained on the lines opened for some days to come. The clothing trade will have to experience a stimulus in the form of increased business from the retailers, it is agreed, before its members can be induced to buy their fabric requirements for the Spring.

Time Doesn't Count.

A young salesman connected with a jobbing house is determined to win success if industry will get him there. Recently, however, he had a rather disapointing exeperience and one that brings up the question, "Just how long does an account belong to a salesman?" In traveling over what he had reason to believe was virgin territory this young man obtained an order from a certain retailer. The order went through but, when he attempted to collect his commission, he found that another salesman connected with the same house laid claim to it on the ground that he had sold the account in question some five years back. It was brought out in the argument that ensued over the validity of the claims made by the two salesmen that there was little chance of business being done with this retailer but for the strenuous way in which he was approached. Notwithstanding this, the commission went to the salesman who had the account on his list years ago but since that time had made no effort to obtain an order.

Display of Spring Ginghams.

Many of the leading commission houses handling ginghams formally displayed yesterday their lines of staple and fancy goods for the Spring 1915 season. In practically every instance the commission men declined to quote prices but are expected to do so within a few days. In the meantime orders will be booked and the price end adjusted later on. As reported by representatives of leading houses, the number of orders received was very encouraging. No very heavy buying was reported but the orders as a rule were on a conservative basis with indications that, as business prospects generally take on a more favorable tone, buying will be in greater volume. Some are of the opinion that the volume of business on the best known prints of dress ginghams will be in excess of that of a year ago. The visits of the buyers to the drygoods district yesterday convinced the jobbers that there will be a strong demand for fine ginghams and fancy styles. Among the firms showing the 1915 offerings were Smith, Hogg & Co., Amory, Browne & Co., Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, Ostrander & Co. Inc., Frederick Vietor & Achelis, and others. Gingham buyers from widely scattered sections of the country were of a generally optimistic mind regarding improved business conditions and the consequent outlook for a big expansion of drygoods lines.

BUSINESS NOTE.

An addition to the notable sales in progress is one by Felix Tausend, for the Eastern Manufacturing Company, at 576-578 Broadway. The offerings include 2,500 cases of blankets, 1,200 cases of crochet and satin bedspreads, and over 1,300 cases of Turkish and huck towels. The sale is said to be owing to exceptional circumstances, and the prices will be made low to secure a disposition of the goods.

Stocks Lose Ground—Some Aspects of Commerce Commission's Report on New Haven.

One of the vagaries of yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange was a net advance in New Haven while substantial losses were recorded in many parts of the list, although it was the severe arraignment of the former New Haven management made in the Interstate Commerce Commission's report to the Senate which was chiefly responsible for the unsettlement of market sentiment. Last week in the face of decided weakness in a number of issues affected by special adverse influences the major stocks showed a great deal of firmness. Yesterday there were net losses of 1⅛ in United States Steel, 1¼ in Reading, and smaller though substantial declines in several other of the usually most active stocks. New Haven, on the other hand, was not the only one of the recently very weak issues which showed net gains. Missouri Pacific closed substantially higher than it had on Saturday, while Chesapeake & Ohio recovered nearly all of a further loss which it suffered in the early trading yesterday.

These contrary movements might be explained on the ground that in the stocks which were much depressed last week a considerable short interest had been built up and covering of part of this yesterday halted the decline and in some cases brought net gains, while the activity of bearish traders were extended into a broader field leading to much pressure upon the stocks which had held their ground last week. The view very generally prevailed in Stock Exchange circles that such pressure was being exerted and the action of the market seemed to bear out this influence. There was very little news which bore importantly on the general business situation and there were no financial developments, strictly speaking, which supplied any reason for the weakness in the market. Money was perhaps a little firmer, but in view of the conditions which have prevailed in the loan market a strengthening of rates is a favorable rather than an unfavorable tendency, inasmuch as it carries the suggestion that trade demands for money are broadening.

It was left then to the Interstate Commerce Commission's report on the New Haven to supply such new material as there was for stock market consideration. If the Commission is right in its conclusion that a considerable amount of money could be recovered in the interest of the New Haven stockholders that would be something which would benefit rather than harm the New Haven company. It cannot be assumed that the Commission's report to the Senate brought out any facts not previously suspected in respect to the present financial position of the New Haven, for the losses to which the Commission refers have in a general way, if not in all the detail presented by the Commission, been clearly before the New Haven stockholders and the public at large for a long time past.

This point of view may have played some part in sustaining the price of New Haven itself yesterday, but if that was the effect of the Commerce Commission's report in the New Haven's own case it would be difficult to find in that report specific ground for enlarged selling of other securities except in so far as sentiment was temporarily adversely affected. It is necessary, of course, to distinguish clearly between mistakes of judgment and breaches of faith in corporation management. It would be very pleasant indeed to contemplate, could it be assumed, that investigations of past corporate activities would prevent mistakes of judgment in the future. Aside from this recent events have no doubt served to lessen the likelihood of culpable neglect in the direction of corporation affairs and to the extent to which this is true good will flow from the close scrutiny under which corporation affairs have lately been brought.

Thirteen Unfortunate Roads.

There are thirteen railroads in the United States now being operated by receivers named by the courts, with a total length of slightly over 16,000 miles and an aggregate capitalization, stocks and bonds, of more than a billion dollars. Not all of the bonds are in default. Only two of the roads have fallen by the wayside this year, the others having been operated by the courts for periods varying from a few months to more than six years. The two recent unfortunates were the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton and the Trinity & Brazos Valley. The other roads are the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the Colorado Midland, the Mississippi, Oklahoma & Gulf, Oklahoma Central, Perè Marquette, Pittsburgh, Shawmut & Northern, St. Louis & San Francisco, Wabash, Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal, and the Wheeling & Lake Erie.

A Good Return, if Collectible.

The yield on a purchase of International & Great Northern three-year notes, if bought at present quotations and paid off in full at maturity, which is the first of next month, would be close to 200 per cent. per annum. Indications are that the road will show a deficit of $300,000 for the year recently closed, and the company's credit is not such as to make the raising of $11,000,000 an easy matter. A suggestion for an alternative plan is looked for within a few days from bankers who have been canvassing the situation.

Westchester Bonds Suffer.

Something of the glory that was once the New Haven's still hangs over the New York, Westchester & Boston, although the Interstate Commerce Commission's report severely criticises the parent company's use of money in the acquisition and construction of the Westchester. The smaller company's bonds had held up against the attacks on the company's position until yesterday, when sales of $21,000 in small lots carried the price down with but one interruption from 65 to 55. Earlier in the year they sold at 83, and at one time last year above 98. The road is doing better now than it was when the bonds were selling close to par, but the quality of the guarantee has been impaired.

Market Contradictions.

It was noticed yesterday, which was one of the hottest days so far this year, that American Ice, which used to go up with the mercury, sold off 2¼ points, and that New Haven, which had a worse arraignment than any road ever before received from the Interstate Commerce Commission, advanced ¼ on the news. Car and Foundry common declined ⅜, while the preferred gained 1¼. Atchison common likewise lost ground while the preferred was going up. Woolworth shares dropped 2 points, while S. S. Kresge, doing a competitive business, advanced 1¼.

Forehanded Borrowers.

About this time each year it is announced from the important Western centres that the crops will be financed at home, the local banks having reached a point where they no longer need to draw funds from New York There is so much idle money this Summer that the agricultural section should be less dependent upon Eastern banks than before, but the big Wall Street institutions are already in receipt of requests for large sums for use by grain buyers at New Orleans, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Minneapolis. The men who need large sums to handle the grain and cotton are about two months earlier than usual in their borrowing this year, which leads bankers to believe that they will not use their credit at home banks until the last, owing partly to the higher rate of interest charged and partly because they expect the money paid out early in the season to be deposited near home, where it can be borrowed later.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Improvement in London After a Poor Opening—Prices Lower in Berlin.

LONDON, July 13.—Money and discount rates were steady today.

With the Paris holiday and with home politics uncertain, the stock market was dull and sagging in the forenoon, and consols lost three-sixteenths. The tendency changed in the afternoon and everything improved. Consols advanced three-eighths from the lowest, but the Vienna Bourse closed weak and caused a reaction in the late trading.

Mexican rails were firm features, owing to the Government order to repair the line outside of Vera Cruz. Marconi shares were flat.

American securities opened around parity. Trading was light and prices moved irregularly until the afternoon, when Berlin selling of Canadian Pacific caused a setback and made the closing easy.

PARIS, July 13.—Today was a holiday on the Bourse and tomorrow, the national fête day, will be another.

BERLIN, July 13.—Trading was quiet and prices closed lower on the Boerse today.

THIRD AVE. ROAD'S SURPLUS IS $641,239

Would Have Been More, Whitridge Declares, but for Trespassing by Heavy Trucks.

THIS WEARS OUT ROADBED

His Annual Report Reveals That Only $40,000 Was Paid for the City Island Line.

A reminder of the unusually heavy snowstorms of last Winter was contained in a statement of earnings for the Third Avenue Railroad, issued yesterday for the year ended June 30. President F. W. Whitridge offered some caustic comment on the free use of the company's tracks by heavy trucks during the storms.

The surplus for the year was $641,239, although for the last half of the period the balance above the interest on the adjustment bonds was only $62,000, or much under the earnings for the corresponding half year in 1913. The reduction was laid at the door of unpropitious weather during much of the six months, beginning with two severe snowstorms in February and March. A large outlay for paving was due in part to the storms.

"The obligations of the street railways in respect to paving have become, with the entire change of the character and volume of the city traffic trespassing upon the rails, very onerous, and the burden is increased by the manner of the city's administration of the streets," says Mr. Whitridge. "It seems to have no conception that the public convenience is served by keeping heavy trucks off the railway tracks. After a snowstorm I have myself counted no less than eighteen vehicles on the tracks in one block, although the snow had been entirely removed in that place from curb to curb. Every pound of coal burned on upper Amsterdam Avenue goes up on the Third Avenue tracks in often overloaded carts, a very large number of which in the Winter time would not get up the hill at all unless the Third Avenue cars pushed them up.

"After and during the snowstorms last Winter the omnibuses of the Fifth Avenue Company occupied portions of our tracks for thirty days without permit, apology, or payment.

"Some months ago, in one single case, seventy-nine-ton girders were hauled over our tracks in Forty-second Street, smashing more than $1,000 worth of manholes and rails. This is all unnecessary and against the interests of the traveling public."

Mr. Whitridge also takes another fling at the Public Service Commission, with which he has been in frequent conflict, by saying:

"It continues to be the policy of this company to charge everything which can be charged against operating expenses, although I understand that the system of accounts prescribed by the Public Service Commission, on the model set by the Interstate Commerce Commission, requires charges against capital which tend, and in the case of the Interstate Commerce Commission may be for the purpose, of making the net earnings appear as large as possible. If this be true, it means, of course, for the steam railways ultimate disaster, although in this company whatever charges be made against capital we shall, I hope, only issue new capital for new things which mean additional earnings.

"We have recently purchased the City Island line for $40,000, which can be completed so as to serve that section of the country to the great satisfaction of the citizens at an additional outlay of about $25,000. This can be done in about thirty days after the requisite permits for the commencement of the work have been issued by the city authorities."

N. Y. EDISON CO. LOSES.

Has No Right to Refuse Service to Any One, Appellate Division Rules.

The Appellate Division, by overruling unanimously an order of the Public Service Commission, has made an important decision concerning the obligations of lighting and power selling corporations toward the public. The opinion was expressed yesterday at the offices of the commission that it would go far to make possible in this city the establishment of independent light and power producing plants.

C. Perceval, a provision merchant of 2 Ninth Avenue, made application on July 13 last year to the New York Edison Company for a supply of electric current for lighting, power, and storage and refrigerating purposes. When the standard forms of contract were sent to him, he struck out the clause forbidding the use of other electric service without the previous written consent of the New York Edison Company, on the ground that he had already contracted for electric current from 7 A. M. to 5:30 P. M. from the Wing Building next door, which had its own private generating plant.

Then the New York Edison Company refused to supply current for only certain hours during the day, and, says the Appellate Division, placed "itself squarely upon the position that it was under no obligation to furnish electric current to any one unless that person agreed to take from the company all the current which it required." Mr. Perceval applied to the Public Service Commission, but it gave a decision in favor of the corporation, and it was from its ruling that the appeal to the Appellate Division was taken.

This court has now decided that, in consideration of the privileged position of the New York Edison Company, not the least of which is the right to use the public streets and highways for carrying its conduits, it is bound to serve impartially every member of the community who demands its services. It may, the court acknowledges, establish reasonable regulations, which the consumer must observe, but the requirement that a consumer must take all his electricity from one company or receive none "is not in any proper sense a regulation respecting the use of the service, but is a purely arbitrary attempt on the part of the company to insure to itself a monopoly of furnishing electrical current."

If that were permissible, the court points out, the company could also refuse to furnish current to a consumer who was manufacturing for himself part of the current he needed, and this had already been severely condemned upon grounds of public policy. Moreover, if the company had established the fact that the hours during which the supply of current was asked of it were those in which the greatest demands were made upon its services, this condition could have been met by making a special rate for the service.

So the case was sent back to the Public Service Commission to make such orders as might be proper, and $50 costs and disbursements were allowed to Mr. Perceval.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

A very good proportion of Wall Street's business for the day of United States Steel and Reading was handled on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, the sales of Steel amounting to 13,600 shares and of Reading 7,420 shares. There was a brief period of firmness early in the day, followed by hesitation and irregularity. Then, when publication was made of the Interstate Commerce Commission's report on the New Haven, the whole market broke sharply. In the closing trading prices rallied somewhat from the lowest. An influence which stimulated short covering were reiterated reports of the proximity of the rate decision.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The disturbance that was over the Upper Mississippi region Sunday is now central over Lower Michigan and moving slowly eastward. During the last twenty-four hours it caused showers in the region of the great lakes, the Ohio Valley, and the Middle Atlantic States.

Scattered showers are also reported from the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and the North Rocky Mountain region. Warm weather continued in the Lower and Middle Mississippi Valleys, the Plains States, and the interior of the Gulf States, although readings in these regions were not quite as high as they were on Saturday and Sunday.

The weather has become considerably cooler over the North Rocky Mountain region and the North Pacific States, while temperatures are near the seasonable average in the region of the great lakes and the Atlantic States.

Indications are that the disturbance that is now over Lower Michigan will move slowly eastward, be attended by showers Tuesday over the Atlantic States, the extreme Upper Ohio Valley and the lower lake region, and on Wednesday in the New England States.

In the upper lake region, the Mississippi Valley, and the Gulf States and the Southwest the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday, while in the Northwest it will be unsettled with scattered rains.

Temperature will be lower Tuesday and Wednesday in the Northwest and will change little elsewhere during the next forty-eight hours.

Winds for Tuesday and Wednesday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coast will be moderate variable. mostly south and southeast; South Atlantic Coast, moderate variable, mostly south and southwest.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York, Southern New England, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Cloudy, probably thunder showers Tuesday. Wednesday, probably fair.

Western New York—Showers Tuesday. Wednesday, probably fair.

Northern New England—Increasing cloudiness Tuesday, probably followed by showers. Wednesday, showers; moderate southeast and south winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1913.	1914.		1913.	1914.

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 78; for the corresponding date last year it was 76; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 74.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 75; at 8 P. M. it was 74. Maximum temperature, 85 degrees at 1:55 P. M.; minimum, 72 degrees at 4 A. M. Humidity, 69 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 63 per cent. at 8 P. M.

RESORTS. BERMUDA.

Here are the reasons why you should GO TO BERMUDA on your vacation—

Short Distance. Bermuda is only 45 hours from New York—less than two days—via magnificent ocean steamers—safe—swift—delightful—which sail every few days through balmy Summer seas in what seems like an all-too-short delightful yachting cruise. Calls are made at St. George and Hamilton, the two principal ports of Bermuda.

Low Temperature. The average Summer temperature in Bermuda is but 79°, these figures being officially endorsed by a department of the Bermuda Government. Its location is only semi-tropical, being only 200 miles away from the Gulf Stream. Days are clear and balmy, the sunshine being tempered with refreshing ocean breezes; nights are cool and sleep-inducing.

Varied Sports. Bermuda offers all well-known land and water sports and many that are new and novel. You may bathe, sail and fish in crystal clear water; ride, drive and wheel on the world's finest white coral roadways, and indulge in tennis, golf, baseball and cricket to your heart's content.

Natural Marvels. Wonderful natural crystal caves, which have been centuries in forming, are tunneled in Bermuda's hillsides. These monster caverns are electrically lighted, and the richness of the gorgeous settings as revealed by the glittering mass of crystal stalactites causes visitors to gasp with astonishment at the marvels of Nature's workings. Visitors are also fascinated in viewing Bermuda's famous sea gardens. Think of gazing into crystal clear water at the floor of the ocean, 30 to 40 feet below, and seeing through glass-bottomed boats wonderfully formed, rainbow-tinted fish, disporting in their native element and gliding about among the vari-colored seafans, brainstones, and other curious coral formations too numerous to mention! Aside from the thrills they afford, visits to Bermuda's caves and sea gardens are as educational as they are fascinating.

Low Cost Tours. 8-day tours, all expenses included, range from $42.50 to $62.50, according to the location of stateroom on the Steamer. Tours include every expense, covering steamship accommodations, best hotels (American plan) and all the usual interesting sidetrips—caves, sea gardens, drives, etc. If you have never visited Bermuda, plan to go there this Summer on your vacation. Neither the time nor the cost is prohibitive, and you will enjoy a vacation which is not only more unusual than any you have ever heretofore taken, but one which you will talk of for years to come.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Franklin Pettit Adds Long Sought Plot to West Eighty-sixth Street Frontage—Ninth Avenue Sale—Bonwit Teller Company Leases New Fifth Avenue Building—Good Bronx Market.

An interesting deal on the West Side which reveals the triumph of patience in the accumulation of a large plot for improvement was closed yesterday in the sale of the four-story residence at 316 West Eighty-sixth Street by Stuard Hirschman. The house occupies the centre of the block between West End Avenue and Riverside Drive, on the south side, covering a lot 21 by 102.2. Franklin Pettit, President of the Realty Company of America has owned several houses on each side of the Hirschman dwelling and for over a year he has been endeavoring to add 316 to his ownership in order to round out a large frontage for a projected apartment house operation. Mr. Hirschman has occupied the house for his home and he did not wish to sell. He has at last, however, succumbed to the overtures made to him, but it is understood that Mr. Pettit has been obliged to pay a larger sum for that plot than was necessary for any of the other houses.

With this acquisition Mr. Pettit now controls a plot fronting 144 feet, taking in the seven residences from 310 to 322 West Eighty-sixth Street inclusive. The Hirschman house is assessed at $55,000. The deal was closed by the firm of Osgood Pell and Clark T. Chambers, who have been accumulating the plot for over a year. In the present deal A. V. Amy & Co. were associated. A twelve-story apartment house will be erected on the entire plot in the near future.

Ninth Avenue Purchase.

Lewine & Kempner have purchased from Julia Colburg the three-story frame building at 736 Ninth Avenue, 42 feet south of Fiftieth Street. The plot is 22.6 by 80 and it has been owned by the family of the seller for 52 years. It will be improved by the buyers. S. Albert was the broker.

Buys Church Site in Harlem.

The purchase of a Harlem site by the Church Extension Committee of the Presbytery of New York for a new church for the St. James Presbyterian church, previously announced, has been closed. The site bought is the plot 50 by 99.11 at 59 and 61 West 137th Street. The church is maintained by a colored congregation, and the old building at 355 to 359 West Fifty-first Street was recently sold to Henry Claman. The Harlem plot was bought from Paul Abelson. The brokers were the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Co.

Bonwit, Teller Co. Leases New Building.

The new eleven-story building being erected by Mrs. Elizabeth M. Anderson at 415 Fifth Avenue and extending around both corners to 8 East Thirty-eighth Street and 3, 5, and 7 East Thirty-seventh Street, has been leased by Bonwit, Teller & Co. for eighteen years. The firm now occupies the eleven-story structure on the southwest corner of Thirty-eighth Street, erected for them by Mrs. Anderson and adjoining the new building. When completed, the firm will occupy the second, third, and fourth floors of the new structure. The Fifth Avenue store and part of the Thirty-seventh Street store frontage has been leased to J. J. Slater. The new building will front 25 feet on both the avenue and Thirty-eighth Street and 66.6 feet on Thirty-seventh Street. In the present lease Frank D. Veiller was the broker, while Mrs. Anderson was represented by Masten & Nichols, attorneys.

Bronx Borough.

Simon G. Katzen has purchased the two two-family houses at 1,543 and 1,547 Morris Avenue, on a plot 50 by 75, facing Claremont Park, and a vacant plot, 51 by 116, on the north side of 198th Street, 51 feet west of the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, which will be improved with an apartment house.

Schano & Co. have sold for Daniel Lynch Lot 144 of the Lott T. Hunt estate; also, for J. J. Gallagher, the two-family house at 1,726 Van Brunt Street, and for George A. Devereaux the two-family house at 1,873 Wallace Avenue.

The plot of about two and a half lots on the northeast corner of Crotona Avenue and 170th Street has been sold by Dr. Louis Scheinberg to a builder, who will erect a five-story apartment house. The plot is irregular, fronting 25 feet on the avenue by 108 feet on the street.

The five-story flat at 600 East 141st Street, on a plot 50 by 95, between St. Ann's and Cypress Avenues, has been sold to an investor by the Henry Morgenthau Company. L. Kashare was the broker.

The triangular plot, 125 by 125 by 100, at the junction of Aqueduct and Merriam Avenues, was given in part payment by Mrs. Emma C. Smith to the Podgur Realty Company for the five-story flats on the block front, south side, of 163d Street, between Intervale Avenue and Kelly Street, the sale of which was recently reported. The brokers were Axelrad & Feinberg and Max Feldman.

Brooklyn.

The three five-story apartment houses at 402, 404, and 406 Gold Street, near Fulton Street, on plot 75 by 100, have been sold by Philip Steinman & Son for Dr. Daniel K. Johnson to an investor.

The two five-story apartments on plot 125 by 125 on the northwest corner of Hewes Street and Lee Avenue have been sold by Marks Bros. and M. J. Govendo for Isaac Haft to P. H. McElroy.

PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY.
CITY SURPLUS LANDS.

MESSRS. RICHARD ELLIS and SON are favoured with instructions to offer by TENDER, to be delivered at the PORT AUTHORITY'S Offices on THURSDAY, the 15th day of October next, in SEVEN LOTS,
ON BUILDING LEASES for 99 years,
THE EXTENSIVE SURPLUS LANDS surrounding the magnificent Block of Offices being erected for the Port of London Authority, consisting of SITES having a total area of about 50,000 SQUARE FEET,
forming part of an island Freehold Estate fronting TRINITY-SQUARE, SEETHING-LANE, CRUTCHED-FRIARS, and SAVAGE-GARDENS, intersected by several fine new Thoroughfares, within the Shipping, East India, and Colonial Produce, Rubber, Corn, Tea, Wine, and Provision Markets, a development that probably eclipses in extent any other remodelling that has ever occurred in the City of London, offering an opportunity to any of the leading English, Colonial, American, or Continental Business Houses and Trading Companies of securing Sites for the erection of Buildings for their own accommodation or speculation as is rarely met with. A License for the sale of Spirits is attached to part of the Site, which is a valuable element that could be utilized by any of the great Refreshment Contractors in the erection of any Buildings, a part or the whole of which could be advantageously treated as a first-class Restaurant or Hotel, for which there must be a good opening in such a situation, as well as offering, amongst other potentialities, an opportunity for the erection of a fine Hall available for any of the smaller City Guilds for entertaining or as a Meeting Place for Shareholders of some of the great Commercial Companies. The Authority would be prepared to negotiate for the sale of the Freehold of the Sites.

Tenders to be delivered in sealed envelopes, which will be supplied for the purpose, to the Secretary, Port of London Authority, 109, Leadenhall-street, London, E. C., on Thursday, the 15th day of October, 1914.

Particulars of the Property, together with Forms of Tender, conditions, and plans, to be had of Messrs. RICHARD ELLIS and SON, Surveyors and Land Agents, 45, Fenchurch-street, London, E. C., England.

WHITMAN 'LETTER' SAID TO BE UNSIGNED

Progressives Think They Have Campaign Material Against Candidate.

DUELL SILENT ALL DAY

Four Hundred-Word Repudiation of Barnes Said to be in Safe at National Headquarters.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 13.—Stories published in New York this morning to the effect that District Attorney Charles S. Whitman had written a letter to the Whitman Non-Partisan League, in which he repudiated William Barnes, Jr., the Chairman of the Republican State Committee, as an objectionable boss, were received with great interest today at Oyster Bay. Col. Roosevelt commented that he couldn't imagine how such a report got out. He seemed to enjoy the situation.

There is a very strong feeling, which amounts almost to a certainty among those who are watching the situation here, that despite Mr. Whitman's denial a copy of a letter which purports to be of the Whitman authorship, and in which Mr. Barnes is roundly scored, will be made public within a few days by the Progressives. This letter is about 400 words long, and is written in the first person. It is the one, it is understood, which, the New York reports have it, was submitted to Col. Roosevelt when his support was sought for Mr. Whitman. This letter, it is said, is being kept safely under lock and key in the safe at the national headquarters of the Progressive Party, in the Forty-second Street Building.

The fact that Charles H. Duell, Jr., organizer of the Whitman Non-Partisan League, who, it is known, on several occasions sought the support of Col. Roosevelt for Mr. Whitman, kept silence today is creating much interest, in view of the latest development in the Gubernatorial campaign. If, as now seems probable, the letter is made public, there is a strong feeling that Mr. Whitman may repudiate Mr. Duell as well as the alleged Whitman letter. Mr. Whitman has said flatly that he never wrote a letter to the league or to Mr. Duell about Barnes. The letter under discussion, it is understood, is addressed to the Executive Committee of the Whitman Non-Partisan League.

One version of the origin of the alleged Whitman letter is this:

Two weeks ago Mr. Duell was at Newport, where Mr. Whitman has his Summer home, for the week-end. There the question of obtaining the Progressive indorsement for Mr. Whitman was discussed, as well as the matter of holding Col. Roosevelt in check in connection with the bitter attack which it was then understood that Col. Roosevelt would make upon the District Attorney if he was the Republican nominee in the State campaign. Duell has been a tireless worker to bring about an agreement between Whitman and Roosevelt, and it is understood that he broached the question of a statement from Mr. Whitman in the form of a letter to the league, which could be brought to Col. Roosevelt's attention and perhaps throw oil on the troubled waters. The story has it that the letter was then prepared, but does not go so far as to state that the signature of Mr. Whitman was attached. This version, however, is not confirmed by Col. Roosevelt.

The copy of the alleged Whitman letter at Progressive headquarters does not bear Mr. Whitman's signature, although it contains his statement that he did not consult Barnes in making appointments as District Attorney and other statements which could scarcely be attributed to any other than Mr. Whitman. The attack upon Mr. Barnes in this copy is an unqualified rebuke for Barnes.

In view of all this, some sort of a statement from Mr. Duell is being awaited with interest. What several close observers of the situation want to know is Duell's reason for remaining silent when he has been brought into the controversy in such a prominent light. If, as Progressive sources assert, he acted as the agent who, it is asserted, consulted Roosevelt after a conference with Whitman, his version of how the alleged letter came to be framed, if it was framed at all, and whether it received the indorsement of Mr. Whitman before its submission to Col. Roosevelt, is looked upon as of the highest importance, in view of Mr. Whitman's unqualified denial.

There has been a report current today that Mr. Duell visited Mr. Whitman as late as Saturday at Newport to discuss the chances of holding Col. Roosevelt in restraint and obtaining Progressive support for the District Attorney.

The importance to Col. Roosevelt of the situation now created is considered great. Mr. Whitman, by his denial that he attacked Barnes, it is said, will give the Colonel an excellent opportunity to attack Whitman as a Barnes man. It is just the position in which Col. Roosevelt wanted to place Mr. Whitman and there is a strong belief that the District Attorney's denial of the report that he had written a letter repudiating Barnes will be used as campaign material in an anti-boss fight in the State. Even if Whitman repudiates Duell, should a letter purporting to be written by the District Attorney be produced, the Progressives feel that what has occurred has helped them materially.

It is understood here today that Col. Roosevelt has made no direct repudiation of ex-State Senator Harvey D. Hinman, although developments have shown that there is apparently now not the slightest chance of Mr. Hinman receiving the Progressive indorsement for Governor.

PERKINS JOKES ABOUT IT.

Robinson Knows Nothing of Alleged Letter—Duell Keeps Mum.

If District Attorney Charles S. Whitman wrote a letter to Charles H. Duell, Jr., head of the Whitman Non-Partisan League, repudiating Willam Barnes, as was given out from Progressive sources on Sunday night, its existence remained a deep secret yesterday. It was said that the alleged document is safely tucked away in the big iron safe at Progressive headquarters, to be used for political purposes whenever Col. Roosevelt sees fit.

Chairman Barnes was out of the city yesterday and at State headquarters in Thirty-ninth Street his return is awaited with interest. It was said that he will be back to-day. The Progressive leaders in the city, including George W. Perkins and Theodore Douglas Robinson, flatly said they didn't know anything about such a letter, and didn't believe there was such a one in existence.

"I don't know anything about such a letter, and the story is a great surprise to me," said Mr. Perkins. "In justice to Mr. Whitman—and Mr. Barnes—I think that it should be stated that Mr. Barnes really has not murdered his mother-in-law."

"Just what were the charges Mr. Whitman made against Mr. Barnes?" Mr. Perkins was asked.

"All that Mr. Whitman has had to say about Mr. Barnes," said Mr. Perkins, "is confined to the public prints, so far as I know, and if you can find anything against Barnes in what he has said to the newspapers you will have to look sharp."

"The story is that the Progressives have an anti-Barnes statement written by Mr. Whitman locked up in their safe at the national headquarters," Mr. Perkins was told.

"If that is so, what you need is a safe blower," replied Mr. Perkins, with a laugh.

Mr. Perkins seemed to be entirely satisfied with the situation. When asked if he would comment further regarding it, his only reply was:

"It is very interesting."

Mr. Duell, the cause of all the commotion, remained carefully in the background.

Mr. Whitman was expected to arrive in the city last night, but it was learned that he would not get here until this morning.

ROOSEVELT FOR THE WOMEN.

Would Give Them Places in Constitutional Convention.

Theodore Roosevelt has written a letter to Miss Lillian D. Wald, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Women's Temporary Committee which is fighting to have women represented in the Constitutional Convention to be held in this State next year. He said he was strongly in favor of the plan. The Colonel said he hoped the Progressive Party would insist upon the election of women delegates.

"It seems to me," wrote Mr. Roosevelt, "that any discussion as to whether women are eligible to hold public office in this State is really academic, in view of the fact that, thanks to the change in the will of the people, many women do at the present moment hold public office in this State.

"For example, the State, through its Supreme Court, has decided, in effect, that women can be Notary Publics, although the position of Notary Public is a constitutional and not merely a ministerial office. Now, the making or revising of a Constitution is a fundamental act on the part of the State, and there can, in my judgment, be no limitation to the eligibility of any preson to represent the people in such convention except those which the people themselves have inserted in the existing Constitution under which the convention is called.

"There are at present at least fifty women serving on the boards of State asylums, hospitals, reformatories, industrial schools, and special schools for the blind and crippled. There are two women on the State Commission for the Blind, and two on the Widowed Mothers' Pension Commission. In our private charitable work, women stand ahead of men in the importance of the functions they perform.

"There are 800,000 women wage earners in New York City alone, and this fact is recognized by the Bureau of Factory Inspection under which sixteen women are inspectors. The majority of teachers in our public schools are women. Surely there can be no more important work than this of educating the next generation.

"Women are very heavy investors. It has recently been shown that in 252 railways and industrial corporations which were invested in there were 310,000 women shareholders.

"A mere consideration of the above facts is enough to show that in the first place women are now serving as public officials and in the next place that they have vital interests which must be considered as in some degree apart from the interests of men.

"It is to my mind rank injustice to fail to have women represented in the Constitutional Convention. Moreover, many of the women can give information and assistance such as few men can give in matters in which men themselves are primarily interested. I earnestly hope the Progressive Party will give a full representation of women on its Constitutional ticket."

WOMEN TO MEET COLONEL.

Progressive Workers to Give a Luncheon at Colony Club Tomorrow.

Theodore Roosevelt will be the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Colony Club tomorrow, where leading woman members of the Progressive Party over the State will assemble for a conference.

This is the first time that women of any party have ever assembled for formal conference with their national chief, and it is expected that there will be a demonstraiton of welcome to the returned explorer and promises of loyal support.

The conference is confined to women who either hold official position in the party or who are active workers. Delegates to the Constitutional Convention will be selected, and matters of interest to the women of the State will be discussed.

Among the women workers to be present are Miss Frances A. Kellor, Chief of the National Progressive Service; Dr. Katherine Bement Davis, Commissioner of Correction, N. Y. City; Miss Lillian D. Wald of the Henry Street Settlement, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Vice President State Progressive Service, and sister to Col. Roosevelt; Mrs. A. Gordon Norris, Vice President State Progressive Service, and Miss Anne Rhodes, Secretary and Treasurer of the State Progressive Service, and representative on the State Progressive Committee from the First District.

Other district representatives who will be present are Mrs. Robert Elder, Second District; Mrs. Rudolph Muller, Third District; Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, Fifth District; Miss Mabel Yeomans, Sixth District; Mrs. J. B. Warner, Seventh District; Mrs. Frank Shuler, Eighth District, and Mrs. William Vananmee, Ninth District.

Mrs. William G. Brown will represent the Fifteenth Assembly District of New York, and Miss Mary E. Dreier an Assembly district in Brooklyn. Other workers who will attend the luncheon are Mrs. Frank Bliss, County Chairman Erie County Women; Mrs. A. J. Eno, County Chairman Queens County Women; Miss Bertha Rembaugh, County Chairman New York County Women; Mrs. Dexter T. Rumsey, Buffalo; Miss E. D. Spring, Miss A. M. Spring, Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, Mrs. Walter Weyl, Miss Cornelia E. Bryce, Miss Alice Carpenter, Mrs. Edward Dreier, Mrs. Arthur Scribner, Miss Ruth Morgan, Mrs. Grant La Farge, and Miss Florence Guernsey.

SUBWAY ENDANGERS 800 FINE ELM TREES

AID OF EXPERTS SOUGHT

Prof. Toumey of Yale Offers Suggestion by Which He Believes the Trees Can Be Saved.

Eight hundred fine grown elm trees are in danger of their lives through the construction of the Eastern Parkway subway. As a great swath has been cut through the trees in Union Square in Manhattan, which is never likely to be adequately repaired; so two rows of trees from Washington Avenue to Buffalo Avenue, a distance of about two miles, must be destroyed, unless some measures can be devised to look after them. The subway is designed to come within four feet of the surface of the Parkway and to approach within five feet of the trunks of the elms, and at the two stations will actually extend beyond the lines which the trees form.

Park Commissioner Ingersoll of Brooklyn has given a good deal of attention to this danger, and announced yesterday that he still had hopes that something might be done to save the trees. He has taken the matter up with the Public Service Commission, and has called into consultation tree experts of national reputation, including Henry Hicks of Westbury and Prof. J. W. Toumey of the Forest School of Yale University. From the latter he has received a report, which has been forwarded to the commission, and it is hoped that the third solution of the difficulty will be adopted.

Prof. Toumey describes the trees as in middle life and for the most part in fair condition, although their growth has been slow as a result of the lack of fertility of the soil and the absence of adequate moisture. A few show dead limbs at the top and are on the decline, but the professor believes that there is no reason why the trees should not remain in good condition for city trees for another half century.

The first plan he suggests would be the lowering of the subway to six feet from the surface and to construct it in such a way as not to disturb the soil within ten feet of the boles of the trees. This would not injure them in any way, the professor says, as all their roots are in the six feet of upper soil and none of importance spread for more than ten feet from the boles. Even where the stations stretch out beyond the rest of the subway, if the excavation were six feet below the surface, it would not hurt the trees, provided the surface soil were loosened, fertilized, and kept properly watered. If, however, the stations would cause the excavation to come nearer the surface than six feet, the professor declared it would be useless to try to save the trees and they had better come out at these spots at once.

In the same way he admits that if it is impossible to lower the subway it may be best for the Park Commissioner to make up his mind to their complete destruction. It would be a saving, the professor admits, as there would be no need for care in the excavating, and two lines of young trees could be planted as soon as the subway was complete, so that uniformity would be preserved. But he says it would entail a great loss to the city, and he believes that by the third solution he suggests the elms could be preserved.

By this method the subway would be kept at only four feet below the surface and the excavation would extend to approximately five feet from the boles of the trees. This would mean that they would lose from one-third to one-fifth of their root systems, and the soil around them would be exposed to an abnormal drying out. Without care this would inevitably mean the destruction of the entire rows, but Prof. Toumey believes that these adverse conditions may be counteracted.

First, he would see that the soil should not be disturbed within four or five feet of the boles of the trees, and that the curbing should be put in place with the least possible disturbance of soil of the side walls. If it is necessary to cut back within two or three feet of the trees, they might as well be cut down at once. Then he would thoroughly loosen and cultivate between the trees and at least for ten feet from the line of the trees toward the curb.

If this were done Prof. Toumey does not believe that there would be any necessity for losing a single tree, and he points out that a competent expert should be employed in a special charge of the trees during the construction of the subway with adequate help and apparatus, and that the cost of his services might properly be charged up to the cost of subway construction.

PROPERTY BACK TO MOTHER

Special to The New York Times.

LODI, N. J., July 13.—Mrs. Mary Sisco, formerly Mary Soper, who twenty-two years ago gained fame as "The Bloomer Girl of Lodi," when she wore bloomers in the streets, must return the Soper property, worth $25,000, deeded to her by her mother seventeen years ago.

Mrs. Soper, who is 93 years old, was living in the homestead which was also occupied by Mrs. Sisco when the deed was made. Six months ago Mrs. Soper got out of a second story window, went to the police station, and told Chief Davis that her daughter had locked her in. The police took her to the home of another daughter, Mrs. Alonzo Butterworth, in Garfield, where she has lived since.

Soon after she joined Mrs. Butterworth, Mrs. Soper applied to the Court of Chancery to have the deed set aside. Former Gov. Franklin Fort was appointed to take testimony and he has decided that undue influence was used by Mrs. Sisco.

NIAGARA FIRM IN TROUBLE.

Receivers for U. S. Light and Heating Company.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 13.—Frederick R. Humpage, one of the Board of Managers of the United States Light and Heating Company, applied to Judge Hazel in Federal Court here today for the appointment of receivers for the company, which has a plant in Buffalo, but has its headquarters in Niagara Falls.

Mr. Humpage does not contend that the company is insolvent, but asserts that the Board of Directors is practicing fraud in the operation of the business that will result in its being insolvent within a limited time.

The company is capitalized at $16,000,000 and has assets valued at $3,000,000, according to Adolph Rebadow, who represented Mr. Humpage and the other creditors in their request for the receivership.

Among the Directors of the United States Light and Heating Company are: William Hawley, Walter S. Cromwell, Charles A. Starbuck, J. Allen Smith, Theodore P. Shonts, and John A. Sleicher.

Judge Hazel appointed A. Henry Ackermann, Guy M. Walker, and James O. Moore as receivers.

CAFE BOULEVARD
Broadway at 41st Street

The mere location of a Restaurant is of little importance.

It may move from one end of the city to the other, but so long as it lives up to its name and fame of doing some one thing or things better than any other Restaurant its patrons will continue to wear a pathway to its doors.

The Luncheon at 60c and the Dinner at $1.00 are examples of Cafe Boulevard quality and service.

Dancing in the Grille every evening from dinner to closing time.
